Phase I of construction nears completion

By Sean Flood
Staff writer

The University is taking a major step toward improving the campus, with an ambitious construction project to develop the College Avenue and Kirkman Avenue entrances and consolidate the campus.

The project originated as a suggestion of Dr. Jacob Martinson in 1985 when he became president of the University. Martinson recommended the rerouting of Montlieu (now Kirkman) Avenue. The project actually began in November of 1993 with the rerouting of Montlieu Avenue.

The first phase includes the construction of two new entrances to the campus. Sidewalks will replace Montlieu Avenue. Two new entrances and two new circular traffic patterns are also being constructed. Each circular intersection accommodates 20 parking spaces.

The first phase will be complete within the month.

The third phase will probably be the construction of a building, which may house the fine arts department. The location has not been decided.

Epperson says the rerouting of Montlieu Avenue and the development project has three goals—making the campus safe for foot traffic, consolidating the campus and beautifying the school's environment.

The plan was altered from its original form to preserve trees that would have otherwise been removed.

Board Chairman George Erath addresses the Founders Day Celebration dinner at the High Point Country Club.

High Point University unveiled a $41 million fundraising campaign Tuesday night during the Founders Day Celebration Dinner at High Point Country Club. The fund-raiser, to enhance endowment, building and renovation projects, will be conducted through the year 1999—the University's 75th anniversary.

The campaign money is earmarked for various university goals. According to the Founders Campaign prospectus, there are two primary categories for fundraising: building and renovation projects and endowment priorities.

A new fine arts building at a cost of $7 million tops the list of building and renovation projects. Also included in this category, and the projected costs, are: development of student housing ($2 million), an academic/ business school building ($4 million), the renovation of Cooke Hall ($2 million), renovation of the Campus Center ($2 million), addition of a fourth floor to Haworth Hall ($2 million). Hayworth Chapel expansion/enhancements ($1 million), the construction of an auxiliary gymnasium ($2 million), expansion of the Winston-Salem campus ($500 thousand) and more campus gardens, walkways and lighting ($1 million).

On the endowment priorities side there are: undergraduate and graduate scholarships ($10 million), faculty development funds ($2 million), increase of library holdings ($1 million), graduate program development ($2 million) and undesignated special project funds ($2.5 million).

George Erath, chairman of the board of trustees, reported at the dinner, "We are well on our way to achieving this goal ($41 million). As of tonight, we have received over $12 million in pledges for the Founders Campaign." Erath served as master of ceremonies at the dinner, which nearly 300 people attended.

Jacob Martinson Jr.,president of the university, addressed the audience. "The possibilities for continued growth of the University are tremendous," said Martinson. "It is our sincere wish that our friends will continue to support our efforts.

"We also hope that new friends and neighbors will recognize what a valuable asset our University is to the community, and they will contribute to its future and to those who give us a reason to exist: our students." Martinson added.

The University has formed a Major Gifts Committee to steer the fundraising campaign. Carter T. Holbrook

Captain Kangaroo gets serious about values

By Steve Steffek
Editor-in-Chief

On Monday, the Junior League of High Point hosted "An Evening With The Captain," presenting Bob Keeshan, formerly known as Captain Kangaroo.

Keeshan spoke about the importance of child advocacy. He discussed the financial and emotional benefits of helping children early in their lives. He stated that providing mothers with adequate prenatal care can help avoid problems for their children later in life.

"Dan Quayle, President Clinton and I are strange bedfellows about that," Keeshan said when talking about his stand on family values.

Keeshan played the title character on the successful children's program "The Captain Kangaroo Show," winning three Emmy awards with many other awards and honors for his efforts. Since the show is not currently filming, Keeshan spends his time going around the country lecturing about the importance of child advocacy.

He has spoken to Congress numerous times about the need for more emphasis to be put on the needs of children by the government.

Time for Republican grifters to place bets

GOP hopefuls begin jockeying for '96 presidential nomination

By Clinton Barkdoll
Editorial Editor

The 1996 presidential election is not exactly the most pressing topic on the minds of many voters. The story is quite different for pundits and ambitious politicians. Ever mindful of testing the waters, many presidential hopefuls are already jockeying for position and making trips to Iowa and New Hampshire, the first primary states.

In spite of Bill Clinton's low approval ratings and continual snafus, he will undoubtedly be the Democrats' nominee in '96. The real speculation is surrounding the Republicans. The GOP is in quite a quagmire for '96—polls show Clinton may be vulnerable, but Republicans lack a clear mission and candidate to capitalize on the situation.

Following is a list of possible Republican candidates and their odds of receiving the '96 nomination:

2:1 JACK KEMP—Through all the hoopla and guessing, here is the guy to watch. At one time considered the favorite among Republicans, Kemp has fallen out of favor recently for insignificant reasons. Bottom line, he is still the most viable candidate in the field. After his disastrous campaign in '88, Kemp has learned his lessons, has the resources and is ready to run.

3:1 DICK ARMEY—This Texas congressman is well liked among party leaders and could be the GOP panacea. Surprisingly, the media have grossly overlooked Armey as a legitimate candidate. If he wants the nomination, he'd be very difficult to beat. Armey may be too prominent in the House, though, making Republicans reluctant to encourage him to run for president. He is a fighter and the kind of moderate candidate that would pose a formidable fight for Clinton. If not a presidential hopeful, Dick Armey would be a perfect choice for VP (remember--he's from Texas).

4:1 DAN QUAYLE—His recent "comeback" was clearly a test of his popularity. Although well connected within the party, Quayle alienated many key players with his tell-all book (released earlier this year). Furthermore, insiders rumble of Quayle's inability to raise sufficient money to run a good race. Quayle will also be vexed by his image as vice-president. This stigma alone may keep him from running. Voters aren't ready yet for a Quayle presidency.

6:1 BOB DOLE—Probably the most logical Republican candidate, but he is not electable. History proves that Dole is a political deadbeat outside of Washington and Kansas. Party support is there for Dole, but the voters will never buy his pitch. He has too many obstacles and enemies to win the nomination, let alone the presidency.

10:1 DICK CHENEY—Health questions will keep him out. Cheney would have trouble mustering enough party support to run. He and wife. Lynne, appear to be more interested in Wyoming politics for the time being (both are happy on the lecture circuit as well). He doesn't have the staying power to run.

10:1 ARLEN SPECTER—This Pennsylvania senator recently formed an exploratory committee to investigate his chances as a presidential candidate. He would certainly have the money and adequate party support, but may be quelled by women's groups (Specter was one of the lead "grillers" of Anita Hill during the Clarence Thomas hearings). The Anita Hill issue nearly cost Specter his Senate seat and will keep him from the White House too. Specter has recently been breaking from party lines on certain issues, a likely indication he will soon announce his candidacy.

15:1 BILL BENNETT—He severely lacks name recognition. Although he held prominent positions in past GOP administrations, few Americans know who Bill Bennett is. He is smart enough to realize this and will probably not run.

25:1 PAT BUCHANAN—Too far to the right to get the nomination. He may be effective, however, in moving the Republican platform to the right. In the end, though, he'll never get elected. Voters (including many Republicans) are fed up with Buchanan's fundamentalist preaching. The recent publication of the Haldeman diaries is also somewhat damaging to Buchanan.

50:1 RUSH LIMBAUGH—Limbaugh wields considerable influence over millions of radio listeners and television viewers. Many GOP elite fear a Limbaugh candidacy could cause party divisiveness and threaten more "mainstream" candidates. But Limbaugh is happy where he is and may not last in the campaign arena. Don't sell him short; if not a candidate, he might be a convention speaker and you can bet he'll have plenty to say.

100:1 COLIN POWELL—Who said he is even a Republican? His stratospheric approval ratings would summarily drop when voters learn of his stance on many controversial issues. Republican grifters have been spreading wishful thinking rumors that Powell is their man in '96. Don't bet the ranch on a Powell candidacy.

1000:1 DAVID EISENHOWER—This grandson of Ike could be a sleeper. He covets the presidency more than he leads people to believe. Currently living in Pennsylvania. Eisenhower has been writing books and giving occasional lectures. He has made numerous statements which are very open for interpretation concerning his aspiration for political office. His big name recognition probably wouldn't go too far. Unlikely to run in '96, but watch for him in the future (maybe a Governor Eisenhower?).

1 million:1 RICHARD PETTY—Ha! If North Carolina Republicans are desperate enough. maybe Governor Petty in '96.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Students defend actions at party

Speaking as students at High Point university who were at the "animal house" on Montlieu Avenue, we are appalled at the preposterous attacks made by Mr. Charles Gillespie against High Point University and its students, in The High Point Enterprise. Mr. Gillespie's comment, "... illiterate actions of so-called college students," is a blatant degredation of both HPU and its hard-working students who sacrificed much to be here.

We assure Mr. Gillespie that the HPU admissions office requires that all prospective HPU students be literate.

We do not deny underaged drinking was taking place. However, one cannot be so naive as to believe that underaged drinking does not occur in the college environment. This type of behavior exists coast to coast, campus to campus, not just at HPU. As for the trash in the yard, that is precisely where it was, in the yard, not strewn throughout the neighborhood as Mr. Gillespie would seem to indicate.

As we recall, the trash was picked up and disposed of the very next day. Mr. Gillespie should commend the residents of the house as most of their time is occupied by the rigors of being full-time students as well as working multiple jobs.

We must question the integrity of one who begrudges hardworking students relaxing on the weekend after a tough week of classes.

Sincerely,
Jason Miller and Don Bryan

What would Mr. Ed say about Charreada?

By Steve Steffek
Editor-in-Chief

Anyone who has read Jonathan Swift's Gulliver's Travels, remembers Gulliver's encounter with a breed of horses, the Houyhnhnms, who are more intelligent than the humans that they rule. The Yahoos, as the humans are called, often prove their idiocy to Gulliver by running around unbathed and acting uncivilized. Nowadays, when we hear a story like this, we think, "Oh, that's just a work of fiction." But Swift may have stumbled onto something.

A while back on 20/20, the lead story was about the Mexican rodeo, called the Charreada. The main purpose of this event is to be the best a tripping horses with a rope. The charro, or rodeo competitor, stands in one area and throws a lasso around a horse's front or hind legs as it comes by, pulling the horse down. This often causes painful external cuts, gouges, broken bones and damage to the eyes and bones. It is defended as a cultural experience and considered legal in the United States. The American rodeo, also harmful to animals, at least puts the participants, rather than the animals, at risk. Somehow, I fail to se the sportsmanship involved in either event.

The program brought the whole concept of animal cruelty to mind. Most people consider animals as altogether less intelligent than humans simply because they can't speak or build a spaceship. Heck, there are many humans who can't perform either of these tasks either. Previously. animal cruelty has been hidden from society. However, as it becomes more prevalent, it seems to gain acceptance. When I was a kid, my father and I would try to fool my dog, Missy, by pretending to throw the bone just to see her run. When she did it, we would laugh and think, "Oh what a stupid dog." When I think back, I ask, "What was the purpose of that activity?" However, that's not the kind of treatment that most concerns me. I'm talking about the treatment that oftentimes causes permanent damage and agony to an animal. Animal-related medical testing, animal-based entertainment (like zoos and circuses), habitat destruction and other activities of their type against our fur-coated friends all cause them great pain and anguish. According to the activist group In Defense of Animals, biomedical testing is the fourth-highest federally funded industry in the good old land of the free and the home of the brave. Boy, what a country, huh?

In animal entertainment, the animals that must learn tricks often learn them after starvation or beatings. Animals that don't have to learn tricks are still punished. They are removed from their natural environment and placed in a 30'-30' fenced in area where they have nothing to do but look back at those dumb creatures on the outside with the little boxes that flash when you push a button.

The main solution is education. One misconception is that animals are the only alternative to human chemical testing. Due to this, people often vote for these measures. However, this is often wrong. They are simply cheaper and last longer than other forms of testing.

I always grew up with the belief that whoever has the most toys doesn't necessarily always win. Humans are going to find the truth in this when there are e no more animals to look at and no more forests to house them. From now on, let's make sure that the fur coats stay where God intended them to be, on their original owners. All this behavior brings one question to mind, "Would the Houyhnhnms have contrived a sport as degrading and damaging as lassoing the Yahoos?"

"HOLY COW, MISTER PRESIDENT, WHAT ARE YOU DOING IN THIS NEIGHBORHOOD WITHOUT AN ASSAULT WEAPON ?!"

ZETA REMEMBERED BY SISTERS

Student dies in summer crash

By Kerry Mumford

Tragedy struck the students of High Point University over the summer. On July 19, junior Barbara Ann Werkheiser passed away due to an automobile accident.

Barbara was born on Sept. 24, 1974 in Bayport, N.Y. She lived there throughout her life and is survived by many friends and family members.

Barbara came to High Point University in the fall of 1992. She soon made many friends because of her outgoing and friendly personality. In the spring semester, Barbara decided to rush a sorority. She felt that the best choice for her was Zeta Tau Alpha.

Barbara used her leadership abilities as soon as she joined. She was the social chair for her pledge class. The next semester, Barbara was the scholarship chair for her chapter. She volunteered for activities within her sorority. Barbara's most well known job was working in the campus library.

Barbara had a love for children which stemmed from taking care of her nephew and niece during her childhood. A psychology major, she wanted to work with kids when she graduated.

Barbara volunteered at the YMCA to help with the kids. She also used her academic skills to tutor at the Kirkman Elementary School. Andrea McCoy was her roommate for two years. Barbara was her best friend at High Point.

Andrea said, "Our friendship not only taught me a lot about myself, it showed me what true friendship means. I love her with all of my heart and will always keep her memory alive."

Missy Brown was also Barbara's good friend. Missy met her the second night of school and they became friends quickly.

Missy said, "Barbara was one of my best friends and I loved her. Although I miss her greatly, she will always be alive in my heart.

She left me with the strength of her love. She helped me to grow in many ways. I'm glad that I had the pleasure to know her."

Barbara touched the lives of many people on this campus. Wherever she went, she taught people love and strength. She may no longer be with us but her memory will always remain.

School ushers in nine new faculty members

By Lisa Mobley

William Webb, instructor of theater arts, comes from the North Carolina School of the Arts in Winston-Salem. There he taught a stage craft class and received his MFA in technical direction. Webb says that in addition to being a faculty member at HPU, he "maintains a professional working status to keep up to date with technical theater design."

Dr. Franckie Gurganus started teaching as a high school math teacher. She is an assistant professor of accounting at HPU. Gurganus comes from East Carolina University where she worked as an assistant professor of accounting. Gurganus said that she likes High Point because there are "smaller classes and more emphasis on teaching."

Dr. James Wehrley, assistant professor of business, was attracted to HPU for reasons similar to Gurganus. He likes the small class sizes as well as the emphasis on teaching rather than research. Wehrley received his doctorate from Virginia Polytechnical Institute.

Dlana Estey, High Point's new registrar, comes to High Point from the University of Maine where she last worked as associate registrar. Estey had worked at UM for 25 years before coming to HPU.

John Altman, assistant professor of Political Science, is "looking to make High Point a home for life." Altman spent four years teaching American Government at the University of Tennessee before coming to High Point University. He is now in the process of completing his dissertation.

Lee Eysturlid, instructor of history, spent four years as a graduate student at Purdue University. He said that he likes the idea of a small school as opposed to a large one.

Dr. Frederick Schneld, also from Purdue, is an assistant professor of history. Dr. Schneid spent five years as a graduate student at Purdue, one of which he spent teaching.

Dr. Michael Collins, assistant professor of computer information systems, received his doctorate from the University of Arkansas. Like other new teachers, Dr. Collins enjoys the small class sizes, emphasis on teaching and the High Point community.

Dr. Albert Berry Crawford, Culp professor of applied ethics, has taught at the University of Colorado as well as Utah State University, where he started out as an associate professor. Before coming to HPU, Dr. Crawford was last a partner in the firm of Arthur Anderson where he was a business consultant.

LOYALTY HAS ITS REWARDS

Alphi Chi honors several faculty members for service to university

By Joe Avent
Staff writer

It is hard to imagine that several of the High Point University faculty were teaching at this institution when today's average age student was waiting for the bus for the first day of kindergarten.

Several faculty members were honored Sept. 11, by Alpha Chi, the academic honor fraternity, for long service to High Point University.

The list includes:

Dr. Marion Hodge Jr., professor of English.

Mrs. Iris Mauney, assisstant professor of business

Mr. James Speight Jr., associate professor of physical education and health

Dr. Carol Head, professor of modern foreign languages

Dr. B. Gray Bowman, professor of chemistry

Mrs. Catherine Steele, associate professor of physical education education and health

Dr. John Moehlmann, professor of English

Dr. Richard Bennington, Paul Broyhill professor of home furnishings marketing

Dr. E. Vance Davis, vice-president for academic affairs

Dr. Nelson Page, professor of mathematics

Dr. Edward Piancentino, professor of English

Mr. Jerry Steele, associate professor of physical education and health

Dr. Charlie Futrell, professor of physical education and health

Dr. James Stitt, professor of history

Dr. Fred Yeats, professor of biology

Dr. E. Roy Epperson, vice-president for administrative affairs

Each of the aforementioned members was recognized for 15 to 29 years of service to the school.

The following members were recognized for 30 or more years of involvement with High Point University:

Mr. William Cope, associate professor of sociology

Dr. Earl Crow, professor of religion and philosophy

Mr. Manyon Idol, associate professor of mathematics

Mr. Robert Davidson, associate professor of physical education and health, has the distinction of being at High Point longer than any other current faculty member--32 years.

Commenting on his career, Davidson said, "Every year I have been here has been a ball."

Construction

mission from the Department of Transportation to reroute Montlieu Avenue. The project encountered some opposition from citizens of High Point who wanted to maintain the original route of Montlieu Avenue.

Light-hearted opposition has come from a faction of faculty members who have soiled their shoes as they traversed the construction area. Dr. Charles Warde, associate professor of chemistry and physics, jokingly refers to the construction area as "Lake Epperson."

A delegation of faculty from the Haworth Hall side of the construction has drafted a "Declaration of Independence" establishing "Haworth Pass-Fail University." The declaration lists "the pursuit of clean shoes" as an "inalienable right."

In the spirit of good fun, Epperson dismisses the declaration as "the activity of a group of faculty who don't have enough to occupy their time."

Consolidated takes radical stand

By Janet Glazier
Staff writer

Consolidated is back again and better than before. Their first album, which is self titled, was released in 1989. Five years later, they're at it again, trying to make their way in the music world.

This veteran band's new release, Business of Punishment , was created to express their opinions on society's structure and how it is being destroyed. Consolidated sings about issues such as pornography, prostitution, AIDS and capital punishment.

Two songs called "Born Of A Woman" and "Butyric Acid," speak of abortion rights. Both songs are pro-choice.

Consolidated consists of Mark Pistel, Adam Sherburne, and Philip Steir. They identify themselves as a "radical, industiral hip-hop band that flies in the face of the anti-PC backlash swirling around them."

The band's style of music is conformed to synthesizers, bass, guitars and drums. It is more of a hip-hop group than industrial. They need to get rid of the synthesizers if they want to compete with the big boys such as Rage Against the Machine who perform without synthesizers or computers.

This three man band has come a long way and can be successful. I recommend it for those who like to listen to music that has lyrics like Rage Against the Machine, but has a beat like the recent Harry Connick Jr. release.

A word of caution: Consolidated is far from jazz. Consolidated's lyrics are straight to the point. They use vulgar language to sympathize with the listener.

The average listener doesn't want to hear four letter words in his or her music, but sometimes that's what it takes for someone to notice the lyrics, and what the group is trying to say.

Be on the lookout for Consolidated because they are moving up in the world of music. I think they're a good group and should be heard.

Root shows potential

Have you ever been in the mood to listen to some fun and exciting new music? Well, I have, and with the help of some others, I decided to try out the latest CD When I Woke by the hip band Rusted Root.

When I first started listening to this CD, I was a little confused. But once I gave it a chance, I actually began to get more into it.

I found that When I Woke was composed of a unique blend of rhythm and funk. Although it was not really dance music, it was music that you could kick back your feet to and chill out.

I was impressed with the fact that with thirteen songs on the CD, none of them seemed to run together. Each song has its own special twist.

"Ecstasy" has a Southwestern type style. The bass guitar carries out the distinctive style, making it an upbeat song. "Song Me On My Way" and "Lost In The Crowd" resemble songs by the Talking Heads.

The Talking Heads have been a strong influence for Rusted Root from the very beginning. It is amazing to me how similar Michael Glabicki of Rusted Root sounds to David Byrne.

"The Cruel Son" and "Laugh As The Sun" make you feel as if you are crawling across the desert on a mid-summer's day. These two songs are slow, yet still manage to carry a solid rhythm.

I highly recommend "Martyr." It is an enjoyable "happy" type of song. With a twist of reggae in it. "Martyr" is the perfect song to sit back and enjoy life to. If you enjoy the sound of bongos and maracas, you'll love this one.

When I Woke is an excellent debut for Rusted Root. There's a song for everyone on this CD. So when you're sick of listening to the same music all of the time, put away the top 40 and give this group a try.

Rice closes out Vampire Chronicles with this Tale

By Tanya Lyons
Staff writer

Anne Rice's Tale of the Body Thief closes out her stunning chronicle of the vampire Lestat du Lioncourt.

Lestat has done it all and is now bored with life (or undeath). His loneliness leads him to reminisce on past events. From somewhere deep in his subconcious, visions of Claudia, Lestat's childlike vampire spawn, taunt the friendless Lestat to question everything he's ever known and trusted.

When approached several awkward times by a mysterious stranger bearing stories of body switching, Lestat decides to accept the adventure despite his friend Aaron Lightner's warnings. The stranger reveals himself as Raglan james, a self-proclaimed powerful psychic capable of switching bodies with others. Lestat and James discuss the process and arrange to switch bodies.

After the terrifying ordeal, Lestat finds himself in the body of a handsome young man and it is there that the adventure begins. Lestat's quest for humanity turns out to be not all that he envisioned when he almost dies of pneumonia. With the help of Lightner, Lestat is able to regain his original body while Lightner is transported to Lestat's mortal mortal form.

Lestat's adventures left me wondering how we all take our everyday actions for granted. Look at our bodies. Lestat saw the human body as heavy and disgusting. Yet we walk, talk and eat with such perfect ease because the actions are necessary.

Lestat's perspective on the human condition is an interesting one, especially since he has been a vampire for four centuries. Lestat's encounters with a nun who doubts her religion shatters the reasoning why there are good and evil and the connection of such principles to religion. The nun's reaction to Lestat in his natural form reinforces the idea that without evil. good cannot exist.

Tale's predecessors, Interview With The Vampire, The Vampire Lestat and Queen of The Damned, all contain the rich detail that characterize Anne Rice's novels. The stories tend to be long, but the action and pace of the plot kept me wound along until the story's end. The passion and personality Rice has imbued Lestat with makes him very charismatic and colorful. He is a very unlikely hero, given that he is a vampire.

Like the book's epigraph—the poem "Sailing to Byzantium," by W.B. Yeats—Lestat seems to be afraid of growing old, or in his case our of touch with the 20th century. As the poem states, "An aged man is but a paltry thing,/A tattered coat upon a stick." Age is an undesirable thing to be feared. Lestat's fears lead him on the most dangerous venture yet while he learns much about his friends, humanity and himself.

311 goes back to Grassroots with new album

By Peter Romanov
A&E Editor

When 311 released Music last year, I smiled and swayed with every song. This time around, only certain aspects of their new release, Grassroots, entertain me.

I must say that the instruments are a lot more impressive than the singing. The guitars catch fire in a lot of the songs, but flicker nicely in others. The melodies are spellbinding and the funky bass lines add flavor to the hip drum beats.

311 is known for its various singing styles. Once again rap and reggae play a big part in the songs. The rapping tends to get old after a while. But the music keeps it stimulating. I must admit their songs stills try to be fun.

"Omaha Stylee" begins with several reggae blurts and a scratching chant of "311!" The guitars hum and the vocals hiccup into the reggae/rap trance.

A fine mixture of vocals that rap with harmony and groovy guitars that are harsh in some areas appear in "Homebrew."

"Nutsymtom" is a festive song that starts in a flurry of vocals and guitars and ends in a funky-bass squealing guitar jam.

This CD is full of energetic songs that make for OK listening. The music keeps you guessing. In some instances. the rap pumps you up.

Grassroots is definitely a CD that has to grow on you.

Killers offers whirlwind tour into mind of Stone

By Stephen B. Steffek
Editor

Natural Born Killers, the new whirlwind tour into stylized violence from the mind of scriptwriter Quentin Tarantino, demonstrates the bloodthirsty ambulance-chasing that the media have degenerated to in recent times.

With the overnight success of Reservoir Dogs, written and directed by Tarantino, Hollywood realized that violence had become less taboo than in the past. However, Natural Born Killers is definitely not a Hollywood movie. Hollywood movies tend to be restrained by the need to adhere to a formulaic plot that will definitely draw in moviegoers. Unfortunately, this environment is not very conducive to creativity.

Director Oliver Stone, in contrast to some of his past works, has bucked the system and produced what is one of the most piercing film statements so far this year. The movie attacks the media sensationalism that we have all become accustomed to in recent years, the freshest example being theO.J. Simpson murder trial.

The film opens with Mickey (Woody Harrelson) and Mallory (Juliette Lewis) Knox wreaking havoc on a small diner in the middle of nowhere. This incident, the first in a series of violent encounters involving the couple, uses several unique film techniques.

Different film grades and formats for each shot, lights and unconventional camera techniques are just a few of the things that Stone uses to introduce the viewer to film's guerilla format of filmmaking.

The "M&M killings" (short for Mickey and Mallory) as they are dubbed by the press, have one special trademark. One witness is left alive to testify about the events that have untangled before them.

As the film progresses, we learn the background and nature of the couple's relationship. The couple met when Mickey delivered meat to Mallory's extremely overbearing father (Rodney Dangerfield). He is, ironically, the epitome of the trash that sits in a La-Z Boy somewhere in TV land and absorbs the media coverage that the film is condemning. As bad luck would have it, the road to destruction ends for Mickey and Mallory when a police force led by Detective Jack Scagnetti (Tom Sizemore), a media hero in his own right, captures them.

Reporter Wayne Gale (Robert Downey Jr.) is the host of American Maniacs, a television show that details the lives and crimes of famous American serial killers or "mass murderers" as they are more popularly dubbed.

When the ratings soar on his first televised special about Mickey and Mallory, Gale decides that his ticket to the limelight is an interview wih infamous murderer Mickey Knox right after the Super Bowl.

However, when the interview sparks a riot among the inmates of the prison, the Knoxes make their escape, with Gale in tow as a hostage.

Natural Born Killers might have been a total failure if it had been made any other way. However, the combination of the elements involved is perfect and makes the film thoroughly enjoyable. Performances by Harrelson, Downey, Sizemore and, I never thought I'd say this, Lewis (Cape Fear, Kalifornia) add to the entertainment value. Lewis, whom I have never liked due to her role choices as dumb, helpless women, has evolved into this role and she plays the Mallory that Tarantino probably envisioned when writing the character.

Lewis told Film Threat magazine that she won Stone's heart and the role by saying to the director, "If you honestly think that any other actress could kill you, phiysically, with her bare hands, then go for it." For me, that signals a woman worth dying for.

Downey's character is thoroughly lambasted for his scoop-hungry attitude. Several times during the course of the film, he puts his career before the welfare of other people.

Another thing that enhances the Killers experience is the background elements. Things such as music and imagery provide a smorgasbord for the senses, leaving the indelible impression of a two hour music video on the audience's mind. These provide a cinematic experience like no other in recent times. It is, however, somewhat like the psychedelic films of the late '60s.

Natural Born Killers provides a condemning statement of the ruthless attitude that the media often takes in regard to sensationalistic stories. Stone has proven himself to be a versatile director. I highly recommend Natural Born Killers for the non-squeamish. However, if you are a bit queasy, wait for the tape in order to fast forward through the "good"parts.

Tarantino: From video store clerk to big-time Hollywood movie mogul

By Stephen B. Steffek
Editor-in-Chief

Quentin Tarantino, Hollywood's newest commodity, has written scripts for three hit movies, directed one and has another on the way.

Tarantino, a onetime video store clerk and film geek, has lifted himself into the upper echelons of Tinseltown's brass. Since the success of his first directorial effort, Reservoir Dogs, he has repeatedly been deemed the Best New Filmmaker of the Decade and even won the Palm d'Or, an award for the best film at the Cannes Film Festival.

The festival is an international event that is carefully observed by people all over the world.

Over the past year, two other Tarantino scripts were transferred to film, True Romance and now Natural Born Killers.

Now, Tarantino has Pulp Fiction, the winner at Cannes on the way in November. The film, which is being touted as John Travolta's return to the big screen is already a projected hit due to the large cult following that Tarantino's films have earned him.

The thing that attracts people to his movies is the unique sense of humor blended with extreme violence and blatant unrealism.

A good example of this is the now infamous scene in Reservoir Dogs when the bad guy hacks off a helpless cop's ear while dancing around to the bouncy rock song "Stuck In The Middle With You" by Stealers Wheel.

Tarantino is now studied by film students who once studied the works of great directors like Scorcese and Welles.

Tarantino is a force to watch in the film industry. Be on the lookout for this rising talent.

Depth is main ingredient in men's soccer cookbook

By Ketih Corbett
Sports writer

The 26 players on the men's soccer team would agree that there are several key ingredients to produce a winning formula.

Indgredient number one: Depth.

"We are very deep in talent this year," said junior defender Chad Holden-bache. "We've got a lot of talented freshmen that must be willing to step up if we're going to accomplish anything this year."

Starting freshman goalkeeper George Vakoutis of Parkland, Fla is being asked to step up in a big way. He has to fill the shoes of last year's All-American goalkeeper, Dwayne Adams.

"I'm looking forward to the challenge," Vakoutis said. "We (the freshmen) all came in wanting to play bigger and better competition. ...We have very high expectations for ourselves."

But are those expectations too high? Senior co-captain Dean Preston, a midfielder out of West Palm Beach, Fla., doesn't think so.

"I just got a feeling down deep that we can do it," said Preston, referring to dethroning Carolinas Conference champion Belmont Abbey. "It will be between Belmont Abbey, Barton and us."

Through the first four games, 17-year head coach Woody Gibson has seen his team go 1-2-1. The win came against Guilford at home, 3-2.

Coach Gibson was unavailable for comment on his team's situation.

In their opener, the men played Florida's Lynn University, the nation's top-ranked NAIA team. Lynn was held scoreless for most of the game until it scored twice in the final 15 minutes to win 2-0.

High Point even played a pre-season exhibition match against the Greensboro Dynamo, losing 8-3.

The Panthers meet Belmont Abbey on Oct. 1 at home. High Point is relying on depth and desire to produce an upset and a winning formula for the season.

UK runners bring more flexibility to heavily stacked men's cross-country

By Kevin Fielder
Staff writer

With three top returners and some outstanding newcomers, the men's cross country team looks to be a major force this year in the Carolinas Conference.

This team may be the strongest ever. Returning are three top all-conference, all-district runners -- Sean Carter, Jeff Goddard and Mike Dyess, along with Mike Jacobs.

Newcomers are Robert McCulloch. Kojo Kyereme (pronounced Trimmer), Brian Donaruma, Daniel Doub, Tony Pompa, Anthony Billings and Brent Ward.

Coach Bob Davidson is proud and very confident that his top returners and the "new kids on the block" can get the job done.

"If those three have their best season and the newcomers blossom, we could have our strongest team ever," said Davidson.

McCulloch, a new recruit from Glasgow, Scotland, has run cross country for eight years and loves training in America.

"I've enjoyed running in the American sunshine because training in Scotland can be miserable running in the cold wind and rain," says McCulloch.

The Scottish phenom has already broken an HPU five-kilometer record when he ran a time of 16 min. 24 sec at Hagan Stone Park.

Kyreme, a nine-year cross country runner from Lowestoft, England, sees running here at High Point as an asset.

"I've enjoyed it quite a lot. I find that the weather is beneficial to my training, and the competitive environment is also beneficial to me fulfilling my goals in track and cross country."

Competition will be quite different this year. While Pfeiffer, Belmont Abbey and some Division I schools are the main competition, national qualifying is on a regional level for the first time.

It won't be easy," Davidson said. "There is more of a challenge out there."

The Panthers are the defending conference and District 26 champions.

Volleyball foreits first 14 games due to ineligible transfer player

By Stephanie Lewis
Staff writer

Leading the volleyball team to a second place Carolinas Conference finish last fall, co-head coach Joe Ellenburg had high expectations for his team this year.

Unfortunately, the 9-5 team has experienced a major setback in having to forfeit its first 14 games due to a violation of transfer eligibility rules. Middle hitter Pam Reed, an integral part of the team, has been found ineligible according to NAIA rules.

Reed, a 23-year-old transfer from Guilford Technical Community College, does not have enough terms in her transcript to be considered a transfer. She does have enough credit hours, though, spawning Ellenburg to consider Reed the victim of a technicality.

"This has been a terrible blow to the team," said Ellenburg, in his seventh year as volleyball coach. "It's a shame it had to happen because Pam is a victim of a technical point, and consequently, the team is a victim."

The athletic department learned of their error on Monday and reported it to the proper authorities.

Despite the misfortune, senior captain Christine Anderson thinks the 0-14, 0-1 Lady Panthers still have a chance of being tops in the conference.

"We have a lot of strong players and individual talent among the team," said Anderson. "I think that with a lot of work we can overtake the number one and two teams (St. Andrews and Barton)."

Anderson also spoke highly of the promotion of Teresa Shaw Faucette as co-head coach. Faucette has been a member of the volleyball coaching staff for the past two years, but has taken on more responsibility working with the returning starters and freshmen.

Hitter/defender Anitra Dodson has led the team in serving percentage, while returner Lori Kuykendall has held provided incredible setting accuracy. New key players include Holly Hendley and Jaimie Walsh, both outside hitters, and Jennifer Miller, setter.

"Our single most important strength is that we have a determined and scrappy team," said Ellenburg. "We lack the heighth of other teams, but we compensate in order to be a contender."

The team proved Ellenburg correct, upseting Barton Tuesday night, 15-7, 15-8, 15-9. Walsh filled Reed's place, stepping up and playing her role well.

"Tuesday's game had to be the most gratifying win in a long time, coming after the blow of losing Reed," said Ellenburg. "I think it proves the resiliancy of a college age group who did not bend to the blow they took. Instead, they rose to the occassion."

The Volleyball team began its season 9-5 with second and third place finishes in two tournaments. But the wins will be erased due to violation of NCAA transfer eligibility rules, making the team 0-14.

▨ Team massacres Meredith College in opener, loses next two games

Coach Woody Gibson is expecting good things from a women's soccer team that returns 11 players and three All-Conference selections from last year's 12-5-1 squad. Unfortunately, the expectations haven't been lived up to yet.

"Well, I think we ought to be farther along than we are," said Coach Gibson. "We have six or seven new, key people. It's taking a little longer to get organized."

The Lady Panthers are led by senior striker Jonelle Corsey, an All-South, All Conference selection. Junior defender Kristy Powell and sophmore goalie Deb Nichols are also returning All-Conference selections.

Other returners are Kara Helsel, Stephanie Jay, Andrea Crossley, Kelly Early, Kate Wright, Brandy Baughman, Sheri Green and Kat Krusas.

Danielle Donovan, Anna Lynah, Erin McConville, and Kris Bowles have transferred in. Lindsay Gentz and Melissa Villars are freshmen.

Many Carolinas Conference coaches have picked the Lady Panthers to finish first. Coach Gibson takes this as an honor, but feels those predictions are meaningless.

"In my opinion you determine the best team on the field," said Gibson. "It's a great honor but it really doesn't mean anything."

The ladies began the season with a 13-0 blowout over Meredith, but since have lost two close games by 2-0 scores. The first was to Lenoir Rhyne and the other was a conference overtime loss to St. Andrews.

"We've been on opposites the games we've played," said Gibson. "We played well against the weak team and poor against the strong teams."

Sophomore Brandy Baughman knows the team hasn't played well but feels they will come together soon.

"We have a lot of talent on the team," said Baughman. "We have people on the bench who could start a lot of other places. We just have to start doing the little things right to live up to our potential."

Women's cross-country faces uphill battle with only five runners on team

By Kevin Fielder
Staff writer

With only five runners, the women's cross country team faces an great task.

Coach Bob Davidson has some excellent veterans, but newcomers are scarce. Returning are three all-conference, all-district runners—junior captain Elizabeth Young, sophomore Melissa Lansberg and sophomore Roz Hall.

Joining the team are sophomore Geisa O'-Reilly and freshman Lisa Fuller. Another potential operative is Michelle Anastasio.

Davidson is proud of the team but worried about depth. "We have three returning all-conference, all-district runners, but we need five to score and have a strong, supportive team," said Davidson.

So far, Young has been carrying the load and logging outstanding times. Voted most valuable runner during her freshman year, Young recently set the university five-kilometer record at 20:27, beating former teammate Delia Stanley's time of 20:30.

"We all get along really well," said Young, who likes her fellow runners. Her goal is "to be all-conference again and make it to the nationals."

"I like getting in shape; it definitely helps. I like competition because there are a lot of Division I schools that we run against," said Lansberg.

But the shortage of runners bothers Lansberg. "This team has potential, but if someone was to get hurt, we'd have a hard time competing because we need five people," she said.

Davidson has high hopes for Hall, and he sees the two new runners as assets. "O'Reilly and Fuller are giving their best efforts, and we hope to see them improve," he said.

The pecking order of Panther runners in the first two meets has been, from top to bottom, Young, Lansberg, Hall, O'Reilly and Fuller.

At the High Point Invitational on Sept. 9, Young placed second behind Belmont Abbey's Jennifer David with a time of 21:44.

Hall was nine overall at 23:32. O'Reilly finished 16th at 24:48 and Fuller came in 28th in the 40-woman field with a time of 29:05.

The team's next meet is this Saturday at 10 a.m in Winston-Salem, hosted by Wake Forest.

The High Point University golf team didn't win a national title, but eighth was good enough to please coach Dee Sasser.

"We're tickled with our finish," Sasser said after the Panthers carded a final-round 304 to finish the 72-hole NAIA National Championship tournament at 1,202. HPU placed eighth in the 33-team field at Tulsa Coutnry Club.

"To be competitive for the national title, you needed to shoot under 300 all four days," he said. "We didn't do that, but we played well."

Grant Thomson enjoyed an outstanding tournament, placing third in the individual standings. Thomson fired a par-70 the last day and shot 290.

Thomson, who was medalist at the Carolinas Conference tournament, earned NAIA All-American honors by virtue of his strong national finish. The top 15 players at the national tournament secured berths on the All-American team.

Thomson was also named an NAIA Academic All-American. The 3.79 GPA business management and administration major was the only golfer nationally to earn berths on both All-American teams.

Individually for the Panthers, Donnie Franks finished 32nd in the 173-player field at 301. Allen McGee finished with a 306, David Faulkner a 315 and Tony Romani shot 310.

Expectations are high for the spring

If you think the golf team doesn't have the talent to top last season's 8th place NAIA finish, you might want to think again.

Coach Dee Sasser returns his top five starters and has added two quality Canadian recruits in Luke Mongraine and Charles Davis, both juniors.

They will team with returners Grant Thomson, Tony Romani, Allen McGee, Andy Nelson, Dave Faulkner, Adam Parsons and Donnie Franks.

"I don't see any of our top five guys shooting over 76," said Thomson. "We're already talking about winning a national championship."

Four players are not eligible for the fall, but should play the spring.

Tennis Finns fit right in at High Point

By Kate Wright

When tennis coach Jerry Tertzagian started recruiting players last year, he was looking for good players, good students and good people.

Recruiting season is over, and Tertzagian picked up two players that he feels definitely fit his criteria. They are Pekka Pohjamo, 21, and Kalle Kuusisto, 24, both natives of Finland.

Both players have come from strong teams back home - Pekka playing for KTS in Kuopio and Kalle for Este-78 in Espoo. But the two have more in mind than tennis. They came to see America.

After flying nearly a day, they arrived in the Triad nearly four weeks ago. Although they came at different times, both had the same first impression of southeastern America: very beautiful and very warm.

But the climate isn't the biggest change they've had to encounter.

"It's so hard to communicate," Kalle said.

"Yeah, it's so tiring to talk," added Pekka.

Luckily, Pekka and Kalle have each other to talk to in their own language, though they do try to speak English even among themselves.

The language may be different, but the tennis is the same.

"You can always communicate with tennis," said Pekka. "It is the same everywhere. You don't need to speak the same language to play tennis."

Although the team hasn't had any matches yet. Coach Tertzagian says that the newcomers fit in very well with the team.

Although fitting in has not been a problem, Pekka and Kalle have had trouble settling in to the American classroom. According to Pekka, who attended Tampere University in Finland last year, the teaching styles are different.

"There were no papers," he said. "The professor talked for a couple of hours, we took notes and then took the exam at the end. There were no papers or extra work to hand in."

It is especially hard in their German class where they have to translate words from German to English and then from English to Finish.

So far, the Finns are enjoying their stay in High Point. They are anxious to see more of the country, but that will come with time. The High Point community seems to be just as excited to have them here as they are to be here.

Senior Angie Springstead, who takes German with them, said, "Pekka and Kalle are very funny. We can learn a lot from them."

Another strong recruiting job adds depth to men's tennis

By Rob Humphreys

Freshman recruit Man-Giac-Tran volleys with a teammate while Jason Gefaell hits on the far court.

This fall is anything but crunch-time for the men's tennis team. After all, players don't get too serious until the regular season begins in early spring.

But once again, coach Jerry Tertzagian did some serious recruiting over the summer.

"We will be deeper," Tertzagian said. "We had a pretty good recruiting season this year. There's going to be some good competition between people in practice."

Tertzagian padded his roster with the addition of two hard-hitting freshmen from Finland, Pekka Poh-jamo, 19 and Kalle Kuusisto, 24. Both Finns are expected to play in the top four.

Freshman Man-Giac-Tran, ranked fourth in doubles in Maryland, will compete for a roster spot with freshmen Jason Burgess and Jason Gefaell.

"The competition is really high out here," said Tran, who goes by Jack. "I hope I'm up to par with the team. It's a different level from high school. There's a lot more international players."

A total of four foreigners are part of a tentative 11-man fall squad. Australian Todd Hooper, vying for the no. 1 seed, returns for his first season after being ineligible all of last year.

Sophomore Andrew Awai of Trinidad, last year's no. 4 player, is likely to move down a notch and play five or six.

Last year's no. 2 player. Donald Marriott, could see action anywhere in the top four, especially at no. 3.

The futures of Keith Corbett, Mike Allen and Matt Laslo are up in the air. Corbett, who played no. 5 last season, will probably end up battling Laslo and Tran for the sixth singles spot.

As for doubles, Kuusisto has expressed interest in playing with Hooper at no. 1, while Marriott and Pohjamo could start at two.

The third doubles team could be a combination of any remaining players, with consideration going to Corbett, Awai and Tran.

"We need to practice doubles, especially," said Kuusisto. "I don't even know who my partner is."

The fall season begins at home today against Lenoir Rhyne. Three away matches remain for High Point. The Panthers travel to play Catawba on Sept. 23, Methodist, Oct. 5 and Mars Hill, Oct. 13.

Sink resigns; Tertzagian takes over women's tennis

Men's tennis coach Jerry Tertzagian will replace former women's tennis coach Leigh Sink, who stepped down for personal reasons. Tertzagian will still coach the men, but will be forced to split duties between the two teams.

He will be assisted by Amy Dillingham, who played at Wake Forest and finished her tennis career at High Point College in 1990.

Last year, the HPU women finished fourth in the Carolinas Conference.

Henry named All-American...again

FILE PHOTO

Tracey Henry, four-time All-American.

Tracey Henry, a senior from Burlington, N.C., was named a two-event All-American as a result of his performance in the 1994 NAIA National Track Meet this spring in Azusa, California.

Henry finished fourth in the 400-meter hurdles (52.43), sixth in the triple jump (48-6) and tenth in the long jump. He was High Point's sole qualifier for the national meet.

"Even though I was the only person who went, I felt like I represented every person at High Point," said Henry.

Collectively, Henry is now a four-time All-American. In 1992 he finished fifth in the long jump. The next year, Henry finished fifth in the 400-meter hurdles.

His plans now focus on competing with a club track team in the Triad area.

Katherine Hill shares views about her new position as Director of Student Activities

By Jason Schneider
Staff writer

Katherine Hill thinks of her job as director of Student Activities and Developmental Programs in terms of a business.

"The product is a good experience and the consumer is the student," she says.

Hill, who earned her master of education degree from the University of North Carolina at Charlotte in 1991 and served as area coordinator for the Complex from 1991 to 1994, encourages students to think of her office as consumer-oriented and what she does as a service from which they can benefit.

Not only does Hill orginize activities that support academics by mirroring the classroom experience, she also helps students create new clubs and organizations and helps established clubs and organizations recruit new members and plan activities. Perhaps one of the most important services that Hill provides is suggesting to students activities that parallel their interests.

"I want people to be intelligent consumers about the types of activities that they want to be involved in and I want to help them make the right choices," she says, but she doesn't want students to be overextended to the point that their studies are neglected or they have no personal time. She plans to keep a file on the students she talks with so that she can give them a call if an opportunity they might be interested in aries. Hill realizes that it is often difficult for students, especially new ones, to meet people and become active in college.

Katherine Hill

"I want people to get plugged in to the activities on campus," she says. "I'm willing to put the effort into making the first step, by saying 'I want you to get involved.'" The more involved students are in campus activities, Hill says, the more satisfied they are.

"I think if people come here just to go to class, they're totally missing out. They may make a 4.0 and graduate, but unless they get involved, I don't think they're getting as well-rounded a college experience as they can get," she says.

Hill says that she is here to support students in getting involved in campus activities and to make sure anyone, regardless of interests or time, can be active and have an important role on campus and still feel connected to the college even after the student leaves.

Plans Hill has made for the immediate future include scheduled activities every Thursday, Friday and Saturday night for the entire fall semester, updating the Alpha board in the cafeteria daily and holding an activities fair in the fall.

With the help of her graduate assistant, Curtis Hoover (who will be in her office two days each week), Hill also hopes to implement some leadership programs so that students can learn how others deal with certain problems and develop a program of peer support where student leaders can talk about what works and what doesn't.

"I want people to have an opportunity to come in and learn more about leadership skills so they can take away that information and use it in their own orginization," she says.

Hill also plans to make sure the work she does now won't stop when she is gone by forming a committee made up of a representative panel of students that will plan for five or 10 years from now, considering increased enrollment, budget changes and the typical incoming student. This committee would also plan activities for adult students and create ways to get the faculty involved in interesting and rewarding activities outside the classroom.

Hill is open to suggestions, concerns and problems, as well as complaints.

"The contributions they (the students) are making matter, and they have a voice and they can make a difference," she says. "I have the best job on campus.

"My goal is to provide an atmosphere where people feel like they can be as active as they want to be, as supported as they need to be, and benefit from the things that this office can provide for them through activities and organizations.

"And to the school I want to be able to provide happy consumers and a long-range plan to better this office and to make it as productive and efficient and as effective as it can be, because that is what it deserves to be."

American Humanics retreats to Camp Cheerio for a weekend

By Amy Cavallo
Staff writer

The High point University chapter of American Humanics (AH) took over 50 people to their 29th annual retreat at Camp Cheerio in Allegheny County, N.C. between Sept. 9-11. It was one of the largest groups in recent years.

The retreat provided numerous activities that required teamwork, personal responsibility, leadership and creativity. American Humanics members participated in sports competitions such as relay races, ultimate frisbee, volleyball and basketball.

They also participated in a ropes course where each team had to scale a 12 foot wall, crawl through a tire suspended between two trees and find their way through mazes.

On Saturday, children from Allegheny County elementary schools joined the retreat to join AH members for balloon tosses, basketball games and canoe rides.

The retreat and American Humanics are affiliated with the behavioral science department. The 50 plus participants, though, represented various majors and all four classes.

Additionally, AH has elected new officers and has planned numerous public service projects for the upcoming year. The retreat marks the start of AH's 94-95 operating year.

Alpha Phi Omega

Alpha Phi Omega is the Co-educational National Service Fraternity, promoting the principles of leadership, friendship and service. Founded nationally in 1925, Mu Xi Chapter is entering its 36th year of service to High Point University.

Thursday, Sept. 1 kicked off the Rush program with 18 people enjoying an information and get acquainted meeting in the lounge in the Old Student Center, followed by a party which Mrs. & Dr. Warde hosted including Twister and a scrumptious Ben and Jerry's Ice Cream Cake!

Keeping with their principle of service, on Sunday, Sept. 4, a team of members and dedicated rushees cleaned up the abandoned picnic shelter near the green way.

Providing twenty man hours of service, they picked up and hauled trash to the dumpster, pulled weeds and swept the area sparkling. Topping off their service to the campus, they feasted on grilled hamburgers and hot dogs!

Rushees were treated to a movie night showing Four Weddings and a Funeral and Pump up the Volume in the newly cleaned lounge. Members previously poured ten man hours of work into cleaning the lounge after the summer.

Fifteen formal invitations were made to interested people to accept and pledge themselves to the ideals of leadership, friendship and service at the pledge ceremony on Saturday, Sept. 6.

A Phi O provided the refreshments and publicity for Thursday's Red Cross Bloodmobile. A big thanks to the nearly fifty people who took precious time to give blood!

HOMECOMING 1994..."WHAT A JIG!"

Charlie would have been proud

By Joe Avent
Staff writer

" I was in shock all night."
- Colleen O'Brien, HC Queen

The Homecoming dance, "Chaplin's Jig—Return to the Roaring '20s." was held Saturday Oct. 1, at Market Square.

Approximately 700 tickets were sold with a large percentage being used. Seventy tickets were sold for the dinner which was held at Market Square prior to the dance.

This was the first year that the dance was run by the SGA rather than the now-defunct Student Union.

The Homecoming court consisted of Heather Coyle, Brenda Egedy, Tracey Lyons, Colleen O'Brien. Clinton Barkdoll, Frank Donnelly and Tracey Henry. Colleen O'Brien was crowned Queen and Clinton Barkdoll was awarded Big Man On Campus.

In reference to the experience, O'Brien stated, "I was in shock all night."

Big-band music was provided by Leon Jordan and the Continentals. Contemporary music was furnished by a DJ from ProSound.

SGA vice-president Heather Coyle served as Homecoming chairperson. Coyle had the help of at least 15 actively participating volunteers throughout the organization process.

Coyle stated that she had a lot of freshmen help and sees great potential for future leadership.

The biggest problem, according to Coyle, was communication. The dance was held five weeks earlier than it had been in the past. Several campus offices were involved in Homecoming including SGA. the dean of students, the activities director and the alumni office.

Because of the shorter schedule, the level of confusion was greater and mistakes did happen. Two tiaras were ordered by different offices. Fortunately. one was returnable.

The dance had been held at Market Square two years ago. However, High Point University was not invited back last year due to damages the previous year. No damage has been reported this year.

Special precaution was taken by SGA to prevent such damage. Two Market Square security officers, four off-duty city police officers and Gwen Skeen of the University's maintenance staff were hired for the evening.

Katherine Hill, director of student activities, assisted in supervising the dance along with SGA adviser, Dean Gart Evans. Hill stated. "I'm really pleased with Homecoming. There's a great deal of work involved by the students and I feel that their efforts really paid off."

Heather Coyle felt that, "For five weeks early, it went pretty well. We have extra T-shirts!"

Students held hostage at Circle K

Evans plays key role in negotiations

By Stephanie Lewis
Staff writer

The hostage situation transpired at this Circle K located on the corner of Lexington and Centennial Avenues.

Dean of Students Gart Evans played an integral role in negotiating for the lives of several High Point Universtiy students in a hostage situation at a nearby Circle K convenience store last month.

Evans, an experienced hostage negotiator for the High Point Police Department, was called in to conduct negotiations with Alphonso "Priest" McQueen after he took eight people hostage, including four university students who crawled into a cooler to take refuge.

A student who requested anonymity got a first-hand look at the situation before the hostages were taken by McQueen, a High Point resident. The student and a friend were in the parking lot in his car when an argument broke out between McQueen and his girlfriend three cars over.

The source became interested in the argument when he heard McQueen scream, "I'm going to kill you!"

At that point, McQueen reached for a gun and shot into the air over the tops of the cars.

Simultaneously, the source and his friend released the levers on their seats, throwing them backwards and out of of McQueen's sight. Peeking over the edge of the window, they witnessed the girl's relatively unhurried entry into the store to call the police.

The source recalls she walked "as if she was used to it."

The source and his friend left as soon as possible and were a little confused as to what they should do.

Coyle prepares for "the real thing"

By Erin Jarman
Staff writer

Imagine transferring to another college in your junior year and having to make a new start.

The task of meeting new people, learning new places and getting involved in unfamiliar campus activities would be enough to make anyone shy away from this challenge, but not Heather Coyle, a 21-year-old student from Marietta. Ga.

Heather came here in Auust of 1993 from Andrew College, a two-year, Methodist-affiliated institution in Cuthbert, Ga. A member of Phi Theta Kappa. an honor society recognizing scholastic achievement, Coyle has proven that she is more than deserving of the honor.

She chose High Point after hearing about it from two High Point administrators who are former presidents of Andrew College, Dr. Morris Wray (currently vice president for internal affairs at High Point) and President Jacob Martinson.

Coyle has excelled in academics and human relations. With her outgoing personality and highly personable nature. it comes as no surprise that she is an ambassador for the university. vice president for SGA. and possibly the SGA president succeeding Clint Barkdoll.

Coyle has plans in the works should she become the new president.

"I would like to design a university events calendar. one in which every organization on campus would record their activities. thus avoiding planning big activities for the same dates," she said. "I would also like to see new SGA officers elected at the end of first semester instead of at the end of the year. That way operations would run smoother and there would be better communication especially over the summer months."

Republicans need to look at global picture

☐ GOP quickly forgets its past military ventures when assessing Haiti

By Clinton Barkdoll
Editorial Editor

The occupation of Haiti is well under way and in spite of some logistical problems, the operation has been fairly successful.

No American soldiers have been killed, Haitian dictators are beginning to leave the country, the opposition military is slowly being quelled, ousted President Aristide supporters are regaining control and democracy is in the Haitian air.

Additionally, former President Jimmy Carter is a front-runner for the Nobel Peace Prize and President Clinton's poll numbers have taken an ever-so-slight upward bounce in the past few weeks. So why all the criticism about Clinton's Haiti policy? Simple: election year politics.

Saying vital interests are not at stake and there are more pressing problems at home, the GOP is making every effort to put a negative spin on the Haiti situation.

It's interesting that Republicans are all of a sudden interested in helping the homeless and fighting other domestic problems while they didn't do a thing to address these same concerns during the Reagan-Bush years. Additionally, from 1980-1992, Republicans supported the very principles they are now opposing.

Republicans cheered when President Reagan decided to level Grenada and then granted millions of dollars in aid to rebuild the island nation. Aside from the fact that it is one of the world's largest suppliers of nutmeg, was innocuous Grenada worthy of all-out military action?

Several years later, U.S. fighter jets fired missiles into Libya, killing several children (including Muammar Qaddafi's son). Once again, Reagan and the GOP waved the flag citing "vital U.S. interests." The stock market soared (which may have been the ultimate goal), and problems with Libya persisted. Then came George Bush.

Bush orchestrated the invasion of Panama to capture Gen. Noriega and restore democracy to this tiny Central American country. After a handful of American deaths and the capture of Noriega, U.S. troops left and Panama isn't much better off today than it was five years ago. Again, Republicans supported the effort and chalked up a victory for themselves.

Then came the Persian Gulf con-flict. Thousands of American troops were sent to the Middle East to "liberate helpless Kuwait."

A few U.S. soldiers were killed, and with minimal effort, the Iraqi army folded like a suitcase (the Salvation Army probably could have beat much of the weak Iraqi military).

Republicans took credit for the American victory, oil prices stabilized and Bush's approval ratings skyrocketed to the 90 percent range.

Before Bush's departure in 1992, a U.S.-led force was deployed in Somalia on a "human rights mission."

Just last week, the final troops left this African nation with many problems unresolved, and most experts calling the operation a failure. Again, though, Republicans supported this mission (albeit lukewarmly).

Grenada, Libya, Panama, Iraq and Somalia: five Republican-led efforts; five Republican-supported efforts (for the most part); five questionable success/failure rates.

We all know that Ronald Reagan has a short memory (especially when it comes to things like the Iran-Contra affair), but it appears as though the entire Republican party is suffering from a similar syndrome.

The same Republicans who supported questionable actions in Grenada, Libya, Panama, Iraq and Somalia are now vehemently opposed to the Haiti occupation.

GOP attempts to muddle the Haiti situation by citing domestic problems are spurious at best.

The current administration has done more to address domestic problems than 12 years of Republican leadership under Reagan and Bush.

Moreover, America is now the only real superpower in the world.

Any time democracy, a nation or innocent people are being abused and suppressed, the U.S. has a legal and certain moral obligation to intervene.

Not only does the Monroe Doctrine apply, but United Nations and other treaties dictate that the U.S. come to the rescue of countries like Haiti (where democracy and suffering people cry for help).

With a general election weeks away, Republicans are playing classic politics by stymieing success in Haiti. As they do with so many issues. Republicans must create diversions to perpetuate Washington gridlock.

Maybe it's time for the GOP to consult Ron and Nancy's trustworthy astrologer—she'll certainly have all the answers and undoubtedly be able to shape Republican policy again.

Who cares about those messed up countries?

America is not the world's policeman. Let's solve the USA's problems first.

FROM THE RIGHT

By Fred Jordan
Staff writer

It is all our fault! We are the worst place on the earth. Everything is our fault.

How many times have we seen the American flag being burned? How many times have we heard shouts from pissed-off crowds crying for the deaths of Americans while watching CNN? Is it just me, or are we experiencing a bad job of public relations on a worldwide scale?

Oh, yeah, now I remember. We are the bad guys. We are the source for every problem on the planet. It couldn't be the fact that these countries think we are their parents and that they believe they deserve an allowance, somewhere around $10 million a year. You want to know something: they are wrong.

Right now we look at far away places like Haiti, Rwanda, Bosnia and the Middle East, and we see some stupid girl reporter with three last names and a butch haircut telling us how bad things are and how it is America's duty to restore order on this country.

That is a bunch of crap. Think about it: these are the same people who tell us not to eat red meat and who march on Washington every year for the cause du jour.

But the most pathetic thing is that there are so many of us who sit there, glued to the screen and agree with these ultra-liberal Commies.

What was the big one recently? "Political Correctness as a way of life, Amendment 33, vote for it!" Hey, take a look around.

We are seen as the world's police force. We are the solution to every problem. It is funny that all the Europeans say we have a "John Wayne" complex, but whom do they call when they are in trouble? They call us.

Why? Because we are the biggest, baddest, richest country in the world.

You couldn't fit the cars we drive in half of these little dinky countries.

But now we are out there being Mother Theresa with an M-16 again. restoring order in Haiti, a country that can't even field an Olympic team.

Have we all lost our minds, first electing a woman, whose wife is pretty hot, to the presidency and now supporting the administration's big attempt to help a country that isn't even as big as South Carolina? Nobody should care whether Aristide is in office or not.

Nobody should care whether the Rwandans are in turmoil, or whether the Bosnians are shooting the Serbs or even if Haitians are dying in the streets. Don't put down the paper quite yet: hear me out.

Have any of you taken a look around the corner, across the railroad tracks, up in the mountains or in the littered streets of the city?

There are people, American people. who do not have a bed to sleep in, shoes on their feet or a meal in their stomachs. There are intelligent kids who can't go to school because they have to work since their drug-addict father can't buy groceries.

There have been over thirty murders in Winston-Salem this year.

How many times have you heard Sally Struthers open her fat face and plead for help for kids who are dying in Watts or West Virginia?

The point is simple: we cannot help other people while there are so many problems in America. It is not our responsibility to solve the problems of the world.

The media machine. run by the same people who marched against America during the Vietnam Conflict and now encourage military intervention for human suffering.

They were wrong then. due to the whole balance of power scheme with the Russians. and they are wrong now.

So. who cares about the Serbs. Haitians. Rwandans and all the other countries that are messed up? These people don't help us. They act like a woman at Macy's with a gold card. sucking all the money they can out of it. And do you know who pays the bill? We do.

So who cares about all these messed up countries with economic and political problems? Well. I do care about one: The United States of America. God bless her and let's help her.

BEWARE OF "FACILITATORS"

New buzzword "facilitates" through American society

By Clint Barkdoll
Editorial Editor

Facilicasious. "What's that?" you ask. No it isn't the newest sexually transmitted disease, but it is a growing illness. Facilicasious is descriptive of one who likes to facilitate or something riddled with facilitation. From life to copying machines, "facilitate" is the latest buzzword being used to homswoggle vulnerable Americans.

The world of education seems to be the biggest purveyor of facilitation. Recently, school districts throughout the country were evaluating the Drug-Free Schools and Communities Program (educating youngsters about drugs and punishing those who use drugs in or near a school).

One district in Pennsylvania had a psychologist conduct about a 30 minute presentation to brief the school board on the program.

He used the word facilitate over 15 times and this pattern of speech was also reflected in the handouts the audience received. The first paragraph listed six goals which included words like assess, monitor, facilitate, implement, develop, promote, lead, network, interact, involve and process. If you haven't vomited yet, the story gets better.

The psychologist presenting the program achieved what must be the zenith among facilitation practitioners: "master facilitator." That's right; after attending so many classes and giving so many presentations, some states will now designate you as a "master facilitator."

Facilicasious people, and wannabees everywhere are licking their chops over acquiring that status. It is probably orgasmic to many educators to present a program on goals or leadership and be introduced as "master facilitator." That must be tantamount to hitting a grand slam in the bottom of the ninth to win the world series. Incidentally, the goals mentioned above will be carried out through a consortium—another popular term among the facilicasious.

A local North Carolina school board recently heard a salesman preach how his new $100,000+ copier would "facilitate the current system."

This salesman was a neophyte of sorts though; he only used "facilitate" three times during his presentation—a far cry from achieving master facilitator status.

It is quite perplexing to explain why these facilitators aren't the CEO of a company, or at least independently wealthy? After all, if they are so great at working with others, leading, networking, processing, etcetera, it should be a breeze to climb the corporate ladder. There may be a pattern among these facilitators.

They appear to be nothing more than classed hucksters looking desperately to hit it big, because they'll never make it solely on credentials or raw ability. Many of them religiously read works about self motivation and outcomes (as in Outcome Based Education).

Through reading such works, facilitators attempt to work their audience into a frenzy of excitement to "buy" a given pitch. They become highly angered when someone questions their harangue (when a board member quizzed the master facilitator about the ambiguities of his plan, the pitch man entered badger defensive mode; apparently neglecting all of those things he read about networking and leadership).

So the moral is this: when you hear someone frequently using words like facilitate or claiming to be a master facilitator—look out. They are probably getting ready to sell you something. Maybe many of the nation's problems stem from too much facilitating and too little action.

ESTEY ADJUSTING WELL TO SOUTHERN LIFE

New registrar says goodbye to Maine, hello to High Point

By Clinton Barkdoll
Editorial editor

It had been nearly a quarter of a century since High Point University hired a registrar. When David Holt retired on May 31, he was the longest serving administrator at High Point, leaving 25 years of experience and quite a gap for the school to fill. Then along came Diana Estey.

Estey, having over 15 years of experience in registrar-related work, was hired as High Point's new registrar this summer.

A lifelong resident of Maine, Estey graduated from the University of Maine with a bachelor's degree in German and later earned her M.E. in student personnel services from the same university. She has worked in various positions at the University of Maine, most recently serving as associate registrar.

Estey claims she had been contemplating a move from Maine for some time. When the High Point position came open, Estey felt maybe it was time to make such a move.

"I wanted anywhere below the frost line," said Estey. "I was really concentrating on the Southeast and Southwest for a job," she added.

Estey brings many ideas and observations to her job. "I think I need to sort of analyze and get used to how things work here before I start trying new things," she said.

Registrar Diana Estey

One area Estey is looking at is the degree audit process. She feels it is possible to give all students (day and evening) automated degree audits every time they register.

"This would allow students to see how they are progressing (towards graduation) twice a year," she noted.

"Computers are the wave of the present and future," according to Estey, when it comes to registrar work. She feels that certain computer functions, as related to registrar work, will benefit the students and the university.

Estey's life isn't all registrar-oriented, though.

She had been living with her father on a 50-acre family farm in Maine when she picked up and moved to the South. "I never realized I would miss the animals and crops on the farm until I left them," Estey said. Estey has adjusted well to what would be a culture shock for most people.

The biggest differenceEstey has experienced is working at a private institution as opposed to a public school like the University of Maine, which enrolls over 11,000 students. "People are much more personal here," she said. "I really like meeting with the students and getting to know so many faculty members. That didn't happen at Maine."

Living in North Carolina has been good so far, Estey reported. She said that High Point seems very easy to get around in, and she looks forward to seeing the nearby beaches and mountains soon.

In her spare time, Estey enjoys reading science fiction and mystery books (especially Dick Francis).

She also does needlework and is an avid gardener. "I'll be able to garden many things here I could only dream of doing in Maine," she said.

Behind the scenes at "Chaplin's Jig"

By Joe Avent
Staff writer

The Student Government Association went to more work than many people know to use this year's Homecoming theme-"Chaplin's Jig: Return to the Roaring '20s."

Charlie Chaplin's name and likeness is copyrighted. One of the many activities required to make the Homecoming dance a success was getting permission to use Chaplin as the theme.

The Charles Chaplin estate is officially known as Bubbles Inc. and represented by the Bliss House, a Massachusetts-based company. The Chaplin family lives in Switzerland.

In August, SGA president, Clint Barkdoll contacted Bliss House, describing the university, the organization that he represented and the purpose for which Chaplin's name and likeness would be used.

There were four sets of correspondence between the Chaplin family and High Point University. The complicated part of these was the fact that each communication first had to go from High Point to Bliss House.

From Bliss House, they went to Switzerland. The correspondence then went through the same channels in reverse to reach the University.

After many faxes and phone calls, the Chaplin family granted permission free of charge. Normally, a license fee costs a minimum of several hundred dollars.

In exchange for a licensing fee, SGA was required to supply Bliss House with a copy of anything that was used with Chaplin on it.

"The process was more laborious than I first thought," Barkdoll said. "But in the end, everything turned out to be worthwhile."

BOOSTING ALCOHOL CONSCIOUSNESS

Students welcome return of BACCHUS

☐ Drivers offer free rides to alchohol-impaired students

By Kerri Mumford
Staff writer

To the delight of many students, Boosting Alcohol Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students (BACCHUS) has started running during the weekends.

BACCHUS is an organization that provides rides for university students over weekends. It runs Friday and Saturday from 9p.m. to 2a.m. Different organizations on campus take turns providing drivers. Call 841-9011, and they will come.

Cathy Sutphen, the president of BACCHUS, feels that the purpose of BACCHUS is to prevent students from drinking and driving. The drivers are instructed not to preach and the names of those who use BACCHUS are strictly confidential.

Cathy also feels that BACCHUS is the opposite of Students Against Drunk Driving (SADD). The latter tries to prevent people from drinking whereas BACCHUS recognizes that people are going to drink but feels that they should be safe and have someone there to give them a ride if the need arises.

There are some rules pertaining to the use of BACCHUS: You can only call twice in one night, and your destination must be within a five mile radius of campus. The drivers are provided with flashlights, a first-aid kit and if a passenger has had a little too much to drink, plastic bags. They are also given gas money and snacks to help them through the night.

Over the past weekend, the sisters of Zeta Tau Alpha drove. They had an enjoyable time.

Ashleigh Barbour, a volunteer, said, "I am glad that I had a chance to help the students of High Point. We all have been stuck without having a safe ride and BACCHUS recognizes this and gives a better option than calling Red Bird taxis. I have used BACCHUS myself and I think it is a great idea."

Alex Munday drove with Ashleigh. She had many of the same views.

"I was happy to help out. It was only one night and I prevented people from drinking and driving and possibly hurting themselves or others." Alex said. "I am glad that the school recognizes the fact that students do drink and aren't always responsible about it. Giving a weekend or a night is not too much to ask if I am helping to save lives."

BACCHUS has 11 members but they are always looking for more. If you are interested in joining, contact Cathy Sutphen at x9171. If you need a safe ride, call the following number...

HPU hostages

"We couldn't believe what had just happened," the source said.

In order to assess the situation, Evans and his team called on various sources for information concerning the suspect, his mental health and the probable reasons for his actions.

"We determined that the suspect had no intent of taking hostages. Something just went wrong," said Evans.

Calling from an enclosed van in the parking lot, Evans began to set up a "relationship" with the suspect, calling him by his nickname, "Priest," to instill trust and encourage McQueen to allow his prisoners to leave the store.

The next two hours were spent convincing McQueen to release the hostages, including his pregnant girlfriend, which he did at approximately 1 a.m.

Fortunately, the hostages were released unharmed.

Unfortunately, another two and a half hours of negotiation did not sway McQueen from taking his life.

Live Shows

Aerosmith shakes Charlotte

By Janet Glazier
Staff Writer

Rock and roll legends Aerosmith rocked the Blockbuster Pavilion in Charlotte with hits from their newest album, Get A Grip, and older albums.

On Sept. 17, the band began the show at approximately 8:30 p.m. and played for about two and a half hours.

The night was clear and full of stars that took up the night sky.

Considering that it had rained all day, this was wonderful. There was a cool breeze coming from the east that was well needed because people were practically sitting on each other.

Aerosmith opened up with "Eat The Rich," one of the many hits off its recent album Get A Grip. Music from the beginning to the current career of Aerosmith was performed.

Eleven cuts were played from the new album, but the concert was evened out with other songs from Permanent Vacation, Pump and classics like "Dream On," "Walk This Way" and "Sweet Emotion."

The crowd at the concert consisted of fans from the ages of 15 to the early 50s.

It felt great to be in a crowd full of an array of different generations, considering each generation is opposite of each other.

The band was led by Steven Tyler and Joe Perry. Steve Tyler was an excellent performer. Because the majority of the crowd was found on the lawn, he performed to the camera as much as on the stage. He not only sang and danced, but had physical contact with his fans. There was the usual slapping of hands seen at every concert.

However, he actually pulled a young woman onto the stage and danced with her. He then proceeded to kiss her, not on the cheek, but on the lips.

That is not something that is expected at a concert. Joe Perry's guitar performance was magnificent. The sound of the guitar was sweet, not the scratchy, harsh sound that can be found in most hard rock. Perry even performed songs from his solo album. The songs had a bluesy beat, an interesting change from the average Aerosmith song. This type of beat sounded great and proved that Aerosmith is talented not only at hard rock, but other types of music.

Speaking of diverse music, the opening band for the concert was Collective Soul, a young group known for the hit song "Shine." They played well, considering this was their first time touring with a big band.

Aerosmith is a legendary rock band that will last for a lifetime, like The Rolling Stones and Pink Floyd.

They attract all ages and will always be known as one of the true classic rock bands.

R.E.M.'s Monster not so scary

By Jeanne Holley
Staff Writer

R.E.M. is back again and better than ever with its new release, Monster. This time around it is evident that there is more to this band than soft acoustic instruments and low-key vocals. Monster roars out some ferocious sounds!

"What's the Frequency, Kenneth?" kicks off this CD with its catchy lyrics that stress the importance of identity and good humor. With the guitar as the primary ringleader, Peter Buck certainly proves himself in this one. This song is so zesty it makes your mouth water.

Buck also plays a significant role in "Star 69" and "Circus Envy." Both of these songs portray the aggressive side of R.E.M. They are composed of lively, upbeat rhythms.

"Tongue" adds a different twist to Monster. Mike Mills does an exeptional job on the piano and organ in this one. His magic touch on the keys makes for a unique and fun song. R.E.M. simply cannot go wrong. It seems like the more they do, the better they get.

Whether you like the old style of R.E.M. or the new style Monster provides the best of both sides. Don't fear Monster ... I promise it doesn't bite!

SOUNDTRACK AND NEW RELEASE PROVIDE EXCELLENT CURE FOR TENSION

Two hard rocking releases to cure stress

By Stephen B. Steffek
Editor-In-Chief

Have you ever been so stressed that you were tempted to throw around your new stereo system or felt like going outside and uprooting a tree.

Music can often alter and act as a remedy for certain moods. Two cures for this emotion are the soundtrack to Oliver Stone's Natural Born Killers and L7's Hungry For Stink

The NBK soundtrack is chock-full of sound bytes from the film, heavy hard rock songs, powerful rap songs and material from doomsayers like Leonard Cohen. While the mood of the album is often gloomy and dark, it is very power driven and gets the old blood pumping. While it can stand on its own as a piece of quality music, it is best viewed as a companion piece to the movie. The moods of both echo each other.

The first cut to catch my attention was Cohen's "Waiting For The Miracle." Composed of a soft bed of instruments beneath the heavy bass tones of the singer's voice, the song provides a very mellow, but gloomy, tone. L7's "Shitlist" captures the mood of the film through the use of a pulsating tale about the effects of getting on people's bad sides.

The Cowboy Junkies' moody remake of the Velvet Underground's "Sweet Jane" is one of my favorites on the album. The song lulls the audience into a comatose trance. It captures, then carries the listener into Bob Dylan's "You Belong To Me," a slow, enjoyable song that continues the trance-like mood.

The listener is then snapped in and out of these moods in a fashion similar to the visual lulling of the film. Hard, fast songs like Nine Inch Nails "Burn" and "Something I Can Never Have" are interweaved with the slower songs, catching the listener off guard and surprising them. In the middle of the album, Patsy Cline's "Back In Baby's Arms" demonstrates the depth of the gloom present on the rest of the album.

Dr. Dre makes an appearance with "The Day The Niggaz Took Over." The song, used to augment a prison riot scene, fits with the general emotion on the album.

Snoop Doggy Dogg and Dogg Pound provide the film's closing song, "What Would U Do?"

Overall, the album is one of the best compilations of its kind. Mixed by Trent Reznor, Nine Inch Nails front man, it offers music from several genres and ties them together.

Hungry For Stink is the latest effort by the L.A. hard-grunge rock band L7. The cuts often grab you by the nose and won't let go as they lead you into an alternate universe that has never been explored. It is a universe previously composed of long haired men with deep voices who sang about death and darkness. The pulsating songs on this album often left my bones vibrating.

They cut right into your soul and rock you into oblivion. The album is laced with a feminine point of view. The first cut on the album, "Andres" is a strong rock and roll song. "Can I Run" faces up to the realities of a woman's fear of being raped. She asks questions about what the situation would involve.

"Fuel My Fire" lets L7 display their awesome guitar power. It is just the kind of song that gets them pissed off enough to throw their aggression into it. "Talk Box," the last cut on the album wraps the mood of the CD up with dreary, slow vocals and instruments that let the band fully immerse itself in the song.

I enjoyed L7's Hungry For Stink a bit more than their Bricks Are Heavy. It rocks a lot harder and carries much more emotion than the band's debut album.

Vertigo Joyride gives "dizzying" performance

By Michael Duez
Staff writer

Vertigo Joyride, a band that hails from Chapel Hill, played Sept. 30 at Kilroy's in Greensboro. The band played old favorites for the patrons as well as new material that will be on its as yet unnamed, forthcoming CD, scheduled to be released sometime in early '95.

Between sets, one long-time fan of the band's mentioned that "[the band] has gotten a lot better." Frankly, I must concur. I first saw Vertigo at the club Ziggy's in the fall of 1992. At that show they came off as a nervous pop band with one strength: a dynamic three-part harmony.

Two years later, the difference in their stage presence and sound is undeniable. The progression from those early days to what the band now sounds like is mirrored by their two recordings and their current gigs.

First, in the fall of 1992, the band released an untitled, five-song demo tape.

While the lyrics of the songs on the tape are catchy, the guitars sound tinny. The overall result is the sound of a very young pop band.

Advice From Friends, the band's spring 1994 CD, is an enjoyable recording in and of itself, with highlights including the songs "In The Streets," affectionately known by many fans as "the harmonica song," "Coming Down" and "A Modest Proposal." Two of the more driving tracks on the CD, "Hey Little," and a cover of the 80s' hit, "Come On Eileen."

The album's main strength is that, for concert-goers, it evokes memories of the band's live gigs. Herein lies the band's strength. Vertigo has tremendous live energy that serves to transform the sound of the band from its two pop recordings into a hard-edged rock sound.

The difference is most remarkable in their new songs, two of which are previously unequaled by the band in their hard-hitting sound. This new breed of Vertigo songs retains the fun energy of the band's earlier songs, yet fully catalyzes their live energy. I talked to Mike Shaw and Andrew Taylor, two of the band members, after the show about the change.

They offered that it was a change from "nervous energy to live energy." "We're getting harder," Mike answered, when asked what direction the band was taking. He and Andrew stated that the band was dissatisfied with the CD.

"They're good songs, but they don't have any of our live energy." They're hoping to capture that energy on their spring release.

Vertigo Joyride has produced a noteworthy, enjoyable CD.

Yet, I must fervently echo the band's perspective, and challenge music lovers to not be satisfied with their recording, but see the band live.

Evergreen holds its own in world of indie bands

Independently labeled San Antonio band works its way up industry ladder

By Peter Romanov
A&E Editor

Evergreen has been beating the eardrums of Texans for a few years and I think it's time for them to expand that beat. Dillon Fence spent many years bathing in the local music scene, but seems to have spread its name quite well. I'd like to see Evergreen do the same. So, North Carolina, meet Evergreen!

Evergreen was formed in Nov. 1991 in San Antonio, Tex. (my home for eight years). The members are Charles Roadman (guitar), Erik Sanden (guitar), James Roadman (drums), Odie (bass) and Kevin Higginbotham (vocals). Evergreen spread its sound around San Antonio by releasing demo tapes. Soon, they found a following.

They performed several live shows and found they didn't really have enough songs to play a long set. They corrected the problem in a unique way.

Every Thursday for three months they performed their rendition of the Rolling Stones' "Exile On Main Street." The band performed the album from front to back to a full house.

They originally planned on doing it two or three times, but it became such a success that they just continued with it.

"Evergreen"

Evergreen is played frequently on San Antonio radio stations and has received praise from local newspapers. It was nominated best underground band in San Antonio this year.

This July it released its first full-length CD, Year of the Down Dog, on its own label, The Cosmodemonic Record Company. In a recent phone interview with Charles Roadman, he told me, " (This CD was) a very regional release.

Very low key. The CD is supposed to be a growing process. We're still growing." I was a little surprised at this comment because the band's music is very solid. I don't see anything that needs improving.

The CD is full of the imagery of abandonment. The songs have a tendency to glisten in areas. Higginbotham's raspy vocals spark emotions in the listener. There are sincere feelings flowing in that voice. Each song is stained with guitars and the music sometimes hides in a corner and then jumps to the center demanding to be heard.

The lyrics range from bizarre statements like. "I need a straw to suck the bags from my eyes" to confessional lyrics like. "You're so much more than cliche. but the words just come out that way."

Evergreen has performed with The Fluid and most recently supported the Tragically Hip on their latest tour. Roadman told me they may make a North Carolina appearance in late November.

There are no plans to release Year of the Down Dog nationwide, but don't fret, fellow Panthers. because it's available for $11.50 (postage included) by mail. If you're interested. here's the address: Evergreen. P.O. Box 12861. San Antonio. TX. 78212. Make checks payable to James Roadman. This band is worth taking a chance on. If you like bands like Hootie and the Blowfish or Tragically Hip. then you'll like Evergreen's sound. Evergreen is ever good.

Alternative bands pay tribute to Carpenters on new compilation

By Stephen B. Steffek
Editor-In-Chief

The tender voice of Karen Carpenter dominated the radio waves, and unfortunately for me, my parents' eight-track stereo system throughout the '70s.

Now, a group of alternative artists has decided to provide our generation with an introduction, or reminder, of the music of this over-sweet and sappy sibling group with If I were A Carpenter.

When I first heard about an album fully crafted from old Carpenters hits, I sort of giggled and removed the thought from my mind.

However, the first time I listened to the album, I found myself enthralled by the diverse recreations of the songs that had graced my ears throughout my childhood.

The first track on the album to catch my attention was Sonic Youth's feedback-laced version of "Superstar." This song, the first release from the album. adds echoing vocals and strong guitars to the song.

The Cranberries provide a pretty mellow version of the song "Close To You." The lead singer's soft vocal, backed up by the soft instrumentation, is very reminiscent of the original.

Bettie Serveert's rendering of "For All We Know" provides a semi-faithful version of the original while projecting her angelic voice over a soft background of stringy guitars.

Dishwalla does an excellent job on the track "It's Gonna Take Some Time." The tune begins with a very catchy beat and maintains itself rather than dropping off into oblivion by changing pace several times throughout the song.

The music industry's newest breakthrough artist, Sheryl Crow, offers an excellent version of "Solitaire." This soulful tune catches attention and keeps it throughout the song.

Former Concrete Blonde songstress Johnette Napolitano teamed up with Marc Moreland to offer a hard-rocking version of "Hurting Each Other." Her voice, somewhat reminiscent of Karen Carpenter's, soars over the throbbing bass guitar. It is one of my favorite tracks on the album.

Redd Kross' version of "Yesterday Once More" is also done with a lot of style and keeps the audience tapping its feet in unison with the song.

If I Were A Carpenter far exceeded any low expectations that I may have had.

It is a throughly enjoyable album that provides pleasant recreations of the songs that once kept the Carpenters on my parents' turntable.

Dave Matthews Band returns to music scene with "Dreaming"

By Dan Smith
Special to the Chronicle

The Dave Matthews Band has returned to the college music scene with a new album and a new sensibility.

While remaining true to its roots. the band has broken fresh ground with its latest effort "Under the Table and Dreaming."

The album, which marks the band's first appearance on a major recording label (RCA), is far more commercial than the independently-released "Remember Two Things."

However, the higher prodution value and stronger arrangements seem to work well for DMB. "Under the Table and Dreaming" offers the same mix of fusion, disco and rock-a-billy as earlier recordings, but the album has a much deeper respect for jazz and blues, which adds a new element to the band's sound.

Songs such as "Dancing Nancies" and "Pay For What You Get" are full of the jazz and blues influences while "What Would You Say" and "Rhyme and Reason" offer the straight-forward rock Dave Matthews fans have come to expect.

The album also includes new studio arrangements of "Ants Marching" and "Satellite" which were both popular tracks for local college radio stations from "Remember Two Things."

"Under the Table and Dreaming" measures up to expectations for a band like Dave Matthews.

The album and band have obviously fallen under the wing of the almighty major label, but nonetheless succeed in providing a wonderful listening experience.

Remember two things: buy this album, and listen to it—a lot.

Burns hits homer with "Baseball"

By Pat Heller
Staff Writer

Once again Ken Burns has shown his passion for displaying America's heritage with his latest documentary series. This time he has done it with an amazing series on baseball. Before this latest documentary, Burns was known for his Civil War series which received incredible reviews.

This newest project which took him over a year to produce was not a simple task. He had to take over 100 years of baseball and condense that into less than 20 hours of footage. What came out of this painstaking work was an amazing display of history and of American tradition. He broke down the history of the game into nine innings. with each inning corresponding to a time frame in baseball.

What he did to tell this story of America's pastime was to show pictures of the game and actual footage as the narrator spoke over.

Between this he had commentaries on the game by players, journalists and professionals. This is what made it so well done, it was the fact that he had people talking about the game that had no connection to the game itself.

It was well known psychologists, doctors and other people who talked about the game and how it affected their own lives. He showed the real human interest in this simple game.

As the series concluded in the ninth inning, you were perplexed by the game.

Your whole life you have grown hearing about the legend of Ruth or Willie May's incredible catch in the '54 Series or Bill Buckner's error that cost the Red Sox a World Championship in '86.

Finally now it was all woven together into one story that madebaseball come together.

Ken Burns had once again told the story of America's history, this time through the eyes of baseball.

BOOK REVIEW

Tartt offers intrigue, supspense in college memoirs of Richard Papen

By Amy Cavallo
Staff writer

An exclusive clique of six shady college students, a contemptuous outsider and one dead chicken farmer begin the gripping novel The Secret History by Donna Tartt.

Set in Vermont, the story is the drunken college memoir of California native Richard Papen. Richard lies about his middle-class upbringing, seeing that his classmates are children of the upper crust, privileged families.

However, he is willingly detatched from his spoiled and wealthy peers, in search of a more inspiring circle of friends.

Richard finds his inspiration in five Greek majors who are equally detatched from the rest of the student body. They are a group of intellectuals who discuss ancient Greece and spend their weekends in the country, cooking elaborate meals and sipping wine.

Richard is hesitantly accepted into their tight circle, consisting of four males and one female. He learns that they are the faithful disciples of Julian Morrow, their classics professor who chooses his students and prohibits them from taking any other courses but his.

What transpires out of his acceptance into this forbidden company is a frightening tale of deceit, blackmail and murder. Richard learns of the accidental murder of a chicken farmer that had taken place when the group tried to hold an ancient Greek ritual.

He also discovers that one relentlessly irritating member of the group, Bunny, was left out of the action. Bunny is the persistent thorn in their sides, using the knowledge of what his friends have done for blackmail. Richard's new group of friends is tormented with a grave decision, that ultimately involves Richard and another murder.

The book is beautifully written, well organized and enormously addictive. There is no knowledge of Greek required, only an active imagination and a library card. The 1992 bestseller, The Secret History, is shelved in our library

Kappa Delta

ΓΓ Chapter

Kappa Delta has had a wild and crazy month. We placed second in Greek Week, gave out three open bids and had Sister Brenda Egedy nominated to the Homecoming Court. Congratulations to Gamma Gamma's newest pledges: Jennifer Fox, Natalie Walker and Shannon Spohn.

We would also like to extend our congratulations to ΠΚΑ, ΔΣΦ, ΛΧΑ, and ΘΧ for their newest pledges, good luck guys.

The sisters of Kappa Delta are also sponsoring the First Annual Mr. Panther contest, show your support by nominating your favorite HPU male. All the money raised will be donated to the Childrens Hospital in Richmond, VA. We will also be sponsoring a 50/50 raffle soon, so get ready to win some cash.

We wish everyone continued success in the rest of the semester. Special congratulations to our newest sisters: Chantelle Ewen, Staci Seachrest and Amy Carpenter. Happy Halloween everyone!

Pi Kappa Alpha

ΔΩ Chapter

The brothers of Pi Kappa Alpha would like to congratulate Dan Smith, Bryan Warren, and Brian Roderick on accepting bids to our fraternity. The Pikes participated in a highway clean up and are co-sponsoring an upcoming AIDS awareness program. We would like to congratulate all greeks for their efforts during Greek Week.

Zeta Tau Alpha

ΔΓ Chapter

The sisters of Zeta Tau Alpha have been very busy in the past few weeks. Traci Lyons represented ZTA on the homecoming court where she was second runner-up. Congratulations Traci. During Greek week, we were paired up with the brothers of Lambda Chi who were very enthusiastic. The other teams put up a good fight but the ZTAs and Lambda Chis came out on top. We would like to thank them for helping us win and for a great week.

During the past weekend, our pledges received their big sisters. Tiffany Moore's big sister is Beth Bickford and Alex Munday picked Andrea McCoy. To celebrate, we had a mixer with the brothers of Theta Chi.

Delta Sigma Phi

ΔΖ Chapter

Recently, the brothers of Delta Sigma Phi chartered two buses and took approximately 150 people to Raleigh for the lawn party which was sponsored by our brothers at N.C. State. There were about 10,000 people there with Hootie and the Blowfish headlining the event.

Congratulations to our new pledges: Eric Drum, Wes Wright and Craig Donnelly.

In this past week, we were very busy with Greek Week and Alumni Open House. We would like to thank the sisters of Phi Mu for their great participation and a fun week. At Open House, we had high attendance and were very happy to have such a high turnout.

We are looking forward to many social functions after Fall Break. Have a happy Halloween everyone!

Phi Mu

ΓΖ Chapter

The sisters of Phi Mu would like to congratulate all Greeks on their placing in Greek Week. Special thanks go out to the brothers of Delta Sigma Phi, our partners, for their great participation in working with us as a team. Overall, we were satisfied with the results of the week. Special congratulations go out to Angie Springstead for winning first place in the chicken fights! Also congratulations to Lambda Chi Alpha and Zeta Tau Alpha for their first place overall finish.

Our alumni open house was held the same day as Homecoming and we had several alumni attend. The alumni made the day a happy but serious occasion in singing songs with present members and proving that our bond truly lasts for a lifetime.

Congratulations to the following sisters who received Phi Mu scholarships: Rachel Allen, Jeanine Danzi, and Angie Springstead. Have a safe and relaxing Fall Break everyone!

Theta Chi

EA Chapter

We would like to welcome our newest pledge, Brian Prince, into Theta Chi fraternity.

Also, we would like to announce the 40th anniversary of our chapter, Epsilon Alpha.

Before Theta Chi became national, we were called Epsilon Eta.

On December 11, 1954, Epsilon Eta became the Epsilon Alpha chapter of Theta Chi national fraternity.

Last Friday, Sept. 30. we had a mixer with the Zeta Tau Alpha sorority to celebrate the announcement of those who received little sisters.

On Sept. 24, we volunteered at the Day In The Park Festival and set up for the High Point Jaycees.

As of October 4, Theta Chi stands at six wins and one loss in intramural Ultimate Frisbee.

ΘΧ and ΚΔ came in second place for Greek Week. We would like to thank them for being great partners.

Lambda Chi Alpha

ΙΦΖ Chapter

Lambda Chi Alpha believes in giving back to the community. Nov. 5 we are taking part in the Second annual LCA North American Food Drive to raise food for our local needy.

Thanks to ZTA for teaming up with us for Greek Week and winning by a considerable margin over the other fraternities and sororities. Go Zeta Lambda Chi!

TUG OF WAR!

During Greek Week, the Zetas and Lambda Chis battle it out in tug-a-war. The team took first place in the event as well as the overall competition. In second place was Theta Chi-Kappa Delta: in third, Delta Sigma Phi-Phi Mu; in fourth, Pi Kappa Alpha-Alpha Gamma Delta.

Frat houses receive repairs

By Jason Ulsch
Staff writer

Fraternities got a pleasant surprise when they returned from summer vacation. Three of the four fraternity houses received much needed major renovations.

The Delta Sigma Phi house, which suffered fire damage last semester, got the most attention, while the Theta Chi house, the newest of the four, received only freshly painted walls.

Greek housing has suffered greatly at High Point for several reasons. One reason is the yearly "party damage" that occurs. Another is the houses are just old, such as Lambda Chi's. The Lambda Chi's basement was condemned by inspectors last semester. It was clear that something needed to be done.

The school hired an independent contractor to handle repairs, making the houses more liveable. Some of the changes included cable television, ceiling fans, new back decks, new walls, cement walkways and a new coat of paint on the exteriors.

Additional improvements included new support beams in the Lambda Chi basement and roof repair to the Pi Kappa Alpha house. Randy Baker, who has lived in the Lambda Chi house for two years said, "The house was falling apart in every aspect last year, but the school did a respectable job in repairing it for this year."

New Greek housing is being planned for the future, but for now the school is basically keeping the current houses as nice as possible. All of the fraternities are thankful for the renovations and are anxiously awaiting the newer dwellings.

Men's cross country sports seven of conference's top ten runners

By Kevin Fielder
Sports writer

With seven ranked top ten runners, the men's cross country team is looking quite impressive.

The Panthers are looking exceptionally good thus far in the fall '94 season. They have already competed in four meets against NCAA Division II colleges and universities.

Their record at the present time is 26-1 with their only loss being to Life College of Georgia, one of the top ranked NAIA institutions in the country.

At this moment, seven of the Panthers are ranked in the Carolinas Conference top ten at the distance of five miles. Robert McCulloch is No. 1 with a time of 26:09. Second is Sean Carter with a time of 27:51. Third is Brian Donaruma with his time of 28:44.

Behind him, ranked fourth, is Mike Dyess at 28:49. Ranked fifth is Jeff Goddard with a time of 29:19. Ranked eighth in the conference with a time of 31:46 is Daniel Doub followed by ninth-ranked Anthony Billings at 32:07.

Coach Bob Davidson is stiill awaiting word on the eligibility of English transfer Kojo Kyereme. Kojo, who continues with the team, should be eligible for the conference tournament in November.

Though they are doing quite well, the Panthers are being asked to take their ability a step higher.

Assistant coach Jimmy Burchette said, "Coach Davidson has challenged Carter, Dyess and Goddard to improve on their time, which may affect qualifying individually and conference-wise for the national meet."

The Panthers finished second to East Carolina at the East Carolina Invitational Saturday. High Point placed four runners in the top ten, but lost to the Pirates 38-37.

McCulloch, Dyess, Donaruma and Carter led the way for the Panthers in the three-team meet.

It may be small in number, but the women's cross country team is holding its own.

In the beginning of the year, it looked as though the women's cross country team would not be a major force in the sport. It had only five runners, which is a small squad, but just enough to keep them competitive.

The element of numbers has not slowed the Lady Panthers at all. Through four meets, they have achieved a record of 20-6 in NCAA Division II competition.

"The key to success of the women has been the consistency of only five runners," said assistant coach Jimmy Burchette.

If this consistency along with improvement continues, the Lady Panthers repeat as conference champions.

All five runners are ranked in the Carolinas Conference. Liz Young is ranked No. 2 with her record time of 20:17. Melissa Lansberg is ranked third with 20:39 as her time. Fourth is Rozz Hall at 21:56. Seventh in the conference is Geisa O'Reilly with a time of 23:25, while Lisa Fuller with a time of 25:34 is ranked fourteen.

Coach Bob Davidson still would like all the runners to improve their times. "The biggest challenge Coach Davidson has issued to Lansberg and Hall is to improve their meet times," says Jimmy Burchette.

If the Lady Panthers continue to do this well throughout the season, the team could definitely become a force when it is time for nationals.

McCulloch can do more than just run

By Kate Wright
Staff writer

Last December, while many of us were busy cramming for finals and packing up to go home for winter break, Robert McCulloch was looking for a new beginning.

Robert, a 30-year-old freshman from Glasgow, Scotland, entered his name in College Prospects of America in hopes of finding a school where he would be able to run cross country and track as well as get a good education. The result of his search was High Point University.

After leaving school at 16, Robert became an apprentice at the Scottish Daily Record and Sunday Mail. While working for the paper, he wanted to have another trade to fall back on. So he went to The Alex Cumming School of Chiropody (a foot specialty) part-time for two years.

During this time, he worked the night shift at the paper. To stay in shape, he ran seven miles to work. When his shift ended at 2 a.m., he ran home.

He worked at the paper for twelve-and-a-half years as a compositor in the print department until last April when computers made his job unnecessary.

"I knew this day was coming. That's why I started looking for schools in December," he said.

He had a choice either to move to another department in the paper or take a redundancy payment (money received as an agreement to leave his job). He decided to leave the paper and Scotland, using the redundancy payment and the money he received from selling his car to start over in America.

The move to the United States offered some pleasing changes to Robert. "It's a lot less hectic," he said. He enjoys having more time on his hands, though he hasn't had an opportunity to see much outside of High Point. "I suppose that will come with time."

Many students seem to welcome the non-traditional freshman. Roberts Hall RA, senior Kevin Fielder, enjoys having him on the hall.

"In a lot of ways, I could learn from this guy. He's an international student, and yeah, his age," Fielder said. "Having someone on the hall who's actually lived a different lifestyle and lived longer adds to some interesting conversation."

Robert is a unique addition to the High Point community. We could all learn from his knowledge and determination.

Thomson claims O'Briant Memorial by one stroke

Romani, McGee help teammate to victory

By Rob Humphreys
Assistant Editor

Nothing unusual here. Grant Thomson just won another golf tournament, that's all.

Thomson, entering his second year at High Point, fired a one over par 211 to win the three-day Tom O'Briant Memorial. As a team, the Panthers finished fifth overall.

"It was good fun -- a good team effort." Thomson said. "The guys are doing really well. I'm just looking forward to the next semester when everybody's eligible."

Four golfers, including defending conference champion Donnie Franks, have sat out the fall season due to lack of credit hours. The remaining seven have shot quality golf.

Tony Romani, who finished tied for 12th at the Uwharrie Point Invitational, teamed with Thomson during second round best-ball competition. The pair shot a 5-under 65.

During the alternate-shot style first round, Allen McGee broke par on the back nine along with Thomson.

"He sets a heck of an example," coach Dee Sasser said of Thomson. "Grant obviously has a chance to turn pro and he could be a real pre-madonna if he wanted to be, but he's one of the gang. He pays his dues like everybody else."

"We've got a much deeper team," Sasser said. "The quality of players improved a lot and everything's moving real well. We're a lot better this fall. That was our plan of attack."

High Point attacked the Uwharrie Point Invitational Monday and Tuesday, placing fifth out of 21 teams. The Panthers, who had a two-day total of 610, finished six shots behind second place UNC Chapel Hill. North Carolina State won the event with a 593.

Romani was the top High Point finisher with a two-day total of 151, followed by Jonathon Whitmire. one shot back in 15th place.

Thomson placed 21st with a 153, Dave Faulkner tied for 22nd at 154 and McGee shot a 162.

"The biggest factor is last year we followed Grant Thomson," Sasser said. "As Grant went, so went the team. What's happening now is, instead of riding on him, they're riding with him."

The Panthers have finished the fall season and will return from fall break to hit the weights and the pavement.

"We're going to take a couple weeks off, work on academics, prepare for the spring," said Sasser. "We'll run twice a week, do some distance work. We'll lift major muscle groups three times a week."

Another day, another win

Baseball sweeps three games at Louisburg tournament

From staff reports

The baseball team nears the close of the fall season with a 6-4 record, including a 3-0 performance at the annual Louisburg tournament.

After losing its opening game 14-5 to Wingate, High Point notched wins against Lenoir Rhyne and Guilford. The Panthers took a 3-2 record into Louisburg before notching three straight wins in the round-robin tournament.

The first round saw High Point knock off Barton 2-1, followed by a come-from-behind 6-4 win over Mount Olive the next game. In its last game, High Point beat host Louisburg 7-4.

"We're coming together real well," said freshman reliever Joe Christy. "I don't see any problems. Once we get into the bulk of the season, we're going to be a lot better than last year."

As of Tuesday, the Panthers had lost their last two games, being held to just four hits during the Catawba tournament. After a 3-1 loss to Pfeiffer in the opening round, High Point was blanked 1-0 by Belmont Abbey.

"The pitching's been there, and the defense has been superb, but the offense hasn't," Christy said. "We haven't seemed to get the key hit that breaks everything open."

"Crunch-time" for men's soccer team

Players must rebound from homecoming loss

By Keith Corbett
Sports writer

The cheerful homecoming festivities were cut short for the men's soccer team as it lost 1-0 to Belmont Abbey on a second half penalty kick.

Amid Saturday's setback, leading scorer A.J. Deluka believes there was a sense of "coming home" for Panther players.

"We are starting to play much better as a team," Deluka said. "We just need to finish the opportunities we make: and well, a little luck wouldn't hurt."

The question remains — is luck going to be enough to carry this young team to the next level?

"We need momentum," said striker Sean Jones. "We need to make a full commitment to ourselves both on and off the field."

The Panthers hold a 3-7-1 overall record and are 1-1-1 in the Carolinas Conference. With three conference games remaining until the CC tournament, many players are realizing its "do or die time."

"Crunch-time is here," defender Whitaker Augier said. "We've got to step up. We're playing hurt — Jeremy Jack, Sean Jones and myself—but we've got to do it."

"We're outplaying these teams, but we're just losing it at the end."

- Assistant coach Heather Puckett

Stepping up is just what assistant coach Heather Puckett is asking them to do. "We have to come to play 90 minutes; not 50, not 60, but the full 90 minutes. We're outplaying these teams, but we're just losing it at the end."

Women's soccer propelled by five-game unbeaten streak

By Sonny Gann
Sports writer

After a slow start, the women's soccer team has won four of its last five games, and tied the other aganist nationally ranked Catawba, bringing its record to 6-4-1 overall and 3-2 in the Carolinas Conference. The improvement has been excellent, but Coach Woody Gibson still wants more.

"We are playing pretty well now, but we can't rest on what we have accomplished so far," said Gibson. "We have to keep building and play as well as we can in the conference tournament. Our big goal is to win it."

The players on the team know their talent. They know they are a team to be reckoned with in the conference. With a good returning nucleus and several key freshmen and transfers, unity was a problem at the beginning of the year. Now, they have confidence, and faces are beaming in the Panther Den.

"I guess it took four or five weeks for the team to come together," said sophmore Andrea Crossley. "Now that we have unity, it's evident on the field with the scores. I'm optimistic about the rest of the season."

"Well, at first the year was going kind of slow, but now we are playing a lot better," said junior Erin McConville. "We have learned to play better together and are more cohesive now. We are more confident."

After squashing Meredith 13-0 to begin the year, the Panthers lost four of their next five games. All four were close loses. Two were non conference and two were conference. Lenoir Rhyne and Elon both beat High Point 2-0 in non-conference games. St. Andrews won in overtime 2-0 and Coker 2-1 in conference victories over the Panthers.

Since then, the women have reeled off wins against Wingate 2-1 and Chowan 3-0, and crushed conference foes Pfeiffer 8-0 and Belmont Abbey 10-0 Saturday.

Still, the game that the ladies talk about is the 3-3 tie against Catawba. Catawba entered the game ranked in NCAA Division II and had only suffered one loss all season.

The Panthers lost a heartbreaker in double overtime to Catawba last season. This year, that wouldn't be the case. Catawba had leads of 1-0, 2-1, and 3-2, but the Panthers never quit and fought back to tie the score.

"I think with effort and heart, like the game against Catawba, our confidence will increase against tough opponents," said Crossley. "We know we can compete against teams like that."

"We felt good about our tie with Catawba," said Gibson. "Still, any time you look back and say what you did is good, you may get complacent. Don't be content with what you've done. Keep building, improving and work toward the conference tournament."

Volleyball 5-5 after loss of hitter Reed

Wham!

▨ Goal of making nationals looms on horizon

By Stephanie Lewis
Sports writer

Despite the loss of hitter Pam Reed from the women's volleyball team, the Lady Panthers have an impressive 5-5 mark after forfeiting their first 14 games. As of Tuesday the team is 3-3 in the Carolinas Conference, contending for a conference title.

"Our goal is to make it to nationals," said starting setter Laurie Kuykendall.

To accomplish this goal, coach Teresa Shaw-Faucette has been incorporating new plays that give the team an added edge on the court. This is an advantage because the young team will also be able to utilize these plays next season.

Another reason for the Lady Panthers' rebound is their defense.

"On court, we make up for a lack of height with intense defense," Kuykendall said.

The high level of desire is evident in the way the defense is able to cover the entire court. If the blockers are not able to reject a hit, the receivers are there to prevent a score.

Freshman Jamie Walsh has taken the place of Reed at middle hitter. Kuykendall said that "Walsh has done an outstanding job considering the circumstances. After losing Pam, we tend to take it one game at a time, and overall that has been successful for us."

The volleyball team, while adjusting to a new lineup, still has high hopes of going to nationals.

Men's tennis cruises in off-season

▨ 2-0 halfway through the fall

By Rob Humphreys
Assistant Editor

The men's tennis team opened the fall season with easy victories against Catawba and Lenoir Rhyne. High Point began by blanking Lenoir Rhyne 7-0 at home, followed by a 5-2 shellacking of the Indians in Salisbury.

As a team, the Panthers took 96 games to the Bears' 10. No. 1 seed Pekka Pohjamo. no. 2 player Kulle Kuusisto, No. 3 Donald Marriott and No. 6 Matt Laslo each double-bagled their oponents, 6-0, 6-0 in singles. Andrew Awai (No. 4) won 6-2, 6-0 while No. 5 Keith Corbett tallied a 6-0, 6-1 victory.

Pro-set doubles competition saw the No. 1 team of Pohjamo - Marriott and the No. 2 team of Kuusisto - Awai both register 8-3 wins. The No. 3 doubles team of Corbett - Jack Tran won 8-1.

Catawba posed a little more competition. Pohjamo and Kuusisto won easily. but Marriott lost a close three-setter 6-2, 2-6, 7-5. Awai won 6-4, 6-4 and Corbett remained undefeated with a 6-2, 6-1 victory. Laslo lost 6-2, 6-4 at the six spot.

The Panthers won two of three in doubles with the No. 1 and 2 teams winning 8-5 and 8-2, respectively. The No. 3 team took an 8-6 loss.

Todd Hooper has been unable to play due to an inflamed muscle in his right shoulder.

"We're off to a decent start," coach Jerry Tertzagian said. "But the big part of the season is in the spring."

HPU's Pekka Pohjamo took top honors at the Lexington Rolex tennis tournament last weekend. Pohjamo, who entered as the No. 3 seed in a field of 30 area college players, knocked off top seed Chris Simpson 7-6, 6-4 in the semifinals. He then cruised to a 6-0, 6-3 win in the finals.

Pohjamo, High Point's No. 1 player, now advances to the National Rolex tournament in Oklahoma the last weekend of October.

Women's tennis yet to win a match in fall

▨ Johannson, Miller lead a young team with little college experience

By Rob Humphreys
Assistant Editor

At least there is one good thing about the women's tennis team's 0-3 record: It's still the off-season.

The Lady Panthers are using the fall season to get an indication as to what problems should be addressed before the spring season — when it counts.

Technically, last month's losses to Queens (6-1), Catawba (5-2) and Peace Junior College (6-1) don't count on the team's official record. But a win now and then wouldn't hurt.

No. 1 seed Asa Johansson and No. 3 player Christina Miller have carried the team. Johans-son (2-1), a junior, collected a 6-3, 6-2 win over Queens and a 6-3, 6-3 victory against Catawba in singles. Miller, a sophomore, won 6-4, 6-2 over Catawba and 6-4, 6-4 in a scrimmage against Peace.

Johansson, Miller and No. 2 player Heather Haberfield (jr) bring the most experience to the "senior-less" team. The No. 4 through 7 players consist of two freshmen. Jen Meehan (4) and Mandy Paugh (7). sophomore Kristen Ellis (6). and No. 5, junior Kim Robinson.

"They're young and inexperienced in the bottom numbers," said coach Jerry Tertzagian, who begins his first year coaching the women's team. "In the top there's a little more experience."

Tertzagian replaces former coach Leigh Sink, who resigned after last year. Since he also coaches men's tennis, Tertzagian will be forced to find a balance between the two teams.

Though the women have yet to show signs of being able to live up to their third-place Carolinas Conference finish. Tertzagian feels progress is innevitable.

"They're working hard," Tertzagian said. "We're going to be alright. I expect us to improve a lot more as the season goes on, but they've got to work hard in practice."

Henry's lore lives on after college running days

By Tanya Hollingsworth
Staff writer

In his five years at High Point University, Tracey Henry has not only had a profound effect on his community, but has also made a lasting impression in the collegiate track and field arena.

By the time he graduates, Henry will be a four time All-American in track and field, having placed fourth in the 400 meter hurdles and sixth in the triple jump at the NAIA National Track And Field Competitions in Azusa, Cal. He was also chosen Most Valuable Player on his team last year.

Henry began his running career as a high school sophmore and plans to continue his commitment to the sport for many years. After graduation, this Burlington, N.C. native will run as an independent, representing himself in collegiate meets. Henry's aspirations include becoming a part of the United States Olympic track and field team.

Henry chose High Point because of the excellent sports medicine program, as well as for the opportunity to use his abilities to help pay for his education through a partial athletic scholarship.

Coach Bob Davidson, who recruited Henry, said, "Tracey certainly ranks as one of the best track athletes in HPU history. His strength lies in his versatility. As an athlete who competes as a sprinter, a hurdler, a triple jumper and in relays, Tracy has earned All-American status in three different track events.

"He is an outstanding person and a very dedicated and coachable athlete."

Henry will graduate with a major in sports medicine and a minor in psychology. He plans to attend graduate school at Georgia State University in Atlanta.

Henry is not only a student-athlete, but an individual dedicated to his university. His involvements outside the classroom and off the track include being the president of Black Cultural Awareness, a university ambassador, a member of the Student Government Association and part of the Admissions team.

Henry says, "I have enjoyed my years at High Point. They will serve as an important stepping-stone for bigger and better things."

Delta Mu Delta, an honor society for business majors. She is active in American Humanics and BACCHUS, which promotes safe drinking and helps avoid drinking and driving. She is also the student representative for IDS.

If there is one fault that Coyle can find with this university, it is that most students do not take advantage of the activities and opportunities provided.

"I don't think people realize or care about how much time, money and effort go into the planning of certain events such as student orientation, homecoming, comedians and talent shows. It's really sad when turnouts are low, especially when everyone has worked so hard. " Coyle said.

Coyle is an excellent organizer and an overall "people person." With a smile, she says she hopes to pursue a master's degree in business and get a job allowing her to travel for about two years.

"I love dealing with the public, so no matter what, I want to do that," she said.

"I believe that HPU is our dress rehearsal for the 'real thing' and the more seriously we play our roles now, the better prepared we'll be when our time comes to show the world what we're all about." Coyle said.

With this positive outlook and reasonable insight into life, she is sure to be a success.

Air Force Singing Sergeants fly into High Point

By Jason Schneider
Staff writer

The United States Air Force Band and the Singing Sergeants are scheduled to present a concert in the Millis Center Sunday at 2 p.m.

Conducted by Lieut. Col. Alan L. Bonner, the band has been seen in concert by over 90 million people and has been heard by millions through radio and television.

The band, known as "America's International Musical Ambassadors," has completed 20 international concert tours in 49 countries. In recent years, its tours have included Europe, Asia, South America and the People's Republic of China.

The Singing Sergeants are the official chorus of the United States Air Force. Formed in 1945, it is one of the oldest major military choruses. Its repertoire includes vocal music from opera, traditional and contemporary choral literature, folk songs, pop standards, oratorio, Broadway, jazz and comedy.

The group's performances include appearances with the New York Philharmonic, the Boston and Cincinnati Pops, and the Cleveland, Houston, Philadelphia and National Symphony Orchestras, as well as several TV appearances.

Tickets for the event are free to students, their families and the public. They may be secured in room 212 of the Campus Center.

HPU soccer teams notch first round victories in tournament

CIAC news release

Like good hosts, the men's and women's soccer teams advanced to second round competition in the Carolinas Conference tournament last weekend. The fifth-seeded men handed Coker a 2-1 defeat while the third-seeded Lady Panthers ripped Pfeiffer 7-0.

The men (6-10-1, 3-3-1) set the tone early in the game. Sean Jones assisted Dave Sullenberger at the 16-minute mark and Dean Preston scored on a Kevin Weyer pass 20 minutes later for the Panthers. George Vakoutis recorded 11 saves in goal.

In women's action, Erin McConville and Jonelle Corsey both registered two goals as the Lady Panthers (11-6-1, 3-3-0 scored five points in the second half. Pfeiffer had just one shot on goal while High Point took 26.

In the semi-finals, the men host top-seed Belmont Abbey Thursday at noon while the women host top-seed Coker Friday at noon. For full soccer coverage, see page13.

☐ Carolinas-Virginia Athletic Conference welcomes 11 schools

From CIAC reports

School presidents of the Carolinas Conference and presidents of three independent colleges announced formation and membership in the new Carolinas-Virginia Athletic Conference (CVAC). The new group will replace the Carolinas Intercollegiate Athletic Conference.

Schools joining the conference are Erskine, Longwood and Queens colleges, with Newberry College officials considering membership, according to the CVAC. The 11- or 12-team NCAA Division II conference will begin competition in the fall of 1995.

"I think the conference will be a plus," High Point athletic director and men's basketball coach Jerry Steele said.

Among major concerns of the new conference are academics and gender equity.

"We share those concerns at High Point University and are very pleased that the expanded conference will continue to address them," Steele said.

Conference teams will compete in regular season play and at CVAC championship tournaments in each conference sport. Men and women may compete in 12 CVAC sports, including baseball, basketball, cross country, golf, soccer, softball, tennis and volleyball.

Greek walkout detrimental to campus relations

Oct. 19 early exit of SGA raises serious questions

By Clinton Barkdoll
Editorial Editor

In the past, these editorial pages have often served as an area to vent opinion about Greek/independent relations. Usually, this debate is rather philosophical in nature, lacking substance and argument from both sides.

Like many things, such debate is cyclical, becoming hot and cold from year to year. It has been quite some time since an editorial addressing these issues has been printed on the pages you are reading.

Relations between Greeks and independents have been sometimes superficial and maybe precarious, but at the same time showing signs of improvement once in a while.

Greeks are constantly coming under scrutiny to improve relations with the rest of the campus. Community service projects and participation in other activities have somewhat bridged the gap between different groups on campus.

Any strides in this area were dissolved, though, on the evening of Oct. 19 at the Student Government Association meeting.

The SGA considered proposals that night from the Interfraternity Council (IFC) and Panhellenic Council totaling well over $4000 (see boxes). After each proposal was soundly defeated by the SGA legislature, over a dozen Greeks in attendance (male and female) immediately walked out of the meeting as a sign of immature protest.

Like the snot-nosed kids who take their ball and go home, these Greeks didn't get their way and summarily exited the meeting. While the rest of the SGA members (including two or three Greeks who stayed) laughed at these Greek babies, the meeting continued.

This incident raises some serious concerns.

It's important to note that High Point University's social honor code adoption was also on the SGA agenda later that night. Apparently, the teary-eyed Greeks who left the meeting didn't care about an honor code that would affect the way the whole campus lives.

Moreover, these Greeks were representatives of their respective organizations. Whether the monetary requests were valid or not is irrelevant. By blatantly protesting the SGA, the Greeks may have committed political suicide for now.

Greek organizations can be assured that what happened on the night of Oct. 19 left an indelible impression in the minds of all in attendance. This includes many freshmen, campus leaders, athletes and a wide range of others.

It is also a certainty that the SGA budget committee will not forget Oct. 19 when considering spring budgets in a few weeks either.

Greek organizations do a lot of good things on and off campus. Moreover, kudos to the Greek representatives who stayed throughout the meeting (one of these individuals was the Panhellenic representative).

Greeks are a positive attribute to this campus. Many of the good things they do often go overlooked. Each fraternity and sorority have many fine people to boast as well. It's too bad that a few ignorant members of these Greek organizations have caused damage to the entire system.

The walkout may have future financial and organizational (spring rush) ramifications. Greek attempts to build unity on campus and improve relations will be forever tarnished and ridiculed by everyone who attended the Oct. 19 SGA meeting.

Small deeds have large consequences; that, my Greek friends, is unfortunate.

The Oct. 19 SGA money requests from IFC and Panhellenic

The Interfraternity Council and Panhellenic Council are voting members of the SGA. Neither IFC nor Panhellenic received a budget from SGA last year because they did not meet attendence requirements and/or submit their budget on time. Below are the IFC and Panhellenic requests at the Oct. 19 SGA meeting.

IFC requested $3065 for the following items:

-- $600 for t-shirts, banners, kickballs, a plastic slide, a baby pool and other supplies
-- $600 to attend a Frisbee tournament for admission fees, t-shirts, hotel costs and food/drinks
-- $150 for a food drive
-- $600 for IFC cookouts (food, drinks, supplies and a D.J.)
-- $450 for an IFC benefit to AIDS (to be held in the spring) to "start planning"
-- $665 to "improve the inside and outside of each fraternity house"

Panhellenic requested $1050 for the following items:

-- $225 for banner materials, Field Day materials and t-shirts
-- $250 for a mocktail party, ice-cream social, refreshments for open houses and a "Rush Greek" campaign
-- $300 for food, drinks and decorations
-- $100 for a guest speaker to address hazing issues
-- $100 to "promote unity among the soroities"
-- $75 for printing costs

IT'S CRUNCH TIME FOR DEMOCRATS AND REPUBLICANS

Republicans positioned to lose next week regardless of outcome

By Clinton Barkdoll
Editorial Editor

We are less than a week away from the crucial 1994 mid-term elections and the once growing Republican momenturm appears to be slowing.

For many months now, the media and GOP leaders have speculated of the real prospects that Democrats would lose control of the House and Senate after the Nov. 9 elections.

Although the Republicans will undoubtedly gain seats in each chamber, a sudden unexpected surge by Democrats has severely jeopardized the chances of a GOP- controlled Congress.

Republican spin doctors may have grossly overestimated their strong poll showings prevalent throughout the year until a few weeks ago. Politically, this may prove very damaging.

Because the media and GOP strategists hav e predicted landslide gains, anything less than that will be seen as a Democratic victory (even though the Democrats will have a net seat loss). Republicans have positioned themselves in such a way that they can win seats and still be seen as the losers.

Bill Clinton's recent gains in popularity coincided with savvy Democratic ads have further hurt the GOP cause.

Here is a look at and some predictions of key races this year:

--Virginia is probably the most interesting (and unpredictable)Senate race. Oliver North (R), Charles Robb (D) and Marshall Coleman (I) have been drawing national attention to this mean-spirited race. Polls show North with a slight lead but look for a Robb surprise next Tuesday squeaking out a 1-2 percent victory.

--California has been hot, too. lately. Rep. Michael Huffington (R) in challenging incumbent Barbara Feinstein (D) in a high dollar race. These two have been bouncing back and forth in the polls but recent endorsements will give Feinstein a convincing win.

--Massachusetts; never bet against a Kennedy; he'll win easy over Romney.

--New Jersey; Democrat Frank Lautenberg has been fighting hard and will escape with a narrow victory.

--Pennsylvania incumbent Harris Wofford is in bad shape here. Challenger Rick Santorum is possibly the best GOP candidate in the country. Don't count Wofford out yet, but Santorum looks strong.

--both of the Bush boys will lose their bids for governor in Texas and Florida.

--in Florida, Hillary's brother doesn't stand a chance for Senate.

--overall, Republicans will gain 4 Senate seats and 25-30 in the House.

One final reminder: former President Reagan's mid-term approval rating in 1982 was 43 percent. Currently, Clinton's is 50 percent.

MR. SENSITIVITY TACKLES IMMIGRATION CRISIS

"Hey Pablo: Turn that damn raft around"

Illegal immigrants drain society, deserve no place in America

By Fred "Mr. Sensitivity" Jordan
Staff editorial writer

POLITICAL SATIRE

Recently we have seen thousands of homemade rafts leaving Cuba because of the persecution by Fidel Castro. This would not really bother me too much, but the problem seems to be that they want to come to the United States.

And now the big issue in the mid-term elections in California is the repealing of rights to illegal aliens, mainly from Mexico. The next thing you know the President will pardon all those draft dodgers in Canada and let them come home.

Seriously, though, we must address the issue of massive immigration into the United States or we are going to get another bunch like the Mariel boat-lift people.

First we have got to stop the influx of the Caribbean nations into our own. It seems to me that when Florida is forced to put up street signs in Spanish, then something is wrong. If these people can't even learn English. then they should be exiled immediately.

There should be an all-out attack by the Coast Guard on these boat people. If you sink the first couple out of Cuba, then I'll bet you would see a great reduction in the Cuban raft-building business. Then, there should be spot English tests given by the Florida Highway Patrol. If the driver fails, then you put him on a plane and kick him out over Havanna.

But the problem with illegals is even worse in California and Texas. We should install a much more stringent patrol on the Mexican border and arm it with high-powered rifles. Once again, I believe that if you shoot the first couple across, then you will see a lot less activity at night on the Rio Grande.

These measures are extreme, but the problem of illegal immigration is so epidemic that people in California actually think illegals should be given free medical coverage and admittance into the public school system.

Did I miss something here or are those services for Americans? And that is precisely who should be reaping the benefits from them. Not people whose sole talent in life is being able to move quickly and low to the ground to avoid the border patrol.

These people have no rights because they are not citizens of this country and they don't deserve to stay here any longer than it takes the immigration service to round them up and dump them in Tijiuana. They not only drain the system but they take jobs from Americans who deserve them.

Who pays for these free trips to the hospital and the books in the school? I think we do. Of course, these people are going to come here if we keep giving them everything free. Hell, if I could go to another country and have everything paid for without ever having to learn the native language. I'd go to New Jersey.

These illegals do not belong here. They are a drain on our society and the hard-working people of the United States.

Now if we did kick them all out, we might see some bad things happen. For instance, the price of produce might go up since the illegal aliens are the ones working the fields, and getting paid, sometimes, under a dollar an hour. But I think I could live with that and still sleep well at night knowing that Pablo had given up any desire of coming here.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Unlike stereotype, Greeks do more than just party

To the editor:

The movie Animal House is a common stereotype surrounding the Greek system at many colleges across the nation. And in many ways it is true.

The Greek system is based upon the idea of a social group banding together and enjoying themselves. But the movie, although good for many laughs and a few quotes, failed to catch the essence of the Greek system. I promise you that it is not a bunch of guys like "Otter and Flounder" destroying parades and killing horses in the Dean's office. It is something that must be seen in the whole picture. Although I can not speak for the entire Greek system, I can speak for the experiences I have had becoming and being a brother in a fraternity here.

I'll own up to some preconceptions about fraternities. First is the partying; yes, we do. We go swimming in the half-constructed Millis Center over the summer. We paint the rock, representing the colors of our respective fraternities. And we sing songs and chants together that someone outside the fraternity wouldn't care about.

All right, there are things that everyone thinks of when they think about fraternities. Now the reality. Recently, my fraternity co-sponsored the AIDS awareness program. It wasn't by accident that our name was on that program. It is all a part of our dedication to community service.

We have worked to help the homeless at the Open Door Shelter and to man the phones at the Muscular Dystrophy campaign. We helped institute the escort program for girls wanting an escort across the campus. We have sponsored alcohol-awareness programs with guest speakers from AA and the police department. We have adopted a highway in the High Point area and regularly clean it up. And we have done preservation work on the New River in northwestern North Carolina.

These are a few of the things that we have done in the past year. I am certain that we will only increase our commitment to High Point and the students here at the university in the future.

If you want to continue to think of fraternities as a useless bunch of drunks, then go ahead. But you will be wrong. We are the most vibrant area of student activity on the campus and will continue to be so. And I would encourage all freshmen to go out to rush in the spring. Nobody will make you, but it could be one of the best decisions in your life.

Sincerely,
Fred Jordan

Lambda Chis hold Halloween party for kids

Little trick-or-treaters run rampant in dorms

By Andy Belk
Advertising Manager

A coordinated effort between the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity, Finch and Millis Community Councils, along with their residents, hosted a Halloween service project Monday.

Susan Cupler, an organizer of the event, said that the program was a "great success." Cupler, along with Kyle Wade and Keith Corbett, mobilized almost 100 HPU students to make the project work.

A group of 60 kindergarten students from Parkview Elementry, was taken trick-or-treating through a number of dorms. After trick-or-treating, the students had a Halloween party in the lobby of Finch.

About 80 High Point students participated by passing out candy from their rooms. Others aided by serving food and drink at the party.

Freshman John Buday said, "Everyone was together on it and looked to help out in any way they could."

The children, with their masks made of paper and colored with crayon, were excited to recieve candy from the students of High Point University.

On a sugar high, the kindergartners left the lobby of Finch after saying in straggling unison, "Thank you, and Happy Halloween!"

HPU WELCOMES PARENTS TO CAMPUS

Family week begins today

SGA has variety of events planned

By Kerri Mumford
Staff writer

Students are getting ready for this year's Family Weekend. Student Government Association has been planning a very special weekend for the students and their families. The fun begins today and ends Nov. 6.

On Thursday, parents and families can attend The Carolinas Intercollegiate Athletic Conference (CIAC) semi-finals for both the men and women's teams. In the evening, The Tower Players production of Annie can be seen at 8 p.m. in the Auditorium from Thursday to Saturday.

On Friday, families have the opportunity to see what classes are like. The families have a chance to tour the campus and pick up souvenirs in the campus bookstore. For the sports fans, the soccer tournament continuous on Friday.

The school is also putting on a special dinner for students and their families. After dining in the cafeteria. students' families can look at the talent of our art students at the art exhibition in the lobby of the Auditorium.

On Saturday, families are invited to attend a complimentary breakfast that is hosted by President and Mrs. Jacob C. Martinson. Parents have the opportunity to talk to their child's teachers from 9:30 to 11 a.m.

The Student Government is sponsoring the Alpha Experience, which is an introduction to virtual reality. The CIAC soccer finals are played between 12 and 4 p.m. The fraternities and sororities are also having open houses for families and members. The evening is capped off be Karaoke singing and coffee in the Great Room.

On Sunday there will be a special worship service. President Martinson will speak and the University singers will perform a mini-concert in Hayworth Chapel at 9:30 a.m. At 2 p.m. there will be a Family Weekend concert. America's international music ambassadors, the United States Air Force Band and the Singing Sergeants, will perform at the Millis Center.

Family Weekend is full of interesting and fun activities to keep everyone entertained.

20 PERCENT INCREASE IN FUNDS

Record year for HPU United Way fundraising

By Clinton Barkdoll
Editorial Editor

It was a record year for United Way fundraising at High Point University. Over 150 HPU employees have contributed nearly $20,000 to the United Way campaign.

This money was donated primarily through payroll deduction plans and straight contributions.

The money raised this year reflects nearly a 20 percent increase over the $16,500 raised by the University in 1993.

Mary Hollingsworth, vice president and campaign director for the United Way of Greater High Point, said, "High Point University is one of our top giving accounts and they have consistently supported our efforts. With the University's donations, we will help our neighbors receive the help they need."

United Way of Greater High Point includes the areas of High Point, Archdale, Trinity and Jamestown and consists of 22 member agencies ranging from the Red Cross to the YWCA.

EAST AFRICAN UNIVERSITIES NEED HELP

Kenyan schools need books

■ Novels and reference books welcome

By Joe Avent
Staff writer

Are last semester's textbooks gathering dust on your shelf? Will the bookstore offer you $5 for your $50 chemistry book? Put these unneeded books to good use.

A collection for needy universities in Kenya is currently underway. Any unneeded textbooks are wanted.

Books will be sent to the Kenyatta Library at the University of Nairobi and the libraries of Moi University and Maseno University College.

The economic situation in Kenya is such that food and other necessities are difficult to come by--let alone books.

The desire to learn is great at these universities. There are so many students at these public schools that many have to sit outside of their classrooms due to the lack of seats.

Textbooks are not the only books accepted. Any book appropriate for a modern library is welcome. This includes modern novels and reference books.

Shipping costs to Africa will be an expensive undertaking. Donations for shipping costs will also be accepted. Donations can be sent to Professor George Simpson x 4533 in the History Department.

Editor's note: Recently, the United Methodist Church opened Africa University in Zimbabwe. It is the first private university or college on the continent of Africa.

Russian Ambassador slated to deliver Capus-Waynick speech

By Jeanne Holly
Staff writer

On Nov. 16, High Point University will have the honor and privilege of welcoming Yuli Mikhailovich Voronstov, the Russian Ambassador to the United States, to our campus. At 7:30p.m. in the Haworth Chapel, Voronstov will be addressing the student body about the role of Russia in the emerging world order.

Voronstov has led a very productive life. Most recently, he was the Ambassador to the United Nations. On July 23, he was appointed to the position of Ambassador to the United States by Boris Yeltsin. Voronstov has also served as Ambassador to India, France, and Afghanistan. In addition to this, Voronstov served as deputy foreign minister under Mikhail Gorbachev.

Voronstov has witnessed many political changes in Moscow. He is very influential and has been referred to as "one of the best Russian professionals ever." Voronstov, 64, has spent many years here in the United States and is fluent both in English and French. "Ambassador Voronstov has been at the heart of Russian/Soviet Politics since 1952. No one is better prepared to help college and university students and the larger public understand the role of Russia in the emerging world order," stated Dr. Morris G. Wray. High Point University will be given the opportunity to gain better understanding of the changes that have taken place in Voronstov's homeland on Nov. 16.

City Council presides over Fraternity housing issue

By Tara Fitz
Staff writer

There was little opposition toward High Point University's request to allow fraternity housing to remain along east Sixth Street. The permits had expired and the City Council held a hearing to get residents' comments before deciding whether to renew them.

One resident said beer cans and bottles have been thrown at his dog, and he has had to clean up broken glass in his driveway. Others mentioned the constant flow of traffic at the end of Woodrow Avenue and noted that many students speed through stop signs, endangering children and pets.

"We've tried to keep the standards and comply with the city," said Gart Evans, dean of students.

The City Council is required by state statute and the development ordinance to verify regulations in three general areas.

Some of these rules include: The house will not materially endanger the public health or safety if located where proposed; it will not substantially injure the value of adjoining or abutting property; or the use is a public necessity.

Vice President of Administrative Affairs Roy Epperson said $150,000 worth of renovations was made at the four fraternity houses last summer. One of four fraternity members live in the houses.

"We are at near capacity for our male students. At the present time we do need this housing for our students," he said.

According to Epperson, there have not been any recent complaints from neighbors. The school's long-range plans are for the fraternities to be moved to houses along West College Drive.

Bill Bencini, chairman of the Planning and Zoning Commission, said, "I think it's obvious to me that the situation has been well managed based on the number of oppositions. I think it's obvious that the community and High Point University can co-exist."

Vice Chairman Jerry Camp agreed. "I think it's very important that we protect our university and make sure they have their needs fulfilled," he said.

Greek System: get to know the facts

By Megan Keenan
Greek Section Editor

As a member of a sorority, I am thoroughly appalled by a recent response towards the Greeks on campus. The response of the Student Government Association legislature to bills submitted from the IFC and Panhellenic councils irritated me. The amount of money requested by the two organizations is irrelevant; what is relevant is that several members of the legislature were pretty much ready to attack. I sat in the Oct. 19 meeting totally disgusted by the extreme scrutiny of the aforementioned bills, as I setremembered the many times I had voted "for" bills when I didn't necessarily think an organization needed funding. Instead, I set aside my personal feelings and made my decision based on what was best for the entire campus. I honestly believe that if the bills had been submitted by any other organization than Greeks, it probably would have passed, not necessarily in its original form. I think that the underlying problem in dissent among Greeks/independents is the fact that many independents are against the entire Greek system and therefore have little interest in the facts.

I feel there are many facts overlooked about Greeks. The first being that all that Greeks do as a whole is party. OK, Greeks do party. But as I've looked around at the many weekend parties this semester, I've noticed a lot more than the occasional independent. If everyone on this campus is into the party scene, why is it the most convenient thing to call us drunks? I guess it's also convenient to overlook the fact that most of us are up early the next day either participating in a fundraiser or a service project. The legislature also overlooked the fact that the Greeks of High Point University, promote High Point University through almost everything they do. Who on this campus gets called to drive BACCHUS? The Greeks. Who on this campus gets called up to serve at chapel? The Greeks. Who on this campus gets called when there is help needed with community service projects? The Greeks. The list could go on forever. The fact is rather than saying, "Let's drink beer," we say "yes" to all of the calls we receive in order to serve our campus and community. Also, we do this not because we HAVE to but because we want to. Every Greek organization on this campus has a philanthropy which it raises money for on a continual basis. For example, the Kappa Deltas are sponsoring the Mr. Panther contest to raise money for the Child Abuse ward of the Children's Hospital in Richmond, Va. In addition to fund-raising for their philanthropy, many Greeks contribute their time through service. For example, Phi Mu will be going to Brenner's Children Hospital in November to visit terminally ill children and decorate their playrooms for Christmas. Also an example of Greeks' service to the campus, Lambda Chi Alpha coordinated the event in which children trick-or-treated through Finch and Millis. I've cited only a couple of examples, but every Greek organization at High Point gives hours of its time in community service.

I'm still not through: I know in the back of your mind you're thinking that Greeks perform community service out of obligation, take away the service they provide and they're worthless organizations. I can assure you that is not true. If the Greek system were totally useless, I would not have chosen to become a part of it. I was convinced that I would never become a part of it, until I experienced Rush and saw what sororities were really about. They're not just a bunch of girls who sit around planning who to backstab. They are a group of girls who share common bonds which grow through pledging and strengthen in being initiated into sisterhood. I thought it was a bunch of bull too as I watched Greeks running around screaming chants and ruining clothes to paint a rock. As I went through Rush, I was still skeptical. Then as I walked into a second preferential party and could feel the strength of the bond among the people who were already sisters, I knew I had to become a part of it. I know that many of you are still doubting what's genuine about Greek life. Rather than doubt it, try to experience it. Rush is in January. If you don't wish to experience it, don't knock the people who do.

Phi Mu
ΓΖ Chapter

The sisters of Phi Mu have had a crazy month. We have participated in many service projects, held initiation and had our lounge re-decorated.

On October 14, we participated in American Family Day's picnic at Tanglewood for Bowman-Gray hospital. It was a long day, starting at 5:00 am on the first day of Fall Break. On October 30, we participated in the Ghoulash festival at Four Seasons Mall.

Within the last month, we re-decorated our lounge. We purchased a dinette set and had the floor re-carpeted to make the roommore cozy.

Congratulations to our newly initiated sisters: Jonelle Corsey, Danielle Howell, and Anne Taylor.

Delta Sigma Phi
ΔΖ Chapter

We hope everyone had a great fall break. We had a great time at our quad mixer with ZTA, ΚΔ, and ΘΧ.

On Nov. 5, we are having our Paddle Dance and a Pledge/Brother football team. A lot of alumni are expected to attend.

Kappa Delta
ΓΓ Chapter

The sisters of Kappa Delta hope everyone had a great Halloween. ZTA, ΔΣΦ, and ΘΧ, we had an AWESOME mixer. Kappa Delta has been very busy preparing for the first ever Mr. Panther contest. It is going to be held November 11. 1994, in the Auditorium at 7:00 pm, the cost of admission is $2. We would like everyone to come out and nominate their favorite HPU male. All of the proceeds will go towards the Child Abuse ward at Children's Hospital in Richmond, VA. Hope to see everyone there.

At this time, the sisters of Kappa Delta would also like to announce that we will require a 2.4 GPA from any woman planning to rush us.

Theta Chi
ΕΛ Chapter

We hope that everyone had a great fall break and got all the rest they needed. We are doing great in soccer intramurals after the frisbee upset with the Dirty Dawgs in the championship game. It was a disappointing way to end the season.

On October 29, the Theta Chis celebrated Halloween with a quad mixer at the Women's Club with ΚΔ, ZTA, and ΔΣΦ. Everyone was dressed in a wide variety of costumes from Ronald McDonald to a toilet.

Alpha Gamma Delta
ΓΗ Chapter

The Alpha Gams have been having an exciting semester! We were proud to have Colleen O'Brien named High Point University's 1994 Homecoming Queen.

On September 24, the Piedmont Triad Alpha Gamma Delta Alumnae chapter was founded. We look forward to extending our circle of sisterhood to them and growing through the bonds of the past and present.

We had our annual ΠΚΑ/ΑΓΔ Halloween mixer on October 28 and as usual had a ghoulish time.

Congratulations to our new pledges: Julie Craddock, Amy Morgan, Cara Helsel, Erin Conway, Stephanie Catts, Dana Myslevic, and Danielle Ritchie.

The Alpha Gams will be driving for BACCHUS on Parent's Weekend so please don't drive drunk.

Pi Kappa Alpha
ΔΩ Chapter

The brothers of Pi Kappa Alpha have had a busy couple of weeks. We co-sponsored an AIDS awareness program and were featured on the Channel 2 news. The Pikes also took the frisbee championship due to the fact that a couple of boys couldn't control their tempers. The A league soccer team is looking tough, after convincingly winning their first game.

Zeta Tau Alpha
ΔΓ Chapter

We would like to thank the sisters of Kappa Delta and the brothers of Theta Chi and Delta Sigma Phi for a great time at our Halloween mixer. We are looking forward to the intramural soccer season and would like to wish everyone good luck. On Saturday, we are celebrating parent's weekend with a Mother's Pin ceremony. Also during this week, we are working with Lambda Chis to help with their national annual food drive.

The Zetas are also starting a fund raiser next week. The fund-raiser is to raise money to bring the AIDS Name Memorial Quilt to Greensboro. We will be selling paraphernalia in the cafeteria on November 7, 8. and 9 to raise money.

Lambda Chi Alpha
ΙΦΖ Chapter

The brothers of Lambda Chi Alpha recently coordinated an event for underprivileged children to trick-or-treat on campus. We would like to thank to all the sororities for helping out. We are sponsoring our annual North American Food Drive on Nov. 5. We would like to thank ZTA for helping out.

St. Lucia's Whitaker Augier takes on a variety of tasks at High Point.

Nothing drastic about Augier's change to the "land of opportunities"

■ Islander denies rumors linking him to Statler Brothers

By Sean Flood
Staff writer

> "I feel one day I'll get a chance to take advantage of the opportunities exposed to me." - Whitaker Augier

The senior from the West Indies has passed every test America has to offer--except appreciating country music and the national media.

Whitaker Augier has a nearly perfect average in his studies and has succeeded on the soccer and track teams. The business administration major is known for his tolerance. But when a Statler Brothers song was dedicated to Augier on a campus radio show, he did not take kindly to rumors that he he likes Nashville tunes."They aren't true", says Whitaker. "I don't like country music."

Nor does Augier approve of the media, which he accuses of being too liberated. "The media has too much power to distort the truth in America," he says.

Other than country music and the media, Whitaker has enjoyed his stay in America and at High Point University, where he has been involved in many activities. Whitaker came to America from the tropical island of St. Lucia, in search of education and romance.

St. Lucia is located in the West Indies, with a population of 150,000. At age 20, he left his home in the capital, Cestries, for junior college in Independence, Kan., before finally arriving in High Point.

Despite the sudden change of environment from a tropical island with a population which is 90 percent black, to the American Midwest, Whitaker has had no problems adapting.

"I am open to different cultures. The change was nothing drastic," he said.

Augier enjoys the friendliness of the High Point community. America is the "land of opportunities," according to Whitaker, with a higher standard of living, and greater availability of products.

However. the biggest differences in American society for Whitaker concerned study habits. "In St. Lucia. you study a lot more and take your school work more seriously. with less partying," he said.

Whitaker has definitely benefited from this dedication as a resident assistant. His leadership qualities and sense of responsibility have been demonstrated in and out of the classroom.

After graduating in May. Whitaker will use these skills to become a successful businessman, either in St. Lucia or in the United States.

"I feel one day I'll get a chance to take advantage of the opportunities exposed to me." Augier said.

WINTER MOVIE SEASON OFFERS THREE POTENTIAL STANDOUTS

A professional, a vampire and a monster...what a combination

By Stephen B. Steffek
Editor-In-Chief

During the winter season, movie audiences will find themselves with several good films to choose from.

Mary Shelley's Frankenstein, director and star Kenneth Branagh's first voyage into the horror genre, features Robert DeNiro as the timeless monster. Dr. Victor Frankenstein creates the monster and finds that it has adverse effects. Helena Bonham Carter, best known for her work in Merchant-Ivory films. co-stars alongside Tom Hulce and Aidan Quinn. The film offers some spectacular cinematography of the Swiss Alps. The film is expected to be a blockbuster simply because people want to catch a glimpse of the Goodfella as a mutation. However, it will wear down very quickly if there is no substance to back up the buzz that precedes it.

Anne Rice's Interview With The Vampire is the most anticipated film of the winter season.

. Tom Cruise stars alongside Brad Pitt and Spanish hunk Antonio Banderas Philadelphia. Louis, a 200-year-old vampire tells his life story, including details about his relations with other vaimpires and mortals. Disagreements between the author and director Neil Jordan about Cruise being cast as the Vampire Lestat created a buzz. That, along with the support of Rice's legions of fans will help support this film, even if it was too gory for Oprah to sit through at the Hollywood premiere.

The Professional, starring Jean Reno and Gary Oldman, is also recieving some attention. Director Luc Besson (La Femme Nikita) has assembled a story of a hitman who is straightened out by a young girl.

While it sounds a bit sappy, don't be fooled. Much like Nikita, the film has more than its share of action. Besson states that the film is a mixture of Hollywood and the European styles. He boasts that the action packed climax "featues 350 (gun)shots in 12 minutes." The film could do well, based on early word. Oldman has acquired a cult following for his continually excellent portrayals of offbeat characters. This could help gain exposure to the American public.

Trekkies. be on the lookout for Generations on Nov.18. The captains from both series will finally meet. Go out to the theatre and check out these and other excellent movies this holiday.

Lumbergate scandal rocks campus

Two-by-fours beware!

By Pat Heller
Staff writer

The High Point police were working overtime this past Friday night when they uncovered a scandal that rocked the campus. They arrested three High Point University students for a crime that I only dare speak of in print.

These three students were escorted from their dorms into a back seat of a police car. From there, they were led into the Guilford County police station where they were released on $500 bail each, with a court date set for early next year.

Now, I know you must be asking what were their crimes that led these three students down the life of crime?

They took three pieces of lumber from the maintenance shed.

What transpired then was sheer courage on the part of the High Point police. As the suspects were seen by the shed with the wood in hand, the officers approached them, telling them to stop.

After fleeing the scene, the three suspects were eventually apprehended and brought into custody. I mean with many crimes being committed every day, it's good to know the High Point Police and Campus security are there to put an end to it.

I mean just yesterday I was in a furniture store and saw someone rip off one of those tags that you are not supposed to remove under penalty of law. Well, thankfully, the police showed up within minutes to arrest the man before he did it again. It's good to know that we have the police there to protect us from criminals such as that man.

I mean we should forget about any other crimes such as murder, drugs, robbery and what-not as long as people are trying to steal lumber. I believe that should be on police cars. You know where it says "To Protect and Serve." Well, I think it should say "To Protect and Serve and also stop people from taking lumber."

I think that $500 bond for each suspect was too little. I believe they should be locked up until their court date. God knows they might strike again. And I know every man with a piece of wood out there is feeling a little more scared knowing these criminals are out free.

I think they should be locked up for life. That would really teach them a lesson.

It probably won't happen because those damn liberals out there will probably let them go with 10 years.

Well, another part of their punishment should be for them to go to high schools and tell kids the danger of stealing wood -- because kids today take lumber for granted.

One way or another, I just hope these suspects learn their lesson. And with the fine officers of law in High Point, no doubt they will.

Tower Players bring Annie to High Point

▨ Law directs biggest theatrical production ever on HPU campus.

ANNIE AND DADDY

Tim Austin and Jackie Sizemore lead a stunning cast in the Tower Players' production of the Broadway hit Annie

"The sun will come out tomorrow" on the latest Tower Players production, the Broadway hit Annie. In many ways, this is the largest, and maybe the best, production ever done at High Point University.

The ever-popular Annie is about a young orphan who is leading a life of hard-knocks at a New York orphanage under the guidance of the evil Miss Hannigan, portrayed by senior Denise Campbell. Annie, played by 12-year-old Jackie Sizemore, and her orphan friends dream of escaping the shabby orphanage to find real parents and a better life.

Annie eventually has a stroke of good luck when she ends up with billionaire tycoon Oliver Warbucks (Tower Players alumnus Tim Austin), temporarily, over the Christmas holidays. She quickly wins the love of Warbucks while finally seeing life outside of the orphanage. Annie wants to stay with Warbucks permanently, but not until she exhausts the possibility of finding her real parents. Warbucks offers $50,000 to anyone who can prove they are Annie's parents. Thousands of people attempt to claim Annie (and the 50 grand), including Miss Hannigan's swindling brother, Rooster, played by Tower Player Steve Turner.

Rooster and his girlfriend Lilly (junior Lisa Jones) plot with Hannigan to fool Warbucks and collect the $50,000 reward. They get more than they originally bargained for in attempting to claim Annie.

With no convincing parents found, Warbucks employs the help of President Franklin Roosevelt (adjunct professor Steve Willis) to trace Annie's real parents. The play concludes with an unexpected. comedic and enjoyable turn of events.

The acting in this play is superb. Tim Austin delivers a brilliant and convincing performance as Oliver Warbucks.

Denise Campbell is the best mean old hag High Point has seen in many years. She is perfect in the role of Hannigan—even the screams at the "little brats" are excellent.

Tower Players staples Steve Turner and Lisa Jones complement each other well as the hilarious Rooster and Lilly. This talented couple keeps the audience laughing while offering wonderful acting too.

The always good Chase Bowers plays a good supporting role as Warbuck's secretary Grace Farrell. Bowers, who has proven extremely versatile, is entertaining throughout the play.

Steve Willis is also noteworthy in his portrayal of FDR. He seems made for the role of the powerful Roosevelt. Willis could pass as FDR in the next made-for-TV movie about the New Deal.

The real star of this play, though, is 12-year-old Winston-Salem native Jackie Sizemore. The actress is worthy of a Broadway Annie performance. Sizemore is flawless in her acting and singing, really stealing the show. Although Tim Austin as Warbucks is certainly memorable too. the audience will leave this play awestruck by Sizemore.

Of course Annie wouldn't be complete without those famous songs. performed excellently by the cast. The nine piece band, which accompanies all of the music. along with great singing makes for an exemplary musical score.

Additionally, the sets and costumes are exceptional. The scenes appear sharp and transitions are crisp. Bill Webb. technical director. was the force behind these welcome attributes to Annie.

Theatre veteran Ron Law. director of Annie. scores a winner here. Law manages to pull the expansive play (28 actors, 10 scene changes. numerous props, a live band and a great stage dog) together to create the best production High Point has seen in many years. Law has once again created a real crowd pleaser with Annie.

The play will run from Thursday Nov. 3 through Nov. 5 in Memorial Auditorium. Tickets may be purchased at the door and the play begins at 8 p.m. all three nights.

12-YEAR-OLD ACTRESS STEALS SHOW IN TOWER PLAYERS' ANNIE

Sizemore, Austin star in HPU's rendering of hit Broadway musical

By Stephen B. Steffek
Editor-In-Chief

One of the highlights of Family Weekend is the Tower Players' fall musical production of the Broadway hit, Annie.

Jackie Sizemore, a sixth grader from Winston-Salem, stars as Annie. the lovable redhead.

The budding thespian found her theatrical interests when she was very young.

"I saw a play and I just wanted to be in plays," Sizemore said of the initial incident that sparked her interest in theatre.

She attends Summit School, a private school in Winston-Salem. At the age of 12, she has compiled a respectable list of performances.

At age 8, she played the lead in Annie. She has also performed in area productions of The Sound of Music, Gypsy and You're A Good Man Charlie Brown. She has also appeared in Video Max, a television program and the Rainbow Education Video.

She is taking classes in ballet, tap and jazz dancing along with piano lessons and has taken gymnastics classes. While many of her friends are not in the theatrical community, they will be able to see her in this production.

Tim Austin, a veteran of the Tower Players plays the bald billionaire Daddy Warbucks.

He is employed as a stagehand at the Stevens Center in Winston-Salem. Austin, 35, would like to do more acting but enjoys his current occupation.

"My dad is a community theatre actor and I gravitated into it as a stagehand-turned-actor." Austin said of his start in theatre.

He has worked with the nationally-renowned North Carolina Shakespeare Festival in last year's Merry Wives of Windsor. He has performed in Tower Players productions of Godspell, Perfectly Frank and Black Comedy.

Austin has also tried his hand at directing with The Diary of Anne Frank and Bus Stop. He will direct the Tower Players spring production of 12 Angry People.

Gunner, who plays Sandy the dog, is a scene stealer.

All three stars can be seen in the High Point University Tower Players production of Annie.

While he is enjoying doing the play, Austin said, "I can't wait to have my hair back!"

Punk rock still fun after decade of shelf life

▨ The Sex Pistols and New York Dolls personify revolutionary era in rock history

By Steve Steffek
Editor-in-Chief

The true test of time for a rock and roll album is its listenability after a few decades. Upon listening to several old punk albums, I found that they pass this test with flying colors.

What do you get when you take four extremely angry British boys and give them each an instrument to vent their anger through? The answer is... The Sex Pistols.

Johnny Rotten, Sid Vicious, Steve Jones and Paul Cook made up the anarchic punk band. The band's first, now multi-platinum release, Never Mind the Bollocks, Here's the Sex Pistols, caused quite a stir because of its revolutionary lyrics and unconventional style.

It was banned in many areas of England and the band lost its ability to perform throughout parts of the UK. Regardless, several of the songs cracked the charts in England, and eventually America, bringing the band widespread fame, or infamy.

While punk music is often viewed as a bunch of hullabaloo with some loud instruments, it is often very political. The Sex Pistols were at the forefront of this movement, often causing a ruckus wherever they performed.

The first song on the album, "Holidays in the Sun," is still one of their most well liked. "Anarchy in the UK" and the sarcastic anthem "God Save The Queen" earned the band a great amount of dislike from British officials.

The rest of the album, while not as popular, also raised some eyebrows in their day. The anti-abortion "Bodies," "Pretty Vacant," "Problems," "No Feelings" and "Liar" round out the album.

Overall, this album is one of the most important recordings in music history and is a must-have for anyone who considers themself to be a true rock and roll aficionado.

OK, class. Quiz question. Who was the first band to crossdress on stage and belt out powerful rock tunes? No, not Poison. No, not Warrant. It was the New York Dolls.

The band, led by David Johansen (now known as Buster Poindexter), gained infamy by playing some of the best rock tunes available on the New York music scene during the early '70s. The band began by playing venues like the now-notorious CBGB'S and Max's Kansas City. They gained national fame with their self titled first album.

The music on New York Dolls is still very enjoyable and offers a lot to even the casual rock fan. It is not quite as racy as the music of the Pistols, but does have a good beat with some fun lyrics.

The two best songs on the record are "Personality Crisis" and "Subway Train." Standouts on the album for me are the R.E.M.-ish "Trash," "Frankenstein." "Looking for a Kiss" and "Jet Boy."

This album is really interesting to listen to in comparison to today's rock releases. The influence is unmistakable. This band had an immense influence on today's artists and the direction of rock music.

Another release that may be of interest is DIY's compilation Blank Generation-The New York Scene (1975-78) . The album contains tunes from many of the mainstays on the New York scene during its later years. Among the most prominent are the Ramones, Blondie, The Patti Smith Group, The Heartbreakers and Richard Hell and the Voidoids.

While the album doesn't have many popular, radio friendly tunes, what it does offer is very enjoyable. The accompanying 18 page booklet offers up knowledge about the bands and personalities that invaded the underground scene in New York during the late '70s. As far as rock compilations go, this is very good.

So, if you want to hear what Green Day and Smashing Pumpkins listened to when they were in Pampers, check some of these out. Who knows, it could open a whole new set of doors for your musical tastes.

THESE ROCKETS REALLY TAKE OFF

Love and Rockets unite in fifth release, Hot Trip to Heaven

By Peter Romanov
A&E Editor

After their self-titled 1989 release, the members of Love and Rockets embarked on solo careers, but they recently congealed to create their fifth release Hot Trip To Heaven.

Their acoustic and electric sound has been invaded by pulsating bass drums and danceable, sometimes hypnotic tunes. This is a different sound for them, but it makes for a rather refreshing CD.

There are many ear-catching songs on this CD. The 14-minute "Body and Soul" is a musical assault that is relaxing and energetic. "Ugly" and "Trip and Glide" have rhythms that reek of Enigma. The bubbly and chaotic "This Heaven" is flooded with Daniel Ash's haunting vocals.

Love and Rockets has really expanded its musical horizons. It's good to hear that rust hasn't accumulated during their four-year hiatus. This vibrant and mesmerizing CD is proof of that.

So put on some light clothing and take a hot trip to heaven.

BOOK REVIEW

Rice explores world of witches

By Tanya Lyons
Staff writer

Anne Rice begins the captivating saga of the Mayfair Witches with The Witching Hour, a story of generations of women who have inherited psychic powers and a mysterious monster.

The novel begins with the story of Dierdre Mayfair, a demented catatonic young lady whose ghostly lover Lasher is always around her. Because she lost her only child to adoption and because of the ghost, Dierdre slowly loses her mind. The story reverts to Rowan Mayfair, Dierdre's daughter and Michael Curry, A Victorian architect.

Rowan and Michael meet when Rowan recues Michael from the Pacific Ocean and brings him back to life. Rowan conceals her identity due to fear, but Michael has inherited the power to see visions from whatever he touches, and he becomes deeply disturbed.

Michael and Rowan meet again a few months later when Michael is at his wit's end. Michael departs the next morning from California to New Orleans to find his destiny. Despite her adoptive mother's warnings to the contrary, Rowan returns to New Orleans to find her family and meet her now-dead mother.

Rowan meets her mother and family and Lasher. Lasher explains to her that they were destined to meet and become lovers. But Lasher has other plans for Rowan.

Michael and Rowan are married and conceive a child over a period of months. In a dramatic stormy night, Rowan loses her child and Lasher takes on mortal flesh for the first time. Michael's attempts to defeat Lasher result in his dying a second time and losing Rowan, possibly forever.

I found the book intriguing; it is captivating despite its didactic and long-winded history of the Mayfair Witches. Without the history, the reader would feel displaced with the many references to historical family figures, such as seductive Julian or poor crazy Marguerite.

Each witch within the history contributes an aspect of himself or herself to Rowan. Petyr van Abel gives his intelligence, while Julian gives his cunning and Katherine gives her looks.

I was severely surprised the book ended so quickly. I want to know what happens to Lasher and how Michael defeats him. I guess we will find that out in the sequel. .Lasher.

Madonna tells new Stories on album

By Jason Schneider
Staff writer

Bedtime Stories, Madonna's latest release in two years, may very well be her best work since the Like A Virgin album of 1984.

Many of the songs found on Bedtime Stories are reminiscent of her earlier recordings, especially "Don't Stop" and "Take a Bow," which are similar in feeling to Spotlight and Crazy for You.

The fact that this CD presents a mellow side of Madonna (remember 1992's Erotica?) might be the fact that it was co-produced by Babyface, who recently propelled Toni Braxton to superstardom. He also co-wrote two songs, "Forbidden Love" and "Take a Bow."

At least two of the songs on "Bedtime Stories," "Sanctuary" and "Bedtime Story," present a surrealistic sound and mood that contrasts with the ballad-like "Take a Bow" and the dance-beat "Don't Stop." Anyone who remembers Madonna's recent (and past) escapades in the public eye will surely find special meaning in the song "Human Nature," which has lyrics like "You punished me for telling you my fantasies/I'm breaking all the rules I didn't make."

With Madonna, it almost a given that at least one or two of her songs will make it to the top ten, or even to number one. This time, with the variety and quality of the songs on Bedtime Stories . she will earn that status.

MOVIE REVIEWS

Redford's latest quizzes society on role of values

By Stephen B. Steffek
Editor-in-Chief

One of the most anticipated movies of the year was Robert Redford's directorial return, Quiz Show.

The film is about the quiz show scandal that forced America to lose its innocence during the early '50s. The scandal involved a quiz show which tested a contestant's knowledge of facts by asking them questions worth certain point values (similar to Jeopardy) until they reached Twenty One, the show's name.

When the movie begins, Herbert Stempel, excellently portrayed by John Turturro, has been the champion of the show for many weeks. Since Stempel represents an underdog he is very popular with the public.

What the public doesn't know is that Stempel has received the answers prior to the show and is winning on more than personal knowledge. Once the ratings begin to sag, the show's producers feel that it is time for a change of the guard and force Stempel to lose to Charles Van Doren (Ralph Feinnes).

Van Doren hails from one of the most famous intellectual families in the country. His father is a prize winning poet and both of them teach English at Columbia University. Initially, when the show's producers offer Charles the answers, he declines and decides to do it honestly. When he wins, Charles becomes a David to Stempel's intellectual Goliath in the eyes of the public.

People flock to him because he is a smart, handsome man. He becomes so enraptured in the media attention that he gives in to the producers and begins to sacrifice his integrity. Stempel becomes disgruntled that he has not been rewarded for his graceful loss and initiates a legal probe into the honesty of the show.

A federal investigator (Rob Morrow) catches onto Stempel's plea and, after investigation, learns that many of the show's champions have earned their places dishonestly. Van Doren finds himself with a moral dilemma when the investigator questions him on the validity of his championship.

While I did not think that this movie lived up to all of the hype that preceded it, it was definitely a worthwhile film.

Turturro, Morrow and Feinnes were the standouts in the film. Turturro, who has built an excellent career on playing underdog characters (SEE BARTON FINK REVIEW) provided a superb interpretation of Herbert Stempel. Morrow donned a Boston accent and heavy eyebrows for the part. Feinnes, best known for his portrayal of a Nazi commander in Schindler's List, plays Van Doren very believably.

Redford, already an accomplished director, can put this accomplishment under his belt with other triumphs like A River Runs Through It and Ordinary People. This movie can be enjoyed by just about anyone. There is little objectionable material and the story is easy to follow. I highly recommend this movie.

QUIZ SHOW

Turturro provides excellent portrayal of Barton Fink

By Stephen B. Steffek
Editor-in-Chief

People who enjoy John Turturro's portrayal of Herbert Stempel in Quiz Show should also check out his portrayal of the title character in Barton Fink . This film, produced by Ethan Coen and directed by his brother Joel Coen, won the four top prizes at the Cannes film festival in 1991.

Barton Fink is an up and coming playwright in Broadway during the late '40s. He is a pioneer in the field of reality theater. When the boys in Hollywood hear about him, they offer him a job as a screenwriter. He reluctantly complies and goes out to Hollywood.

When he arrives, Barton finds that he is to write a B-movie about wrestling rather than the next Gone With The Wind. Upon returning to his room, he writes one sentence and BANG...writer's block. Barton, who lives in a hotel, meets his next door neighbor, Charlie (John Goodman), a chatty traveling insurance salesman, and the two become friends.

Barton finds himself at a standstill and tries several things to cure his problem. Barton consults a top screenwriter about how one goes about writing a movie about wrestling.

His friend Charlie tutors him about the finer points of wrestling but Barton still finds the same sentence every time he returns to the typewriter. After an odd turn of events, Barton pens a full script about the little man's triumph in the world rather than the mindless trash that his boss had in mind.

Upon first viewing. the film seemed rather bizarre. However, upon further thought. I found that while it is a bit eclectic. the Coen Brothers who are most notably responsible for Raising Arizona and Miller's Crossing. have produced an interesting, thought provoking film about the little man.

I recommend it to people who enjoy a movie with more grit than the common fluff where the main characters ride off into the sunset.

So check this out next time you're at the video store and all of the copies of Silverado, The Last Action Hero and Ishtar are gone.

Need sex ed? Exit to Eden delivers

By Tanya Lyons
Staff writer

Exit to Eden, a film starring Rosie O'Donnell, Dan Aykroyd and Dana Delaney focuses on Elliot, a supposedly fearless international photographer who journeys to Eden to find himself.

Eden is an island resort, though not like any you would find. Sex is the ruling factor on the isalnd, and all inhabitants would be expected to contribute in some manner. Some guests are Citizens, inhabitants who willingly submit themselves to the famcies of others and Guests. those who use the Citizens for any sexual pleasure they want to.

Elliot signs on as a Citizens and attracts attention as he arrives on the island, to the displeasure of Mistress Lisa (Delaney), the island's boss.

Before his departure for Eden, Elliot takes a picture of an infamous diamond smuggler whom Sheila (O'Donnell) and Frank (Aykroyd). are pursuing. Both Omar the diamond smuggler and Frank and Sheila realize this fact and attempt to get to Elliot and the pictures first. Both parties must go to the island to find him and the pictures.

Meanwhile, Mistress Lisa opens Elliot's eyes to what he had been missing in life and the two fall in love. They travel to New Orleans for a weekend getaway while being pursued by Frank, Sheila and Omar. While the caper is solved, Elliot loses Lisa. With Sheila's help Elliot wins Lisa back and proposes to her.

I found the movie cute but predictable. O'Donnell and Aykroyd make an interesting combination, and Delaney fit her role as Lisa quite well. I feel I should warn you, however, that the movie has some serious sexual content.

If you can not get over the content of the movie, I would suggest you not watch it. You could learn things. I know I did.

MOVIE REVIEWS

Freddy returns for Halloween season in Wes Craven's New Nightmare

By Steve Steffek
Editorin-Chief

Name a celebrity that has gained popularity because of his choice to wear only one glove. No, not Michael Jackson.

Freddy Krueger has kept audiences on the edge of their seats for the last ten years by slicing up unwitting teenagers and cracking jokes in the Nightmare on Elm Street series.

Wes Craven's New Nightmare, tagged as the final film in the series of slasher flicks that the director began ten years ago, closes the series by bringing its anti-hero, Freddy Krueger, into the real world.

Freddy, probably the most famous screen villain around, is trying to cross the threshold between reality and the movies that have held him prisoner for the last ten years. In order to do this, he terrorizes the production crew that first created him, mainly Heather Langenkamp, who played Nancy in the original and Robert Englund who played him..

As the film opens, we learn that the starlet has been terrorized by phone calls and letters from what she assumes is an obsessive fan. Now, however, she is married and has a young son, Dylan. It is revealed that she has been having nightmares involving Freddy.

The world is facing pre-apocalyptic circumstances such as earthquakes. In order to enter our reality, Freddy must first go through Langenkamp. He uses her husband and son in order to meet this goal.

I, being a great fan of the entire Nightmare on Elm Street series had a special appreciation for this film. Freddy fans will see many inside jokes and reminders of the original. Craven, who returns to the series after directing only the first installment, shows why he is a king of horror. He combines elements of suspense and surprise while cutting down on the raw gore that has become characteristic of the rest of the series.

The film will disappoint fans of the gore appeal of Freddy because it is tailored more to a plot than the last seven. When it first hit the Hollywood scene, Nightmare on Elm Street was acclaimed because it gave us a villian that, unlike Jason and Michael Myers, cracked jokes and made the whole process more torturous.

Fred Krueger was an instant hit because he appealed to the sadist in all of us. Audiences really wanted the dumb teenagers to pay for going down stairs and looking in closets for all those years.

Unfortunately, Craven lost the ability to direct the series and it lost much of its original allure during the course of the seven sequels. However, with Craven involved, this film is a great ending for the series. It and the first are like golden bookends for a group of trashy romance novels. They just don't fit the image.

I recommend Wes Craven's New Nightmare to people who enjoy the suspense of the Freddy Krueger films but dislike all of the gore that has accompanied it over the years. This movie is not for the faint of heart, but can be swallowed much easier than installments two through seven.

Love Affair is one to remember...well, sort of

By Clinton Barkdoll
Editorial Editor

Few movies can be constantly remade and still be successful and entertaining at the boxoffice. Love Affair is the latest take off of the 1957 classic An Affair to Remember.

Since 1957 there have been numerous remakes of this classic movie, most recently last year's blockbuster Sleepless in Seattle. Each remake has used the same basic plot where two people fall in love although they are each engaged to other people.

In the original An Affair to Remember, the lovestruck couple agrees to break off their engagements and meet on Valentine's Day on top of the Empire State Building to be married. A similar story unfolds in Love Affair.

Warren Beatty excellently plays former quarterback Mike Gambril, who has led a life of womanizing and riches. He is engaged to a young talk show hostess worth over $100 million.

Gambril has a reputation as a real womanizer that the media just loves to talk about (very similar to the real-life Warren Beatty). Although Gambril has wealth, a beautiful fiancee and the love of millions of fans, there are hints of Gambril's discontent with life and the need for something different.

Gambril is flying to Sydney, Australia when he sees the beautiful Terry McCay, played by Annette Bening. Like Gambril, McCay is engaged to a wealthy young investment banker (played by the scruffy-looking Lorenzo Lamas).

Gambril begins to share his problems and opinions with McCay and is immediately taken by McCay's savviness and ability to relate. Over the course of the 13-hour flight to Australia. Gambril and McCay develop a unique affection for each other.

The plane is forced to do an emergency landing, leaving Gambril and McCay (and other passengers) on an unexpected three day cruise to the nearest airport. It is on this cruise where Gambril and McCay fall in love and have an affair. Eventually, the two return to the states and agree to meet on top of the Empire State Building in three months. The two finally reunite, with some major complications along the way.

Overall, this is a good film and much better than last year's snoozer Sleeples in Seattle. There are some lulls in the movie, but Love Affair, is basically well written.

Warren Beatty is excellent here (the best he has been in many years). Annette Bening is very good opposite Beatty: the two complement each other well (that's probably why they are married).

Although slow to develop, the movie is captivating and very touching at times. Appearances by Garry Shandling, Ed Mc-Mahon and Ray Charles add flavor to the film.

One disappointment with this movie was the overly-hyped role of Katherine Hepburn, who plays Gambril's Aunt Ginny. The Queen of Film appears during a very sentimental but brief segment and is obviously in failing health and seemed rather dull (Hepburn is also overweight. She has ballooned like Marlon Brando did a few years ago).

In spite of critical acclaim every time she blows her nose, don't expect to see an Academy Award for Hepburn here. Love Affair will not be her swan song either. She has already agreed to star in a movie next year.

Take a date to see Love Affair. It's sweet like cotton-candy and you'll both feel good after the movie.

Go to the bargain matinee, though. The movie may not be worth a full $5.50.

STALLONE'S LATEST DOESN'T BOMB

The Specialist explodes on big-screen

By Steve Steffek
Editor-in-Chief

The Specialist, Sylvester Stallone's latest action picture about a bomb expert, exploded at the box office when it opened, and is still doing well.

The movie, which co-stars Sharon Stone as the sultry seductress and James Woods as the slimy mobster, provides a compelling story line and some excellent special effects.

Stallone, who has learned a little bit about acting since the "Yo, Adrian" days, plays, Ray Quick, a one-time Marine bomber who has become a private assassin. He is considered one of the best in the business, which is why May Munro (Stone) hires him. Stone portrays a woman who witnessed her parents' murder as a child and is hiring Ray to get rid of the perpetrators.

Ned Trent (Woods) works forJoe Leon (Rod Steiger) the mobsters responsible for the murder. He has completely revamped and improved the family's entire system. Unfortunately, he is meeting with some resistance from Joe Leon's son, Thomas (Eric Roberts). As the plot unfolds, we find a complex web of relationships between the characters.

Sylvester Stallone stars as an bomb specialist in the new action picture The Specialist

The more she works with Ray, May begins to fall for him. Big surprise, huh? The two must battle the Leon family in order to live happily ever after.

The movie, which provides some excellent Hollywood explosions, is pretty entertaining. As a rule of thumb, I tend to avoid Stallone movies because of their shallowness.

However, The Specialist does cause some conscious thought. Unlike its summer counterpart Blown Away , the movie doesn't blow up along with the bombs. It contains good performances by Woods, Stallone and Stone.

Woods makes the baddest of bad guys along with Dennis Hopper, who coincidentally played a bomber in the other good bomb movie of the year, Speed.

I found The Specialist to have more BANG for your movie buck. It is a good entertaining, thought provoking film.

Fiction beats other movies to a pulp at box office

By Stephen B. Steffek
Editor-in-Chief

Quentin Tarantino, Hollywood's new wonderboy, has succeeded in bringing an interesting film to the screen with his latest attempt, Pulp Fiction. Tarantino has found an extremely large audience for his unique brand of black humor mixed with violence.

Pulp Fiction, his second directing effort, is being tagged as one of the most successful movies of the year and it has only been out for three weeks.

The film, which has a 2 1/2 hour length, allowing for about four daily showings, has outsold tickets to other films which can have up to six showings a day. This demonstrates an extremely high number of people per showing.

The film opens with Vincent (a long-haired John Travolta) and Jules (Samuel L. Jackson), a pair of hired guns, going to collect a briefcase from a group of small time hoods for their boss, Marsellus (Ving Rhames). On the way to the apartment complex, the two exchange small talk.

They discuss Vincent's upcoming "date" with Marsellus' wife, Mia (Uma Thurman). Jules tells Vincent about a time when Marsellus threw a man out of a window for massaging her feet. This topic makes for interesting conversation between the two.

Vincent takes Mia to a '50s memorabilia diner where they eat in a '50s-model Chrysler. Travolta struts his stuff once more when the two enter and win a "twist" contest.

Upon returning home, Mia overdoses on heroin and Vincent realizes that he is in big trouble if she dies while in his care.

Meanwhile, Butch, a boxer played by Bruce Willis, reneges on a deal to take a fall in the ring for Marsellus.

In a fit of rage at the double cross, the mob boss puts out an order that he wants his associates to find the boxer. If Butch turns up in Indonesia, he says, he wants "a nigger to pop out of his bowl of rice and put a cap in him."

Jimmy (Tarantino) sees The Wolf (Keitel) in action

While on the run, Butch "bumps" into the man he least wants to see, Marsellus. After a strange series of events, the pair find themselves in a bizarre situation. When Vincent and Jules find themselves with a body on their hands, they go to Jules' friend Jimmy (played by Tarantino) for help.

They find out that they must get it out of his garage before his wife gets home. They call on Mr. Winston Wolf (Harvey Keitel), an underworld associate of Marsellus, to help them get rid of the body. Upon disposing of the body, the pair go out to lunch only to find themselves in a Mexican standoff with Pumpkin and Honey Bunny (Tim Roth and Amanda Plummer).

Upon the film's conclusion, the audience finds itself on the edge of its seat.

Overall, I found the film to be extremely fast-paced and exciting. It won several of the highest awards at the Cannes Film Festival.

While it is probably a bit too violent for some tastes (several people left the theater), the film is quite an achievement for a one-time video store clerk with only a 9th grade education to direct.

The movie is full of excesses. The bad language, violence and use of derogatory slang terms are all very excessive. However, they do contribute greatly to the storyline and mirror reality rather than embellishing and distorting it by beautifying everything.

Tarantino's dialogue is already being praised as one of the saving graces of the movie. Much of the small talk that the characters make is reminiscent of conversations between everyday people.

I found that the storylines are not really anything new, but the way they are presented adds to the charm. When viewing the exorbitant violence, the audience must remember that it is, after all, only a movie.

Samuel L. Jackson will likely pick up an Oscar nomination for his performance as Jules, the mobster. Travolta is also being hailed for his return to the screen as Vincent Vega.

Anyone that has enjoyed Tarantino's prior ventures into Hollywood, Reservoir Dogs, Natural Born Killers and True Romance, will definitely find this to be similar to those. I found that the movie definitely lives up to the saying "Nothing exceeds like excess."

PULP FICTION
— It was better than Travolta in Saturday Night Fever. ([illegible], sophomore)
— I like the way he talked.
([illegible], sophomore)
— It was a violent, yet funny, film.
([illegible], junior)

GREASE
I like the part where he wants to be a jock and it doesn't work out.
(Tim [illegible], senior)
— It's the only one I've seen!
([illegible], freshman)
His singing was lively.

TWO OF A KIND
I thought it was his most touching performance.
([illegible], senior)

URBAN COWBOY
— I love any movie that Vinnie Barbarino is in.
(Angie Chapman, senior)

SATURDAY NIGHT FEVER
— Any movie that puts him on a lighted dance floor is alright by me.
([illegible], junior)
I like that Bee Gees music and the dance [illegible] move.
([illegible], freshman)

Travolta can be seen currently as Vincent Vega in the new film Pulp Fiction.

Cross country teams place first in CC

Men put seven runners in top 10

For the third time in a row, the men's cross country team has won the Carolinas Conference championship. The Panthers took first place at the conference tournament earlier this month with a low score of 19 points. Pfeiffer was a distant second with 55.

Seven of the top nine finishers were from High Point as the Panthers notched five All-Conference selections. High Point runners took the top three spots. First place went to Robert McCulloch with a time of 26:55. Sean Carter came in second place at 28:07 followed by Mike Dyess in third with a time of 28:21.

In the 32-man race, the Panthers also took the sixth through ninth places. Daniel Doub finished sixth with a time of 29:38, followed by Brian Donaruma (30:08), Jeff Goddard (30:29) and Anthony Billings (31:04).

McCulloch, Carter, Dyess, Doub and Donaruma were named to the seven-man All-Conference team due to their times at the conference meet. McCulloch was voted the conference's Most Valuable Runner.

"If I had to pick a surprise finisher for us, it would be Doub," said coach Bob Davidson, who was voted CC Coach of the Year. "(In the conference tournament) he jumped over Goddard and Donaruma, who he hasn't beaten all year long."

The next hurdle for the Panthers will be the Mid-South regionals Saturday in Berea, Ky.

"I think our men have a chance of winning this Kentucky competition," Davidson said.

If High Point qualifies, the national meet awaist them Nov. 19 in Kensoha, Wisc.

Women's Fab Five defies the odds

By Kevin Fielder
Staff writer

Once again, the Fabulous Five of the women's cross country team has beaten the odds by winning the Carolinas Conference championship meet.

When the season began, it looked as though the Lady Panthers would have an uphill battle due to their small numbers. Since five runners are needed for a team to place in the meet standings, their path did not look bright.

But the Lady Panthers turned the tide and went on to win the conference for the second straight year. High Point came in first with a score of 32 points, beating Pfeiffer, which had 47 points.

Elizabeth Young finished first for the Lady Panthers and second overall with a time of 20:59 while Melissa Lansberg was third at 21:12. Roz Hall came in fourth at 22:14, followed by Geisha O'Reilly in ninth (24:31) and Lisa Fuller in 14th (25:11).

Young, Lansberg and Hall repeated as All-Conference selections through finishing in the top seven.

Next on the list for the Fabulous Five is the Mid-South Regionals Saturday in Berea, Ky. where all runners must qualify for the nationals individually.

"It's a very long shot for the women to advance as a team, but our three All-Conference girls have a chance for qualifying as individuals at the nationals," Davidson said.

But who knows what could happen? The Lady Panthers could defeat the odds once more and advance to the nationals Nov. 19 in Kenosha, Wisc. as a team.

FCA makes impact on campus

Students may recall seeing signs on campus for a night of blindfold basketball last week. Many students took advantage of the opportunity and had a great time.

The activity was sponsored by a group known as the Fellowship of Christian Athletes (FCA). This group of over 30 students, like many groups, has a mission: "To present to athletes and coaches, and to all they influence, the challenge and the adventure of receiving Jesus Christ as our Savior and Lord, serving him in their relationships in the fellowship of the Church."

FCA tries to carry out this mission by sponsoring activities like the one last week. But the most important part of the FCA to its members is its bi-weekly "huddle meetings." At these meetrings, members read and together try to understand the Bible, then relate it to life and athletics.

FCA president Kevin Fielder said, "FCA is a place where Christians are able to talk to people that are like themselves. It's a place where all those people can come together like a family."

Fielder also pointed out that it's not the type of place "where you get beat over the head with a Bible." Anyone can join, athletes and non-athletes, of any faith.

FCA has made a difference in the lives of its members. One member said, "Freshman year was rough. People had me afraid of college. Everything felt right with FCA. It was a good way to meet people and to be me."

Along with activity nights and huddle meetings, the FCA attends various high school FCA rallies, helps and supports HPU collegiate teams and goes on trips such as ropes course training.

If anyone is interested in joining FCA, call Kevin Fielder at x9459 or the FCA adviser Coach Jimmie Burchette at x9272. Or just come to a huddle meeting at 8 p.m. on Tuesdays in the Leeds Room or at 7:15 a.m. on Wednesdays in the cafeteria.

BASKETBALL PREVIEWS

Time for hoopsters to hit the hardwood

Men deep at guard, sport young team

By Rob Humphreys

High Point begins the 1994-95 campaign coming off one of its most successful seasons in recent history. Though the Panthers finished second in the Carolinas Conference to Pfeiffer, High Point began the season with seven straight victories and was one win away from going to the NAIA national tournament.

In mid-season, High Point's 14-3 record earned a 12th place national ranking among NAIA teams. By season's end, the Panthers had dropped out of the top-25 with a 20-8, 10-4 record.

High Point will be without guards Tooey Loy and Edwin Lagrama, who both graduated last year. Forwards Michael Alexander, Michael Skinner and center David "Chill" Baldwin have also left due to graduation.

The Panthers return six players from last year's team, including '92-'93 Carolinas Conference Freshman of the Year, Demetrius Alexander. The 6-5 sophomore center was forced to sit out all of last season due to an anterior cruciate ligament injury sustained in the pre-season. After a year of rehabilitation, Alexander looks to be at full strength once again. Joining him at center will be 6-9 senior Pete Wyatt, who missed the first half of last year's season due to a broken wrist.

Coach Jerry Steele, who enters his 23rd year at High Point, feels the center position will be a "question mark" due to Alexander's and Wyatt's previous injuries. "We've got to have consistent play inside," Steele said. "If both of them can go, we have depth there. If they can't go, we move Brett Speight to center."

Speight, a 6-5 sophomore power forward, played center much of last season along with Baldwin. Depending on the condition of Alexander and Wyatt, Speight will return to the forward position along with 6-5 senior Robert Martin and 6-4 senior guard/forward Toby Brown. Both Martin and Brown are returners who contributed heavily to last year's success. Steele expects the same to be true this year, calling his forwards the strength his team.

High Point's depth lies at the guard positions. 5-10 senior Danny Watson returns to lead the Panthers' offensive attack at the point while Brown will see plenty of action at shooting guard.

Four newcomers give the Panthers added depth in the backcourt. Telly Bernard, a 5-9 sophomore from Mesquite, Tex. is a junior college transfer with good speed. Freshman Rashidi Clarence of the Virgin Islands will also compete for either a guard or forward spot. Australian Michael Farrell, who will be eligible second semester, is a versatile guard who has good ballhandling and shooting skills. Freshman guard Damian Foster might be red-shirted due to the number of guards already on the roster.

Steele, who brings 489 career wins into the season, is one of the country's winningest active coaches.

With a strong nucleus of guards, the Lady Panthers are aiming to better last year's 11-18 record which netted a fourth place Carolinas Conference finish. The addition of five quality players gives High Point added confidence it will avoid its second losing season in six years.

Karen Curtis, a 5-2 red-shirt freshman point guard, will head the Lady Panther's offensive attack. Curtis, who led Cary High School to the 4A championship in 1992, is described by coach Joe Ellenburg as "a dynamite player who will start—no question." In high school, Curtis was named 4A state MVP and won MVP honors at the state tournament, as well.

Holly Hendley, a 5-8 freshman shooting guard, averaged 15 ppg while playing at Blue Ridge High School in South Carolina. Hendley, who plays outside hitter for the HPU volleyball team, was also named Conference Player of the Year while at Blue Ridge.

Junior college transfer Kris Bowles possesess a deadly outside shot from her shooting guard position. Bowles, a 5-3 junior who plays soccer, averaged 17 ppg while at Albany, N.Y. Community College.

Gretta Miles and Pam Jarrett round out the list of newcomers. Miles returns to the team after appearances during the '90-'91 season and part of the '91-'92 season. Jarrett is a red-shirt freshman from Apex who will compete alongside Miles for a spot at wing.

The Lady Panthers return six players but only one senior, post player Mary Lyle. Shooting guard Tedra Lindsay should contribute heavily on offense and will definitely be an all-conference candidate. Lindsay was forced to play point guard much of last year but still managed to lead the team in scoring.

Wing players Lori Kuykendall and Angie Fouts should see considerable action. Ellenburg describes Fouts as an "excellent shooter with good scoring punch." Kuykendall's role is to rebound and provide quality defense.

Competing for two post positons are Lyle, Tiffanie Wilson and April Rose. The Lady Panthers run a 1-2-2 offense since there is no dominant low post player. Wilson and Rose are the tallest players at 5-11 while Lyle is 5-10.

"In order for us to contend, we have to offset our lack of height," Ellenburg said. "Usually you don't win without a strong low post player. Our strength is that we're an athletic team and have some running ability. But we don't have a big team—no six foot player. We are unproven. This team has a real challenge in front of it to see if it can be a winning team.

"It looks like we'll have enough people to play positions. The decision will be who backs up Karen Curtis. The two people most likely will be Holly and Kris."

In conference play, Ellenburg feels defending champion Lees McRae and Mount Olive will pose the most competition for High Point. The Lady Panthers hope to maintain the momentum which produced eight wins in their final 12 games last year.

"The conference is real tough in the first six spots," Ellenburg said. "It's usually not an easy night out against anybody. It will be a great race this year."

Men face Belmont today

Do-or-die situation for 5th seed Panthers

By Keith Corbett
Sports writer

The seniors that make up the men's soccer team are waiting anxiously to find if their last collegiate game will be today at noon.

After defeating No. 5 seed Coker on Saturday, HPU is hosting the No. 1 seed, Belmont Abbey (10-5-1). Coach Gibson is hoping that Saturday's performance will be a strict indication of what is to come today.

"The guys played like they're capable of playing," said Gibson. "We are finally maximizing our advantages."

Against Coker, the team took six first half shots on goal, resulting in two scores. But a soccer game is much more than 45 minutes.

"Yes, we played the best we've ever played in the first half, but we've got to do that in the second as well," said senior co-captain Dean Preston (who scored in the first half). "We can't have any letdowns against Belmont."

Letdowns, both mental and physical, have been the Panthers' Achilles heel in this season, along with injuries. Senior Whitaker Augier, though sidelined for the last several weeks with a leg injury, was a consistent contributor on the field for the first half of the season. Now he gives his support from the sideline.

"The mental letdowns have killed this team in the past and could hamper us in the future." said Augier. "Hopefully I can offer some moral support, encouragement and a positive attitude."

HPU has everything to be positive about. Losing to Belmont earlier on a penalty kick, and coming off of its best game this year, may propel it to the championship game against either Mt. Olive (No. 3) or Pfeiffer (No. 2) at home on Saturday.

The women's soccer team finished the regular season with a 10-6-1 record overall and a 3-3 record in the conference. The ladies then beat Pfeiffer 6-0 in the first round of the Carolinas Conference tournament to set up a showdown with Coker in the semifinals this Friday at noon at Panther Stadium.

Coach Woody Gibson was pleased with the first round victory and the season, but he is especially looking forward to the rematch with Coker.

"I thought we played well against Pfeiffer to open the tournament," said Gibson. "We struggled in the first half but came back strong in the second. The outcome was predictable since we beat them earlier in the year. It was good we had no injuries and nobody got carded."

Still, clearly the game the Panthers are looking forward to is the rematch with Coker. The Cobras enter the game undefeated and ranked fourth in the NAIA National Poll. Early in the season, Coker beat High Point 2-1 to give the Panthers one of their three conference losses.

Nothing would be sweeter to Gibson than a win over Coker Friday. The winner advances to the conference championship on Saturday afternoon in High Point. The winner of the tournament advances to the NAIA southern regional playoffs.

"We have improved an awful lot since we played them last." said Gibson. "They have too. It should be a great match. We have the talent to win and certainly can if we play well. But, we definitely have to play well."

After beginning the season 2-4, the ladies won eight of their last 11, including a tie with Catawba. The record was not as good as the season before, but Gibson contributed that to a tougher schedule and problems in the beginning of the season with an abundance of good players. Gibson noted the improvement throughout the year, and rated the overall season as a success.

"I thought we had a good season overall," said Gibson. "We could have played better at times. We struggled to get new people in early. Once that settled down we were fine. We are a better team than we were early in the season. We've never been in a position to play in a big tournament game (like the one Friday) since the team is in its third year. I'm interested to see how our players react to it."

For the regular season, Erin McConville led the team with 16 goals and 41 points. Jonelle Corsey was second in goals with 13 and finished with 34 points. Deb Nichols had another impressive year in goal, averaging just one goal allowed per game and registering nine shutouts.

Volleyball team heads into tournament on a tear

Lady Panthers break St. Andrews' win streak

The women's volleyball team nears the end of its season looking forward to competing in the Carolinas Conference Tournament at St. Andrews this weekend. As of Monday, the Lady Panthers (13-22, 11-3) had won 10 straight conference games after starting 1-3.

"What is in front of us is the tournament," coach Joe Ellenburg said. "The winner goes to Kentucky for regionals (Nov. 18 and 19). The loser goes home."

At the beginning of the year, the women were working hard as a young team to prove they could overcome inopportune setbacks. A big confidence builder was last weekend's win over the conference's top ranked team, St. Andrews.

The Lady Panthers' victory broke St. Andrews' 38-game win streak, which stretched over two-and-a-half years, by notching three of four games. In fact, High Point was the last team to beat them in the conference.

"The game set up a potential showdown between High Point and St. Andrews in the upcoming tournament and shows remarkable progression for us as a team since the eligibility problem we faced at the beginning of the year," Ellenburg said. "That incident threw us off our momentum as far as team chemistry is concerned."

In spite of the difficulties of adjusting to the loss of a key player, the team regained confidence and has been very successful. Ellenburg claimed everyone contributed to an 11-3 conference record.

"Jamie Walsh has done an outstanding job as a middle hitter, and (CC Player of the Week) Christine Anderson, our only senior...has been a real strong asset to our offense," Ellenburg said. "We, the coaches, think we have the number one and two best defensive players in the conference in Anitra Dodson and Holly Hendley."

Tiffany Wilson had a solid season at blocker and combined with Lori Kuykendall's steady improvement at setter to give the team a boost heading into post-season play. Kuykendall was named Floor-Captain for her leadership abilities, spawning Elleburger to classify her as, "our inspirational player and go-getter."

Ellenburg further credits Floor Coach Theresa Shaw Faucette for pulling the players together and giving them the encouragement to believe in themselves.

High Point will enter the CC tournament with a strong ranking due to its late resurgence. The Lady Panthers' actual record is 22-13, 12-2, but they were forced to forfeit their first 14 games.

Expect the women to be ranked No. 2 behind St. Andrews. Also expect the Lady Panthers to carry their momentum into a final round match against St. Andrews where the winner will advance to the NAIA National Tournament.

Looking past this weekend's tournament, plans are to recruit, looking for all-around good players with some height which will add to the team's strength.

"Overall, the outlook beyond this weekend is very favorable," Ellenburg said.

CC PRESEASON BASKETBALL POLL

Conference coaches predict Pfeiffer, Mt. Olive first place in basketball poll

CIAC News Release

THOMASVILLE, NC — Pfeiffer College's men's basketball team and Mt. Olive College's women's basketball team have been selected to finish first in the 1994 Carolinas Conference preseason basketball poll, as voted upon by the league's coaches.

Pfeiffer picked up five of a possible eight first place votes in the men's poll. The Falcons, coached by Bobby Lutz, have already been tabbed No. 6 in the pre-season NAIA Top-20 poll.

They return two starters from a team that went 24-6 and made the national tournament last season, but the addition of three outstanding newcomers have them tabbed as conference frontrunners once again. Pfeiffer, which lost 77-71 to High Point last year in the regular season, has won the Carolinas Conference title the last four seasons.

The High Point men finished five points behind the Falcons with 42 points and claimed two first place votes.

Mt. Olive grabbed two first place votes in a very close preseason women's poll. The Lady Trojans, coached by Fran Hooks, return eight players from a 22-6 team which took first place in the conference during the regular season.

High Point's women came in fourth with 28 points and one first place vote.

Faculty displays art at High Point Theatre

By Tonya Lyons
Staff writer

The art faculty share their love of art in an exhibition at the High Point Theatre Art Gallery.

Toni Byrd, Billy McClain, Lea Lackey-Zachmann, Cherl Harrison, and Andrea Wheless have all donated their works and time to show parts of themselves and their passion for their work.

Andrea Wheless gracefully shows the worst of emotions in a series of works she calls "Village People: Faces of Grief." She created her works for her father, who passed away as a result of an auto accident.

"These are all the reactions to the grief process," she said. "It is my own personal statement, but it has a universal appeal."

Dr. Cherl Harrison donated several thoughtful works of art. Her first piece is a pastel on paper called "Tango." This piece is striking because of the center overlay of a man choking a woman in front front of a couple dancing. This piece was done as Dr. Harrison's doctoral dissertation on punks and art.

Harrison's crowning pieces are a series of conte crayon drawings she did in memory of a friend of hers who died of cancer. Her haunting drawings of a skeleton in different dances reminded me of the human body's rhythm.

"I like drawing the human figure. because it can say so much in terms of narrative and abstract ideas," Harrison says.

Lackey-Zachmann has one of the most stunning presentations there.

In her personal statement, she said, "Symbols and the way they present their meanings have always intrigued me."

Her three paintings. "The Red King's Orchard," "Mercy Velis." and "Mike's Place" use circular shapes and bright colors to describe various emotions. "Mercy Velis," with its cool blue colors remind me of the casual nature of conception. "Mike's Place" shows its symbolic masculinity with yellows. oranges and harsh lines.

I found each of the artists' works impressive in its own respect. I commend each of the artists for the time and care they have imbued their works with.

The exhibition shows Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. until Dec. 19 at the High Point Theatre Art Gallery. Go and see the love artists share with a viewer.

Aids quilt leaves crowd speechless

By Lori McBrayer
Staff writer

The view rendered the crowd speechless. The only sound was the heat pumping through the air ducts inside the Greensboro Coliseum Special Events Center on Dec. 2.

More than 1800 panels of the NAMES Project AIDS Memorial quilt covered the floor and walls. Each panel contained the biography of a victim of the AIDS virus. Some of the panels were brightly colored while others were black and white.

Air-brushed drawings of the victims or cartoon characters covered some of the quilts. Favorite articles of clothing or photographs covered others.

Messages in the form of prayers, poems and Bible verses expressed the loss felt by family, friends and lovers. Some of the mourners wrote about the happy moments spent with loved ones before the virus took their lives. Some expressed feelings of grief and bitterness.

The panels came from all over the United States as well as many countries. Thousands of three-by-six feet pieces of cloth remind viewers that AIDS does not discriminate on the basis of race, sex, age or religion.

Teddybears belonging to babies or stuffed fabric stars bearing messages from family members and friends give a third dimension to the names sewn on the quilt.

Each name belonged to someone's son or daughter. That person had hopes and dreams. That person experienced joy as well as the pain which preceded death.

Freshmen throw off slacker label, form service organization

By Keith Corbett
Staff writer

While society complains about the lack of drive and intiative among the "slacker generation," several High Point freshmen have nullified that stereotype.

Thirteen freshmen have been instrumental in the formation of Circle K, the campus' newest service group. As a charter organization of the National Kiwanis Club, and as a brother organization of local high schools, Circle K is blossoming in its first semester of service.

Since its charter and budget were unamiously passed by the SGA in October, Circle K has become a self-described "animal."

"We are a beast of an organization," said Treasurer Kyle Wade, a freshman. "We take on virtually anything and have no problems with completing the task put in front of us."

In two months, "the beast" has accumulated over 275 hours of community service. Sixteen Circle K members have conducted activities ranging from ringing bells for the salvation army to decorating Christmas murals at retirement homes.

"This is a tribute to the freshman class," Membership Committee Chair Keith Anderson said. "They are willing to give time to those who are less fortunate. ...This is a great example for others -- freshmen as well as upperclassmen."

Though Circle K is a new organization this year with new faces, it is not new on campus. The organization existed at High Point College over 10 years ago, but died out due to a lack of drive. A decade later. Circle K is in full gear.

"Circle K has worked hard to get their organization started," SGA President Clint Barkdoll said. "This hard work will undoubtedly carry over and produce a productive organization."

Farewell to High Point University

By Clinton Barkdoll
Editorial Editor

There comes a time in all our lives where we must move on and pursue new things. For me, that time has come. This will be my final column as a High Point University student.

Much has happened here since this 17-year-old arrived in the fall of 1991. The school was then High Point College, the Millis Center was under construction, there was not a graduate program, that pesky Montlieu Ave. went through the campus, TV cable in dorms was unheard of and the master plan for the future development of High Point University was just beginning.

It has been interesting to witness these historic changes and encouraging to see such positive steps taken to improve the institution.

When I became editor in May of 1993, similar changes were needed to improve our campus newspaper. Gradually, the entire newspaper, from printing to production processes, was overhauled. There were many problems in those first few months under a new system.

However, the newspaper has continually improved to a point today where we have a superb publication. Diligent efforts by many people (not including me necessarily) have caused this to happen. Of course, the name of the newspaper changed too.

I recall receiving substantial correspondence about the possibility of scrapping the old newspaper name. One professor even sent a compelling letter citing certain drug connotations to the former name of this publication.

Although a firestorm of opinion was anticipated, never did I think that such hateful comments would be sent by readers (ranging from students to alumni to faculty). One anonymous letter said I had bought a ticket straight to hell for ignoring tradition (and wanting to change the newspaper name). Undeterred, we held a campus-wide election and The Campus Chronicle became our new name.

For nearly seven years I have been writing editorials for one publication or another. I am constantly amazed at the thoughtfulness and interest expressed by newspaper readers. At the same time, though, readers have occasionally expressed a certain distaste for me.

One distinct memory of this involved last year's editorial I wrote supporting gays in the military. Shortly after publication. I began to receive a series of threatening and hateful letters (most of which were anonymous). To put it mildly. some disgruntled readers thought my opinion on the issue made me immoral.

Such reactions are part of editorial territory—don't play the game if you can't take the heat. As an editorial writer. you must anticipate the angry (and usually misdirected) response you will often receive from readers and develop an alligator skin for your own good. Through it all. you will learn a lot about students and people.

I am honored to have had the privilege to write on these pages for the past two years. I hope my editorials have provoked thought and debate among readers. Thanks to everyone who has helped me and made my stay at High Point University a pleasant one. Although we all complain sometimes, this is a good place to spend four years of your life.

A look into the crystal ball – ahead to the year 2000

By Clinton Barkdoll
Editorial Editor

Jan. 1, 2000: High Point University has just finished its 75th anniversary celebration and much has changed on campus and in the nation over the past six years.

On campus:

—After much wrangling, High Point joined the Big South Conference. This move propelled the University to national prominence and was the final step in making High Point a premier college of the southeast.

—In 1997, the Board of Trustees finally wised up and decided to distribute condoms and other birth control methods on campus. This move was prompted when a High Point student contracted AIDS last year during unprotected sex.

—Many longtime administrators retired last year after seeing their vision for the University through —The long overdue move to reinstate the writing proficiency exam finally happened; High Point graduates lacking basic writing skills were becoming too embarrassing to the University

—High Point University raised over $50 million for the Founders Campaign

—Average SAT scores for entering freshmen in 1999 were 1120 (adjusted for that ludicrous recentering method installed by the Princeton Board in 1994)

—University endowment at the close of the 1999 fiscal year was $75 million

On the national scene:

—Famous High Point alumnus Lauch Faircloth was defeated in his first reelection bid for the US Senate

—The conservative movement in America has carried through the year 2000. Republicans have failed to fully capitalize, though. as the Democratic Leadership Council (DLC) has moved decidedly to the right. adopting a very moderate national agenda. And yes. voters seem to like this new platform.

--Senator Arlen Specter (R-Pa.) was the 1996 Republican nominee for president: his bid proved unsuccessful

--Bill Clinton narrowly won the Democratic nomination (beating out West Virginian Jay Rockefeller) for president in 1996 and won reelection in the closest race in U.S. history

--Former Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev made a surprise comeback and defeated Boris Yeltsen to once again become president

--The stock market hit the 3400 mark in late 1997 but has rebounded to nearly 4000 today.

Let's stop killing the innocent children

The tragedy recently in a small town in South Carolina where a mother selfishly murdered her two small sons again provided a view of the increasingly wicked age we live in. The daily senseless murders, rapes, and cases of abuse we read and hear about are bad enough, but this is a mother killing her own children. The question of why people do such evil works is one that sociologists, psychologists and the like fail to answer.

The prophet Jeremiah said. "The heart is deceitful above all things, and desparately wicked: who can know it?" King David of Israel admitted, "Behold, I was shapen in iniquity; and in sin did my mother conceive me." The truth is that since Adam and Eve fell to sin after the temptation of the devil, every human being has been born with a nature to sin (that is, to do that which is morally wrong. against God's word).

The apostle Paul tells us, "There is none righteous. no not one...For all have sinned and come short of the glory of God." He warned us that in the "last days" perilous times shall come.

People will be selfish. unthankful. vicious, covetous and without natural affections, loving personal pleasure more than God. Murdering your own children. whether by drowning them in a car or by abortion. is definitely a sign that those "last days" are here. These characteristics have never been as widespread as today.

There is good news. though. As by one man's disobedience many were made sinners. so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous. God proved His love toward us. in that, "while we were sinners Christ died for us." Jesus'sacrifice on the cross was to make a way out for sinners.

If we put our trust and faith in the blood He shed, we are born again, saved from our sin and partakers of the glories God has promised in heaven. The love of Christ constrains Christians to live a Godly life (not perfect. but trying in grace to obey God's word). "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away: behold, all new things are made new." Christians make better husbands, wives. parents and citizens in general. If insane criminal activity is to end, Jesus Christ is the only answer (John 3:16-21).

Sincerely,
Derrick G. Hinson (Senior)

High Point professor moved by art display

To the Editor:

They pull us around, these artist colleagues of ours, push us around, pull us up close and then push us away. Stand still among their paintings and sculptures, and we miss something.

Cherl Harrison's joyous danse macabre we see first, from a distance—four large skeletons. dramatic white on black. The human form, but no sexist flesh show. This is movement and emotion, cut to the bone. Up close, the figures lose some of their horror, becoming among flowers human, human. I don't think Harrison knows the slightest thing about death; her sense of life is too strong.

And then, faces, faces, faces take us. To the right, Toni Byrd's three women—or is it three renderings of the same woman?—peer at us, challenging us to accept them, perhaps, paradoxically lurid and noble as they are. Or not caring what we think about them.

Then, from across the room Andrea Wheless' "Village People: Faces of Grief" draws us into a crowd of the suffering, a world, a universe of suffering. Going closer, close. we eventually feel at home among these terra cotta slabs and columns of reliefs. We know these people. We are these people. We are arrested by one face in particular. at the top of a column of grieving faces. It is the most beautiful face of the multitude. twisted most poignantly. wailing into the silent. unresponsive cosmos. Only love could make such sorrow lovely.

To seek relief. we turn to Billy McClain's and Lea Lackey-Zachmann's non-representational paintings.

We are calmed by McClain's three variations on the "Cross" theme and four variations on the "Portal" or omega-shape theme. They are energetic. nevertheless. combining "objective" geometrical motifs with "living" organic ones. The shapes are alive with colors of earth and vegetation. Nature, McClain shows. to look at his paintings another way. is abstract. and is the door through which we may see something else. maybe mystery itself.

Looking from there, from the wall where McClain's pictures hang. Lackey-Zachmann's four large paintings on the opposite wall seem phantasmagorias. scenes from another world. perhaps microscopic, perhaps alien. We are intimidated. Pulled from McClain's externality to Lackey-Zachmann's internality, though, we are amazed by the softness and smoothness of her surfaces, made of acrylic and prismacolor on cotton.

We are amusing ourselves with the 3-D effects of four small delicate collages by Lackey-Zachmann, when we are surprised by another large picture in the gallery, one we, strangely, have not noticed before. From that distance, it is a sensuous representation of a couple dancing.

From two feet away, however, there is something else indeed! Oh, my goodness, on this drawing called "Tango" Harrison has taped a small transparent panel with an outline drawing of a man strangling a woman. This is the terrifying irony of the human spirit. This is the powerful irony of the artist.

There are more wonders in this exhibit. Go see them. Be moved.

A rebuttal to Keenan

Dear Editor:

Since the last issue of the Chronicle. life has seemed to return to normal in the relationship between Greeks and independents. However, the response over the failure of two Greek SGA bills still bothers me.

This case was a perfect example of the all too frequent occurrence of a group feeling discriminated against as a whole when one small aspect of their body is criticized.

First, the facts. Both IFC and Panhellenic did not receive budgets this semester from SGA due to poor attendance. They therefore submitted bills to cover this error. A large portion of these bills contained items which would normally be cut by the budget committee.

The Greeks. especially representing IFC, who defended the original bill did not do their job well. They were unaware of several important facts and were unprepared for questions.

They were unable to properly defend the reason such a large amount of money should be given to one organization. This is why the bill failed.

The fact that the bills were for Greeks was not the major issue. However. many people thought that this was the case and walked out. The next week Clint Barkdoll and Megan Keenan both wrote editorials with their view of the instance.

There are several parts of Keenan's article that I have problems understanding. The most significant question I have is "why is the fact that since Greeks do a lot of charity work, they should automatically get free rides in the SGA financial system?"

Keenan's and other's only defense to the Greek standpoint is that they should not be criticized because the feel that the Greeks do a majority of the projects on campus. Keenan listed several fundraisers and projects that the Greeks assisted in.

I could spend time here and list the large amount of independent involvement in those same projects. I will not do this because that involvement is completely irrelevant as to why the bills failed. They failed because they were poorly presented.

College is a learning experience. Mistakes are much less costly here than in the real world. The IFC bill was worked on and resubmitted. The second time the bill was well supported and defended. Because of this. this bill passed. Everyone learned from the experience.

Keenan also stated that she was "totally disgusted by the extreme scrutiny of the [Greek] bills". She felt that this was unfair. I remember a major fight over many bills such as last year's radio station bill. And who could forget the disaster of Student Union and that financial scandal.

Another interesting point that Keenan made was that the Greeks were discriminated against because of the drinking and partying aurora that they possess. I find this interesting because this way not a relative issue and the only one who brought it up was Keenan. It is Keenan herself who is so concerned with the issue of drinking and partying that she feels obligated to defend that aspect of the Greek system which she loves so much.

This editorial was not "blasting" the Greek system but rather criticizing one particular point.

It is unfortunate that on this campus and in this society that divisions exist between groups whether it be Greeks and independents. blacks and whites. or men and women. The positive thing is that everyone has their opinion. Not everyone will agree with me, Megan Keenan. Clint Barkdoll. Fred Jordon. and others. What is important is that forums like this paper allow us to defend out position.

Sincerely,
Joe Aveut

Campus must come together to benefit all

To the Editor:

As a junior at High Point University, an active member of the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity, and speaker of the house for Student Government, I have seen many occasions of conflict and cooperation among this campus community. What I have seen and heard over the course of this semester is nothing less than appalling, perhaps none more than the rhetoric that has been taking place between Greek and Independent interests.

This dialogue has degenerated to a point that it has become corrosive to our community. I do not write this to take a side, but to appeal to the mature nature of the Independent and Greek constituencies. It is not becoming of members of this university to be pointing the finger at others and saying it was their fault and not mine. The mood on this campus has been the most positive that I have seen in my three years and for people to set themselves above the welfare of the whole is senseless.

The Independent and Greek ways of life are both rewarding, depending on your interests and needs. That is why the campus offers both of them. That is why fraternity and sorority growth among colleges in America and abroad continues to soar. That is why independent life and student activities continue to improve and membership nationwide and here at High Point. The student body has the potential to be the most powerful, influential group on this campus, but a house divided will not stand. You. the student body. are rendering yourselves ineffective.

Who will stand up and convey to these individuals that they are wrong? I will. but there are those who see what transpires but never say a word. Stand up for yourselves, stand up for the way this community could be relating functioning to better itself and its members.

Now what will this all have meant? Will you take newspaper articles. revelry from the so-called victories over other organizations on campus OR will you be a part of something much more worthwhile here at High Point University?

Choose to be part of the community, part of the family. that does worthy things together and that in the process makes you a better person.

Sincerely.
Keith Anderson

Carter starts AIDS Awareness Week at HPU

By Ruth Ann Milam
Special to the Chronicle

It is estimated that by the year 2000. 40 million people will die of AIDS-related illnesses. About one in every 500 students today is carrying the virus. These are the reasons for the annual AIDS Awareness Week held on campus.

"I've been doing this for three years now. Every year builds on the previous year. Last year wasn't as good," said Brett Carter, coordinator of the week-long observance.

He began planning his first AIDS Awareness Week when a student came to him and asked why this campus did not have AIDS programs.

"No one actually does AIDS Awareness Week. There is World AIDS Day. It would have taken it a step farther." Carter said.

Carter started planning this year's observance around Nov. 1. He coordinated the university's program with various organizations in the community, including the Triad Health Project, which was responsible for getting two panels of the AIDS quilt to the Triad.

Cathy Sutphen, a senior in charge of selling shirts, said she was contacted by Greenpoint Dependency Center. "We raised almost $100. People also gave us donations."

The week included several events. The theme of the week was to raise awareness of the disease and make people realize that it is not just a gay issue. Red ribbons were available in the cafeteria for students to wear, and there was a presentation aimed at teaching how to prevent the spread of this virus.

There was a food drive in which ARA donated a large amount of food to the Triad Health Project. This food will be given to victims of the virus who have lost their jobs and homes.

On Dec. 1, a walk was held at the Greensboro Coliseum in observance of World AIDS Day. Carter said the walk was overwhelming, to see so many people out to support this issue. A path was marked on the parking lot with luminaries in the shape of a ribbon.

"I think the walk was short," said Erin Jarman, an English major who expected a longer trek. "After the walk, everybody went inside to see the quilt. That was sad. People weren't really crying during the walk, but they were at the quilt."

Carter said he believes the quilt really serves to show that people are dying. He said that once students see it, they realize the impact AIDS is having on lives.

Carter also said he has been criticized for volunteering for the Triad Health Project, which cares for AIDS victims. But he doesn't care. His helping AIDS patients has made some people uncomfortable.

"I am dealing with a population (of students)," he says. He hopes that AIDS Awareness Week will serve to educate students about the disease.

BOOK REVIEW

McCaslin chronicles HPU history in latest book

By Joe Avent
Staff writer

A new book which details the history of High Point College hits the stands Dec. 9. Remembered Be Thy Blessings: High Point University—The College Years, 1924-1991 by Dr. Richard B. McCaslin will be available in hardback for $19.99 at the campus bookstore.

The book focuses more on the history of High Point College in regards to effects seen by the various presidents, trustees, and faculty rather than the students. In most cases students are just referred to as numbers and bodies for whom dorm space was needed to be found. There is a chapter, however, which describes student organizations, athletics, and other programs.

The history of High Point College began almost 100 years prior to the opening of Roberts Hall. McCaslin goes into great detail explaining the need felt by the Methodist church in forming colleges in North Carolinia. Included in this is the existence and failure of Yadkin College which can be considered a forerunner to High Point College.

The early involvement of the Methodist church is of great importance because even though High Point is still affiliated it seems, at least from a student perspective, that the affiliation is in name only.

Two common themes recur throughout the terms of the six college presidents, from Andrews to Martinson, those being growth and financial instability.

One would think that these two themes are incompatiable. However, the history shows the struggle to form a small college from one general-purpose building and two small dorms, of which the roofs were not completed, into a medium- sized university.

Another frequent occurrence shown in the book was the many different uses of the buildings accommodated over the years. As the college became larger, the bookstore, cafeteria, auditorium and other facilities were forced to move from one building to another.

The book also gives a look at several of the current administration and faculty in regards to their academic background, when and how they came to High Point, and some of their contributions to this institution.

McCaslin also answers that often -asked question of why High Point no longer has a football team.

This book should be read by any student or faculty member who cares about the institution of which they are a part . It does not take many years for an event or change at this university to be forgotten because all of the students who were a part of it are gone.

For example, prior to the fall of 1990, Millis Hall was for the fraternities. There are very few students left today who have firsthand knowledge of this fact.

Understanding the history of High Point College and the key players involved gives a better understanding as to the physical campus today. People with names such as Roberts, Hayworth, Kirkman, Smith, Cooke and Harrison are still with us but they have been transformed into structures of brick and concrete.

Reading this book can also help students in the writing of papers. The book is a perfect example of what professors, such as McCaslin, are looking for.

Remembered Be Thy Blessings would also be a good addition to the North Carolina History class. This case study would gives those students a better understanding of religious establishments, internal politics, finances and education in North Carolinia.

Georgian students study business at High Point

By Jeanne Holley

Two students from the formerly Russian republic of Georgia have come here to gain the business skill to help the ailing economy in their native land.

Two years ago, Levan Seperteladze left his homeland and set out for the United States. After attending Tbilisi State University, one of the biggest and best universities in the republic of Georgia, he decided to continue his education at Brevard College in North Carolina.

Levan had studied business and wanted to increase his knowledge of the field by learning about the functions of businesses in the United States. Levan attended Brevard for a year and then decided to transfer to High Point.

Levan told his friend from home, Nikoloz Kizikurashvili, about his decision and recommended that he come here as well. Being a business major himself, Nikoloz decided to come to High Point.

Nikoloz was interested in learning the English language and continuing his education in business. He, too, had attended Tbilisi State University and he also held a part-time job at a champagne company located in his homeland. In August, Levan and Nikoloz were reunited at High Point.

Levan and Nikoloz are fluent in Georgian, Russian and English. They enjoy living in America and feel that the people in High Point treat them with sincere kindness. They are also impressed with the structure of the classes here and feel that the professors are nice.

Levan and Nikoloz with Russian Ambassador.

The only real difference between High Point and Tbilisi State University is the price of an education. It does not cost anything to attend school back in their country. As for their interests, they both are avid soccer fans as they both played on teams back in their country. They also enjoy spending time with friends and having fun.

The Republic of Georgia is in trouble economically. Levan and Nikoloz hope to use their degrees in business to help get their country out of the difficult position that it is in. They are hoping that High Point University will be able to prepare them for this task.

wagon with the words "He loved his car 'Bulah.'" He lived a life not so different from many of ours.

"It's kind of overwhelming, yet inspirational," a young woman from Spartanburg, S.C. said.

The overwhelming effect of the quilt could be seen in the faces of the people attending the exhibit.

"You see yourself up there," a student from Guilford College remarked as he gazed up at a panel on the wall. His boyfriend, a UNCG student, explained, "When you think of it as a predominantly gay disease, you look around and realize it's really not."

The quilt seems to reach out to those who dismiss the virus as something that affects other people. It shows that AIDS kills normal people who never thought it could happen to them.

Christina Hughes, an HPU junior double-majoring in psychology and math. stated, "It brings it home. It makes you realize they're real people."

Seemingly insignificant pieces of cloth, when sewn together, form a bond among people from all over the world. A quilt sewn in love and hope may be the weapon that will eventually destroy AIDS.

FILMMAKER DISCUSSES NEGATIVE EFFECTS OF MEDIA

Stone addresses role of media in society

By Stephen B. Steffek
Editor-in-Chief

BLACKSBURG, VA -- In a recent speaking engagement at Virginia Tech, Oliver Stone stated the reason for the anti-Vietnam vet sentiment that followed the war was that "people just didn't give a s--t anymore."

Stone, who served in Vietnam twice. once as a soldier and once as a civilian. feels that people had become so inundated with media hype about the war during its course that they didn't care about the vets or what they stood for anymore by the time it was over.

Stone spoke about the role of media in American culture. He discussed five points in his life where he had become disillusioned with the media.

The first of these was the JFK assassination. He felt that the media confusion that followed it demonstrated all of the conflicting opinions and feelings that cloud the truth of many media stories.

The Vietnam war was the second event to alter his feelings about the media. Stone felt that its media coverage desensitized Americans to the true violence that was going on. He felt that since people could tune into it on their TVs nightly with a bowl of popcorn, the true effects that it had were blurred.

While in Thailand a few years ago, Stone witnessed a coup d'état. About 100 students were killed in the event and it was picked up and sent out through many of the media. What was ignored however was the silent protest by over 10, 000 monks in the wake of the incident. This received little media attention. He felt that this solidified his feeling that the media are very sensationalized.

The Gulf War also changed Stone's view about the role of the media in society because it caused it to become an interactive war. We, the audience, were able to see things instantaneously. He felt that this lack of distancing caused people to become very desensitized to the violence that was occurring. He said that while we did see bombs hit buildings, we did not see the effects of those bombs or the people that were in the buildings.

Stone's interpretation of many of the events that surround the CIA has also changed his feelings about that government institution in addition to the media. "That organization has made more mistakes than any other one," Stone stated.

Stone also stated that he felt film was to America what ideograms are to Indonesia. He feels that film can be a defining factor of our society.

He answered many questions for the group in a 40-minute "Q&A" session. During this he fielded many questions about the intentions of his recent film Natur*al Born Killers*.

He also stated that he agrees with Motion Picture Association of America president Jack Valenti that there is an adult category (the NC-17 and R ratings). He feels that the stigma attached to these two things keeps film companies from making movies that can be directed to the adult audience.

"I feel that we are becoming a PG-13 society," Stone said of the current trend in filmmaking to cater to the younger audience.

Stone feels that while many filmmakers attempt to inject spiritualism into their films, it is rejected by the commercial industry of Hollywood.

Overall, Stone had many interesting insights about society, media and history. I found his presentation to be interesting and informative.

McCaslin's Tainted Breeze earns recognition

By Wendy S. Canaday

What started as a paper about American legal history grew until it became a dissertation and book recognized by the History Book Club as Book of the Month.

Dr. Richard B. McCaslin, associate professor of history, author of the book Tainted Breeze: The Great Hanging at Gainesville, Texas 1862 said, "People told me it would never make a dissertation – there wasn't enough material on it. But I dug and dug. By the time it reached 643 pages, they agreed."

The book revolves around a mass hanging that took place in October, 1862 in Texas. The Confederate authorities were very concerned that local Unionists were forming a dangerous conspiracy, so they rounded up about 200 people in a vigilante trial, lynching 42.

"It is the largest mass hanging in American history," McCaslin said. "The book tries to explain why 42 people can be hanged by their next door neighbors."

Dr. Richard McCaslin

McCaslin believes his career as a historian was invevitable.

"I never really had a chance," said McCaslin, who was born in Georgia and moved to Mississippi when he was eight.. "I was raised mostly by women -- older women. Civil War and old things were around me.

"Stories of things 100 years ago were being told to me. I grew up with it."

Tainted Breeze has been nominated for eight awards including the prestigious Lincoln Award. McCaslin has two more books this month.

Portraits of a Conflict, is the first in a series about the Civil War. It emphasizes the human aspect of war. The second book will examine the history of High Point University.

McCaslin is a graduate of Delta State University who earned his master's degree at Louisiana State Universtiy. From there, he went to the University of Texas where he received a doctorate of history.

McCaslin also has several other books in the making.

Campus recycling to begin in February

High Point Unviersity has tentatively agreed to start a campus-wide recycling program with Browning Ferris Industries (BFI).

Initially, the recycling progam will include office paper only and gradually phase in other recyclable materials. The office paper recycling may begin as soon as Feb. 1 of next year.

The agreement was announced at the Nov. 30 Student Government Association meeting.

The Office of Student Life, the SGA. Circle K, Students Taking on Environmental Problems (STEP). the campus American Chemical Society (ACS) and other interested students participated in developing the recycling plan.

Bosstones return to music scene with Answers

The Mighty Mighty Bosstones provide unique brand of college rock with Question The Answers

By Stephen B. Steffek
Editor-in-Chief

The Mighty Mighty Bosstones are back on the college music scene with their personalized brand of raucous rock.

Question The Answers is the newest album from these kings of the horn. The band has a unique brand of rock and roll that has earned them a signature sound. The abrasive voice of vocalist Dicky Barrett glides over the heavy bed of instruments. The results are often interesting and enjoyable.

The album's first single "Kinder Words" is receiving good MTV and college radio airplay. I found the song to be enjoyable.

When boiled down, the songs are basically punk tunes added to the harmonics of soul and reggae rhythms and a wide array of instruments. I found that this uncommon sound is exemplary and creates a singular, unparalleled album. It is a good addition to any rock music collection. It caters to many tastes and multiplies them by 10. The Bosstones offer a complex album filled with the horns from hell.

"A Sad Silence," "Hell of a Hat" and "Pictures to Prove It" offer very innovative musical styles. They are each viable rock songs. Toxic Toast is also an enjoyable song.

In press materials, saxophonist Timothy Burton said of the Bosstones that they are "ordinary people trying to do extraordinary things with a limited budget and questionable talent." Barrett states that the title of the album means "you should probably question the answers, including the ones we're giving to you now."

I feel that the band has done an excellent job of meeting its goals on its new album Question The Answers...oh. and I don't know about that thing of questionable talent. By the way. what's this fascination with plaid, guys?

Beatles cover tunes offer little Vision of their own

By Peter Romanov
A&E Editor

Cover songs! Cover songs! Can't anyone do his own stuff anymore? I guess not because a CD chock full o' Beatles songs titled Shared Vision: The Songs of the Beatles has been released. I'm not a big Beatles fan, but I found some of the songs to be pretty good.

Extreme does a tolerable version of "Help!" The simple drums and vocal harmonies stay true to the original.

Salt N' Pepa's "Twist and Shout" is scary as hell.

The Mission U.K. creates a mystical version of "Tomorrow Never Knows" that is coated with an '80s sound.

Elton John's "Lucy in the Sky With Diamonds" has some peculiar moments, but is quite enjoyable.

Richie Havens' loose acoustic guitar makes "Here Comes the Sun" rather interesting.

Rod Stewart's version of "Get Back" offers a good cover of the original version. It has a good rock and roll beat and is very entertaining for the average listener.

P.M. Dawn, The Kentucky Headhunters, and Kathy Mattea also contribute to this CD.

This CD is good, maybe even a must for Beatles fans. H owever I find myself getting a little bored with the cover song routine.

Editor's Note: All revenues generated by this album will be donated to research of eyesight.

Watusi is one present you should pass on

By Stephen B. Steffek
Editor-In-Chief

To save the cost of buying the album Watusi by The Wedding Present, just purchase the first single, "It's A Gas."

This British pop band had a good idea, but took it much too far. The album begins well with the songs "So Long, Baby" and "Click Click."

Songs like "Let Him Have It," "Yeah, Yeah, Yeah, Yeah, Yeah" and "Hot Pants" offer enjoyable moments. However, the lack of variety detracts from whatever quality is present on the rest of the album.

Frontman David Gedge said, in the band's press materials, "I hate bands that make the same LP over and over in a different sleeve — it's a waste of time. So throughout the years, even though we've been proud of our records, we've never wanted to repeat them."

Well, Dave, what about not repeating your songs? Why did you recreate the same song over and over in the same sleeve?

Don't give this album as a wedding present, birthday present, Christmas present, Hanukkah present, Armed Forces Day present, Easter present, Arbor Day present, April Fool's...Hey wait a minute, that may just be the perfect holiday to bestow this lavish gift.

Concrete Blonde releases rarities, remixes

By Stephen B. Steffek
Editor-In-Chief

I.R.S. Records has released Still In Hollywood, a collection of Concrete Blonde rarities and remixes of old tunes.

The band, who broke up last spring, left a trail of tape in the vault. The company just released this collection in hopes of cashing in on one of its most valuable former resources.

They took songs that were in limited release and alternate versions of the band's hits.

I, being a big fan of the band was extremely pleased that this compilation was released. It is full of interesting songs that showcase different aspects of lead singer and songwriter Johnette Napolitano's talents.

It uses songs like "Side of the Road" and the band's cover of Jimi Hendrix's "Little Wing" to show the range of the band's talent. The album also uses live versions of old standby hits like "Tomorrow, Wendy" and "Roses Grow." The album provides an acoustic version of the band's most popular song "Joey."

In addition to these interesting versions of the songs, there are several previously unreleased songs. The most enjoyable of these is "Simple Twist of Fate."

Overall, I found the album to be very enjoyable. It provides an outlet for the band to demonstrate its wide array of styles.

Christmas recordings provide holiday joy

By Peter Romanov
A&E Editor

Are you frightened by the fact that "It's a Wonderful Life" will soon be shown over and over and over again? Well, don't turn on that television: instead get down to your local music store and purchase some refreshing holiday music. Let me be the one to suggest two releases that I found to be quite appetizing.

A 7-inch record with Sybil Vane's guitar-laden version of "White Christmas" on one side and a band called Local H performing its own song titled "Disgruntled XMas" on the other side makes for very good listening.

Vane's charming vocals turn a classic holiday song into something of her own. Her voice gushes with emotion. However. this song will not be included on her upcoming release on Polygram.

Local H has created a fun Christmas song that is great for the times you are tired of the Christmas hype. "Disgruntled XMas" is a hard-edged song about falling mistletoe and burning down Christmas trees. The whining vocals are humorous as well as the lyrics. One line goes. "I could act like I don't care that all I get is underwear" or how about this one: "I'll be glad to tear your Frosty down." This song will not be included on their forthcoming debut.

You may have to search for this record, but it's worth it. Not only does it have two great songs, but the record is green and red. What else could be more visually stimulating? Maybe the color version of "It's a Wonderful Life"!

Another great Christmas sound is the Whirling Dervishes' CD Grinch. This four-song CD deals with the theme of winter. I liked this CD because it's seasonal yet still could be played around the year.

A hip version of "You're a mean one Mr. Grinch" is included on this CD. It sounds a lot like the one that appears on the cartoon. It truly rocks.

The other songs are originals by the band and are very good. "Chill" is a Dinosaur Jr. like song about broken love in December. The vocals are full and demanding.

"Winter Kills" is an anti-winter song filled with great lyrics such as "Winter kills. it always kills me . it's the cruelest joke mother nature plays."

The last track on the CD titled "Sinning and Skating" is solemn with hints of piano and slushy vocals.

Don't wait for Santa to get you these releases. Get thee to a music store and pick up these Yuletide tunes.

Branagh provides entertaining Frankenstein

By Tanya Lyons
Staff Writer

Mary Shelley's Frankenstein, directed by Kenneth Branagh, is a masterful film and the most faithful popular film adaptation from the original novel yet.

Dr. Victor Frankenstein studies to be a doctor. While in school, he meets a professor who fuels his misplaced desire to bring his deceased mother back to life. The professor shows Frankenstein the means by which to reanimate dead tissue. After careful study and experimentation, Frankenstein attempts to reanimate a human corpse. His experiment is successful, but he creates a horror.

Frankenstein, when he reawakens from the delerium induced by the monster, is reassured by his friend that a plague is killing children. The information relieves Frankenstein, and he thinks the plague has killed his creation. Not so. The monster is driven out of the city by a horde and finds refuge in the woods with a family. He provides for the family who are starving because they are unable to farm their land. When they discover who he is, the family drives him out.

This and the initial rejection by Frankenstein embitters the monster, who has learned by now to think for himself. He and Frankenstein meetagain in the Swiss Alps. Once again, Frankenstein rejects the monster and his wishes for a mate. The monster lashes out and slowly kills Frankenstein's family and his wife Elizabeth on their wedding night. Frankenstein is crushed at the loss of his wife and chooses to reanimate her. The monster shows himself again when the experiment succeeds. When she realizes what has happened to her, Elizabeth destroys herself. As in the novel, the adventure ends at the North Pole with Frankenstein's death.

I found Branagh's adaptation grandiose and thought-provoking.

Robert DeNiro played an excellent monster, right down to the speech patterns he borrowed from stroke victims. He also made me wonder why he was created and why we were all created. Are we too just the refuse of a race more beautiful than ourselves? Are we a race of people whom our creators didn't have the responsibility to raise? Is that the reason for our potential for evil ? Hmm, ponderous questions to be asking here. I felt Frankenstein asked those questions rather effectively.

Kenneth Branagh, as usual, put out an excellent film. He also plays the role of Frankenstein quite convincingly. He made Frankenstein revel in his personal beauty so much he forgot his parental responsibility to his creation and is horrified by what he created. The horror, then anger are translated to the monster, who lashes back and kills Frankenstein.

The movie, while faithful to the novel, did have the elements of Hollywood sewn in. The Frankenstein mansion, elaborate staircase and Elizabeth's self-immolation were a few Hollywoodisms. They worked quite well, though. The dramatic scenes of the Swiss Alps portrayed Dr. Frankenstein's insignificance in the world.

In comparison to God, we are all insignificant. We have no responsibility to try to create life the way God did. If we do commit such acts, we have a responsibility to parent the offspring. These are Mary Shelley's messages to us as readers. I would highly recommend that English 200 students assigned to read Frankenstein see this movie.

Professional proves to be top notch action flick

By Stephen B. Steffek
Editor-In-Chief

Actor Jean Reno made his American debut in The Professional, the current release from director Luc Besson.

Reno stars as Leon, a hired hitman. He lives a quiet life with only a plant for companionship.

One day, Leon finds himself in a situation where he must help a little girl who lives down the hall, Mathilda (Natalie Portman).

She comes home from the store to find that her entire family has been murdered ruthlessly. In order to get away from the murderers, led by Gary Oldman, who are still lingering around when she comes back, she must pretend to live with Leon.

Though he has only spoken to her in passing, Leon chooses to let her into his room and, eventually, his heart.

When Mathilda finds out what Leon does for a living, she begs him to teach her his craft so that she can seek revenge for her 4-year-old brother's murder. While he is at first hesitant to agree, Leon decides to teach her his craft.

He teaches her that there are rules to the profession. The first and most important is that you never kill women or children. As he teaches her the rest of them, the audience sees the strict discipline that has been present in Leon's life before Mathilda.

As we see his daily rituals of treating his plant and cleaning his weapons lose priority, we find that he has replaced them with caring for his new friend. As the action builds, Leon finds himself getting deeper in the revenge plot.

I really enjoyed the movie. The uses of character and plot were excellent.

Besson, best known for his previous hitman movie. La Femme Nikita (on which the American film Point of No Return was based), has used an interesting cinematic technique.

It blends the European style with the formula of many American actioneers.

It worked very well in this case. The acting is very good. Portman, Reno and Oldman all turned in excellent portrayals.

Some of the action scenes are so well choreographed that I found myself on the edge of my seat.

People in the mood for a good action movie with lots of bang for their buck will probably enjoy The Professional. It is definitely a good movie to witness on the big screen.

Oldman earns acclaim for variety of roles

By Stephen B. Steffek
Editor-In-Chief

Gary Oldman, currently making waves as the villain in The Professional, will star in Immortal Beloved, a biopic about Beethoven's mysterious girlfriend.

No one knew who earned the love of the great composer, only that he nicknamed her his "immortal beloved."

Oldman who has given excellent performances for many years has only recently earned the acclaim that he deserves from moviegoers.

He has always been the guy that audiences think, "I wonder who this actor is."

He first gained notice with his stunning portrayal of punk rocker Sid Vicious in the cult classic Sid And Nancy.

Most recently, he has given excellent performances in such hits as the title character in Bram Stoker's Dracula, Lee Harvey Oswald in JFK and Drexel, the villainous pimp, in True Romance. He also earned acclaim for his performance in Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead.

Part of Oldman's allure for me is his ability to disguise himself.

Who would ever guess that the guy who plays Beethoven also once acted as Sid Vicious?

He is able to pick excellent roles that will not force him to become stereotyped. He does not choose similar roles in order to avoid this exact thing.

He is also able to disguise himself physically in his movie appearances.

You can't tell that the actor who played Drexel in True Romance is the same one as the sleazy DEA agent in The Professional.

Gary Oldman is a face to watch for in Hollywood. He may follow in the footsteps of many British actors and take the screen by storm. He may very well be the next really great actor. Good luck recognizing him, though!

High Point gets a little jazz, Smithsonian style

By Janet Glazler
Staff Writer

The Smithsonian Jazz Masterworks Orchestra rolled into High Point on November 9. This was the band's last stop before returning home for the end of its tour. The concert took place at the High Point Theatre located at 220 E. Commerce. The concert was two hours long, starting at 7:30 p.m.

The Smithsonian Jazz Orchestra was originally to be conducted by David N. Baker, but he fell sick. Lauren Schoenburg took Baker's place and fulfilled it superbly. Schoenburg performed naturally, like he had been with the orchestra for years.

The Smithsonian players opened with "Doggin' Around" by Count Basie. Count Basie and his band emerged from Kansas City in the 1930s. The band was famous for several songs during its many years of popularity. Some were "I Never Knew," April in Paris," and "Shiny Stockings." which was also performed by the Smithsonian Orchestra.

Most of the music played on Wednesday evening was by Duke Ellington, also known as Edward Kennedy Ellington. Duke Ellington was one of the most famous jazz artists of all time. He "received unprecedented status as composer and orchestrator for the jazz orchestra." The orchestra played "Isfahan", "Delta Serenade", "Main Stem", "Warm Valley" "I Got it Bad", and "That Ain't Good."

Compositions by Benny Goodman, Jimmie Lunceford, Woody Herman, Artie Shaw, Tommy Dorsey, Glenn Miller, Charlie Barnet and Andy Kirk were also played.

The band consisted of four reeds (saxophone), four trumpets, three trombones, a bass, drums, a guitar, and a piano.

The orchestra was made up of all men and one woman. There was a special guest saxophone/clarinet player, Dick Johnson. Johnson was the band leader for Artie Shaw.

One of the highlights of the evening was a special tribute song to Benny Goodman. It was "Honey Suckle Rose" performed by the guitarist James Chirillo. The concert ended with a piece by the Casa Loma Orchestra known as the "Casa Loma Stomp."

The concert was enjoyable and should have been seen by anyone who enjoys jazz. This concert could not have been viewed without the help of the Community Concert Association of High Point. The association should receive gratitude for an excellent performance.

Pohjamo finds Rolex fortune in Oklahoma

By Keith Corbett
Staff writer

When Pekka Pohjamo stepped off the plane onto Oklahoma soil, he never imagined he would come away with a seventh-place finish in the Rolex National Small College Championships.

Already suffering from in-flight turbulence, his road to the national championships was not a smooth ride, either. The bumpy road started at Barton College in Wilson, N.C.

Wilson, the host site of qualifying, offered much needed competition for Pohjamo, who carried a 4-0 fall record, as well as a No. 3 seed into the Barton Rolex Tournament. Twenty-seven athletes from eight different schools were competing for first place and a trip to the national Rolex tournament.

Pohjamo experienced a rocky road in the doubles draw, as he and partner Donald Marriott fell in the semifinals to Pfeiffer 6-3, 6-2.

But it was smoother sailing in singles competition as Pohjamo took top honors.

"I played well," said Pohjamo, a freshman from Finland. "A lot of good practice before helped."

But Pohjamo's lack of practice between the two events may have hurt him in Oklahoma.

With the fall tennis season over, Pohjamo had to depend on informal matches with teammates. "He's a very disciplined tennis player, and an attribute to our team." coach Jerry Tertzagian said.

With a lack of practice under his belt. Pohjamo would have to depend on "discipline" in Oklahoma.

In the first round of nationals, Pohjamo was dealt his first loss of the season.

"I didn't play well, but it's hard to when the guy is so damn good," Pohjamo said.

The loss forced High Point's No. 1 player into the consolation bracket, where the competition would get no easier. A straight- set loss filled with service breaks led to a 4-6. 1-6 second-round loss.

With one match remaining, Pohjamo was determined to redeem himself. "I hadn't played good coming into that match," Pohjamo said. "I wanted to play well."

And he did. Through a 6-2, 6-0 crushing of Charleston's Mark Sutton, Pohjamo solidified a seventh-place Rolex National Small College Championship finish. Pohjamo would also take back a No. 37 NAIA individual ranking.

With Pohjamo leading the way, High Point's No. 22 ranked tennis team should be riding a smoother road.

Qualifying (Wilson):

Men's basketball perfect in first four games

By Sonny Gann
Staff writer

After a successful season in '93-'94. the men's basketball team has picked up where it left off with a 4-0 record to start the season. Coach Jerry Steele credits defense, balanced scoring, and team unity for the fast start.

"We've played good defense when we've had to," Steele said. "Opponents have scored in the 50's twice, 60's once. and the 70's once. You're going to play close games when you do that."

Four Panthers are averaging double-figures in scoring. Toby Brown is averaging 17, Brett Speight 15. Demetrius Alexander 10, and leading the way with 23 points a game is Robert Martin.

Throw in play-makers Danny Watson and Telly Bernard, each averaging four assists per game, and you have a balanced team.

"Everybody on the team has a role." senior guard Danny Watson said. "Coach Steele has done a good job defining roles this year. When guys know their roles and stay within them it makes a better basketball team.

"I could shoot 15 times a game. and Robert Martin could dribble the ball down the floor, but that wouldn't make us a better basketball team."

Toby Brown knows when he goes to the gym on gameday he will mark the opponent's best scorer. Martin is a scorer, slasher, and rebounder. Alexander and Speight are the forces inside. and are expected to score. rebound. and play good defense. Bernard and Watson don't score much, but they run the offense. get the ball to their teammates. and play good defense.

The Panthers opened with back-to-back home victories over Winston Salem State. 78-76 and Otterbein, 68-59. Martin had a double-double with 21 points and 11 rebounds in the win over WSSU. Brown led the way with 22 points over Otterbein.

HIgh Point travelled to Farmville, Va. and ran away with the Par-Bil Tournament this past weekend. Speight had 23 and Martin had 29 in a 97-56 blowout Kutztown University in the semifinals. Martin had 31 and Alexander poured in 17 to fuel the way in the championship game over host Longwood, 70-64. Steele was happy with his team's performance.

"Against Kutztown, we went up 8, then 15. and we just played well." said Steele. "They had a hard time scoring. We went up 18 in the first half against Longwood. They are a good ball team and cut it to five in the second half. We hit enough free throws to win it down the line."

Steele was especially pleased with his team's ability to come back and play on short rest.

"Early in the year, to play back-to-back games in less than 24 hours, with the few people we play, was good for us." Steele said. "It was a good performance all around."

After Christmas, High Point will get two late presents when Michael Farrell and Pete Wyatt gain eligibility. Farrell, eligible Jan. 2. will give the Panthers an outside shooter -- something they need. The return of Wyatt on Jan. 10 will give added depth to a strong frontcourt.

"(When they return) that gives us eight people you can count on and that's all you need." Steele said.

Six-man rotation has Panthers' hands tied, for now

Assistant Editor

With only a six-man rotation, men's basketball coach Jerry Steele is emphasizing quality over quantity.

Through four games. just eight players have seen playing time. Two of those, Mike Seiler and Justin Bradshaw. made their only appearance during the final minutes of a 97-56 blowout of Kutztown.

Six players are shouldering the load for High Point: guards Danny Watson, Telly Bernard and Toby Brown. along with forwards Brett Speight, Rob Martin, and center Demetrius Alexander.

The Panthers' lack of depth creates a myriad of hurdles for them to overcome. The first is endurance on the court.

"They're in pretty good shape." said Steele, who put his players through rigorous two-a-day practices in October. "(Endurance) may not be a problem."

Despite playing his best game of the season, endurance was a problem for Alexander during a 68-59 win over Otterbein last Monday. The 6-7, 218 lb. center played the whole game, showing signs of fatigue in the waning minutes.

"I've got a lot of confidence back," said Alexander, who recorded 14 points and nine rebounds against Otterbein. "Now I've just got to get some wind."

Alexander successfully rehabilitated last year's knee injury, and it gives him "no trouble" during games. A 22-pound weight loss over the last two months has been beneficial to Alexander's effectiveness.

A shallow bench also forces the Panthers to stay out of foul trouble. With center Pete Wyatt and point guard Michael Farrell out for the first semester due to eligiblity problems. it is crucial for Watson. Bernard and Alexander to minimize their personals.

When asked about how this will affect the team's aggressiveness. Brown said "Coach won't let us get in foul trouble early. But if we get in too much foul trouble. we might not have any other choice."

Though he plays the majority of the game. Brown remains the first man off the bench.

"There's not as much pressure coming off the bench as there is starting." said Brown. who usually replaces Bernard early in the first half. "If I start. I've got a tendency to make a mistake. If I do that. I know I'm getting the horn early. I don't play as tight coming off the bench."

"We'll still play our game." Watson said of the drawbacks. "We'll just have to play smarter."

Watson, whose game centers around assists and ball movement, claims the team's weakness is outside shooting. But Farrell should contribute some threes when he returns Jan. 2 at the Lake Wales. Fla. Tournament.

Women's basketball wins Carolina Classic, opens 5-2

▩ Lady Panthers defeat Pembroke St. Tuesday in Purple Palace

By John Buday
Staff writer

After a 4-0 start, the women's basketball team suffered two close setbacks. The Carolina Classic Champions lost a heartbreaker to Queens 78-76, then dropped their second consecutive game 83-76 at home to Gardner Webb.

When coach Joe Ellenburg was asked about the team's two losses, he cited "eratic team shooting" as part of the problem.

"The team has a lot of offensive punch, but we will have to be very team-oriented defensively to hang with tougher competition," Ellenburg said.

That "offensive punch" was evident Tuesday as the Lady Panthers (5-2) rebounded to defeat Pembroke St. 88-78. High Point jumped out to a 10-0 lead and never looked back.

Center April Rose stepped into the limelight, pumping in a game-high 21 points and nine rebounds. Point guard Karen Curtis continued her offensive tear with 21 points and eight rebounds.

The Panthers utilized a full-court-zone press that increased defensive pressure and led to a number of fast-break baskets for High Point.

On the season, Curtis and guard Tedra Lindsay are one and two in scoring with 20.4 and 15.8 points, respectively. Forward Greta Miles has been cleaning the glass at a team-high rate of 9.7 rebounds per game.

The team is averaging 79.5 PPG while allowing only 66.5.

The Panthers look to string together another winning streak when they battle UNCA Thursday. High Point returns home Saturday to the Purple Palace for a 7 p.m. home game against Elon.

Watson finds honesty is a virtue, takes control on court

By Sonny Gann
Staff writer

Coming out of Wabash Valley Junior College in Illinois two years ago, Danny Watson had many options to play small college basketball.

After the decision-making process, Watson chose High Point because Coach Jerry Steele was the most honest. He told Watson what he needed and wanted out of him.

Two years later, the honesty has paid off because Coach Steele has one of the best team leaders and point guards in the Carolinas Conference. If you want somebody who is going to score, don't come knocking on Watson's door. But if you want a man who knows how to be a leader, run a team, play good defense and do the little things to help the team win. you have come to the right place.

"I have to be smarter than most players I play against." said Watson. who averages 5.3 points and 4 assists per game . "I must know their weaknesses more than they know mine. Every player I play against will be a little bigger, or a little quicker. or a little stronger than me, so I have to be smarter."

Steele knows he has a smart player and a true leader on the court in Watson. a senior. With all the talent the Panthers have. Steele calls Watson the glue that holds it all together. In fact Steele went as far as saying if Watson goes, the team goes.

When asked about the comment. Watson will not back down from it. He takes it as a challenge.

"He's trying to let me know if I don't play well. the team doesn't play well." Watson said. "That's my resposibility as a point guard. Something I have to take."

Watson knows his point guard responsibilites well. which makes him even tougher. He is your typical point guard who doesn't score a lot but knows his role well. He is the team leader and a court general. He handles the ball well. plays tenacious defense and knows how to pass.

Watson's biggest thrill as a point guard is knowing he has control on the court.

"When I'm on the court I have control to run what offense I want to or decide where the ball goes." Watson said. "It's a thrill to have four other guys listening to me and trusting my decisions. Coaches give me the leadership to make that call. too."

▨ High Point alumnus climbs NBA ranks, backs into interim position with Nuggets

By Rob Humphreys
Assistant Editor

Gene Littles, a 1969 graduate of High Point College and three-time NAIA All-America in basketball, was named head coach of the NBA's Denver Nuggets Jan. 15.

Littles, who will become interim head coach for the remainder of the season, served as an assistant to Denver Head Coach Dan Issel until he unexpectedly resigned for personal reasons.

NBA coaching experience is nothing new to Littles, 51. He held brief head coaching roles with the Charlotte Hornets and Cleveland Cavaliers and has coached professionally for 15 seasons, primarily as an assistant.

"He handles things with unbelievable class on and off the court," said men's basketball coach Jerry Steele, who coached at Guilford College when Littles played at High Point. "He's as good a guard there's ever been in the league. He was big time... smart...great. He could have played anywhere in the country."

Recruiting Littles, a native of Washington D.C., was one of the school's most brilliant decisions. Littles holds basketball records in total points (2,398) and scoring average (23.3 ppg).

His No. 14 jersey hangs among four retired in the Millis Athletic Center, and in 1981 he was elected to the NAIA Hall of Fame.

After graduation, Littles joined the Carolina Cougars of the now-defunct American Basketball Association (ABA) and was named to the 1970 All-Rookie Team. Littles played five years with Carolina before ending his six-year pro career with Men's Basketball Coach Jerry Steele finally reached the 500-win milestone last night with a 100-88 win at Belmont Abbey.

Steele, who has garnered a 31-year coaching record of 500-358, got the win after two previous attempts resulted in losses to Pfeiffer and Coker.

"In some ways. the best coaches are small-college guys like Jerry Steele." Pfeiffer coach Bobby Lutz said. "I've marvelled at his longevity and winning record."

Earlier in his career, Steele never imagined himself with 500 wins.

"I figured with five wins my first year it would have taken me 100 years." he said.

Steele began his coaching career with 151 wins at Guilford College before coming to High Point in 1972.

"He has been my mentor." University of Tulsa coach Orlando "Tubby" Smith told a Greensboro News and Record reporter. Smith. who played at High Point in the early '70s. added. "The thing I always noticed about his style of coaching is the way he could relate experiences in a humorous way."

About 150 students from various states will be on campus Feb. 11 for the annual Presidential Scholarship competition.

Faculty and current Presidential Scholars will select the high school seniors they feel will contribute the most to the university.

"More of our Presidential Scholars (than non-scholars) will go on to become graduate students," said Jim Schlimmer, dean of admissions. "They are, in fact. going to be better students in all aspects."

Presidential Scholars are chosen on the basis of SAT scores, high school GPA's and the interview, which covers extracurricular activities and leadership qualities.

The program involves 130 interviewers. including 60 faculty members. Each student is interviewed by two groups comprised of two Presidential Scholars and two faculty members.

Spring Dance on tap for early February

By Drew Notley
Staff writer

The Spring Semiformal Dance is getting off to an early start this year. The dance is scheduled for Friday, Feb. 3.

So far everything is in order and the IFC and Panhellenic group appear to have planned it very well. Tickets are priced at $5 per person and $8 per couple.

The dance will be held at the Radisson Hotel in High Point and will go from 8 p.m. to midnight. The expectations are that 400 people will come.

Fruit, cheese, eggrolls, chicken fingers and a steamship roll of beef will be among some of the food provided there. A non-alcoholic bar. serving Coke. coffee and Sprite will also be available.

Buses from the Campus Center will transport students to and from the hotel starting at 7:45. These buses will run continuously for the students.

Tickets can be purchased at the cafeteria or at the door of the Radisson.

However, Katherine Hill states, "I would encourage people to get tickets in advance."

Prepurchasing tickets may be the best choice in order to avoid a repeat of the ticket shortage of homecoming. Tickets will begin to be sold on Jan. 27 in the cafeteria.

If everything goes as planned, this dance promises to be filled with fun for everyone involved.

Help make "Generation X" connotation more positive

Students must rid term of negative context by being more active on campuses and in the surrounding community

By Stephen B. Steffek
Editor

Our generation has been given the name "Generation X." This title for some reason has taken on a negative connotation that was not intended when author Douglas Coupland coined the term.

However, I was able to witness one of the greatest outpourings of charity in my life right before Christmas.

Brian Ersalesi, a freshman from Rutherford, N.J., took up a collection to buy a remote control television set for Mrs. Angela Peterson, a High Point senior citizen whom he helps with errands.

I was invited by Ersalesi and Dean Gart Evans to take pictures when they presented Mrs. Peterson with the Christmas gift.

Mrs. Peterson is unable to get around easily and this gift made life much easier for her. At first I was rather indifferent about going. However, when I saw the joy that filled her face when she saw the gift, I was immediately gratified by the experience.

Upon returning to school from Christmas vacation, I saw the thank-you note that Mrs. Peterson wrote to the campus community.

"It means so much to know that someone cares." -Angela Peterson, receipient of TV

"'Thank yous' are so inadequate. I wish there was some way I could meet and see each one [of you] and tell you what you've done for me. It means so much to know that someone cares." Mrs. Peterson writes.

The reaction that the campus community's gift evoked in Mrs. Peterson made me realize that our generation is not necessarily as bad as we are always considered to be.

However, as is common, the whole batch of apples can be ruined by a few worms. Just because some people do not choose to get involved in activities, on campus or off, does not mean that everyone should take on an apathetic attitude. How much more can you take of sitting in your rooms playing Super Nintendo and drinking beer, High Point University?

We need to prove our elders wrong and not conform to being the small ineffectual pile of flesh that they think us to be.

If we are to create more positive results for our campus and community, we must begin to get involved.

Part of campus life is student activities. While fraternities and sororities tend to get the majority of people's attention, they do not encompass the entire experience of college life.

So, fellow students, tear yourselves away from the television and make a difference in this world in which you live.

As Mrs. Peterson stated in her letter. "There is nothing good in the papers about young people, and that always angers me. I remember...how wonderful and idealistic youth really is."

We are the only ones that can change our social reputation as slackers and all other forms of young miscreants.

Let us live up to the expectations of people such as Mrs. Peterson who believe in our generation.

Santa pays a visit to campus

Dr. Charles Warde and Sharyn Carpenter share a moment with Kris Kringle

To the editor:

At the end of the 1994 Fall semester, High Point University held its first Christmas get-together for children of faculty and staff. Dr. Vance Davis welcomed about four dozen youngsters dressed in holiday attire to the Wrenn Building.

After each of them had received an official name-tag, they settled down in front of a crackling fire in the open chimney.

Then High Point University's very own story-teller, Dr. Charlie Warde, took the stage, or rather the rocking chair, next to the fireplace. His audience listened with open mouths as he told a lovely Irish folk-tale.

But the spell was broken when a loud "hHo, ho, ho" came from the doorway. Preceded by his elf, Sharyn Carpenter, a rotund Santa appeared with a sack stuffed to the top.

Dr. Warde relinquished his chair so that Santa Claus could take a load off and call each child to him for a personalized present.

After punch and cookies, the youngsters decided unanimously that listening to stories and seeing Santa was such a great way to spend a Sunday afternoon, that it should become an annual event. (Heed the call, Dr. Davis!)

PROBLEMS WITH INTEGRATION INTO AMERICA

The Melting Pot has cracked

By Fred B. Jordan
Staff Writer

It seems to me that the principles of our integration into American society have faltered.

The magic that Ellis Island and a dream of hope brought to our country has vanished. What remains is a splintering of the melting pot. We have all managed to drift apart and separate America into warring factions.

Our society places too high a price on what we consider our "individual" ethnicity.

From the NAACP to the Klan, we have managed to separate ourselves into primary racial, religious or nationalistic groups.

Places such as urban ghettos like Watts and Harlem to Chinatown and Little Italy are so anti-melting pot that anyone not fitting the norm is chastized or at least alienated.

In short, we have become a country of people concerned only about our own beliefs and ideals and negligent toward the ideas of freedom and the pursuit of happiness.

When was the last time that a group was organized to help someone else?

I doubt the Jewish anti-defamation league gave a damn about gay-bashing in the military unless, of course, the victim was Jewish.

I've never heard of the Klan trying to defend the heritage of the Catholic Church. These things would be against the respective organization's goals, which are suited to helping one group while ignoring all others.

"We all need to take a closer look at our perspectives. When was the last time that we applauded another's actions that we disagreed with?"

We, as a society fueled by media hype, have succumbed to the idea that if you are a minority, then you deserve special treatment.

This is not only ignorant: it goes against the very idea of democracy. I don't know when the idea that minority rules came about, but it needs to go away before it ruins us.

This country is based on liberty and democracy.

That is the right to do whatever you'd like, within the law, but that the majority will rule.

We need to get back to that principle quickly.

It is a travesty that people such as Ted Kennedy and Jesse Helms can continue to tear OUR country apart.

We all need to take a closer look at our perspectives. When was the last time that we applauded another's actions that we disagreed with?

If we can't, then maybe Hitler should run for the Senate. He'd probably run pretty close in Virginia, as a Democrat.

Yes, the pot has cracked. And the stock of the soup has leaked out, leaving the fat.

Should Smith get death penalty?

Jury must prepare to choose fate of S.C. mother

By Jason Schneider
Staff Writer

It has been nearly three months since Susan Smith confessed to a concerned nation that she killed her two young sons.

During the week and a half before that Nov. 3 revelation, men and women all over the country searched desperately for the man who she said took her car and children at an intersection in Union, S.C. The abduction of 3-year-old Michael and 14-month-old Alex Smith caused people of all races and walks of life to come together as rarely before only to have their faith in humanity shattered when Smith admitted to pushing her car down a boat ramp and into John D. Long Lake with the boys strapped inside.

And who wasn't shocked after learning of Smith's confession? After all, she and her estranged husband had been shown so often in the media, pleading for the man who abducted their children to return them safely.

Then, of course, there were heartwarming home video clips that permeated the evening newscasts, showing the stereotypically "perfect" white mother and her two sons. Who would have thought that she would have been cold-blooded enough to kill them?

When the shock wore off, anger soon took its place. African-Americans were among the first to express their anger, because of Smith's false accusation of a black man as the carjacker/kidnapper.

By saying that the man who took her car and her children was a black man, she not only played into the fears of other mothers, she also slandered an entire race that has been for years falsely stereotyped as being violent and dangerous.

These stereotypes served her purpose well for who, in a small Southern town, would believe that a white man would steal a car with two children inside?

Others soon voiced their hostility, among them the people who worked so tirelessly trying to locate Michael and Alex and those who combed forests and lakes searching for the children as a result of the tiniest lead.

Now the prosecutor in the Smith trial says that he will seek the death penalty if Smith is convicted. He explains that the death penalty is warranted because two people were killed and both of them were under the age of 12. Many people, especially in a situation as traumatic as this one, believe that Smith should die just as her sons did. Others think it would be worse for her if she had to live with the knowledge that she killed her own children.

Her defense attorney maintains that she is mentally unstable, "lost in an ocean of grief and guilt," and doesn't want to live. Here are some questions to ponder: Should a woman who wants to die be allowed to? Can a woman who is "mentally unstable" feel remorse for killing her children if she is allowed to live?

The whole case is a catastrophe no matter how you look at it. A community drew together to help some young parents find their missing children only to be torn apart by the mother's confession that she, in fact, killed them.

The real tragedy of it all is that Michael and Alex Smith are dead. They are the price that Susan Smith paid because she felt she couldn't be a good mother anymore, and it is a debt that everyone will carry with them for many years to come.

High Point Police Dept. can do more

Student questions lack of city police department intervention on campus

Dear Editor,

High Point police do not protect or serve HPU students.

The oath commonly referred to by police in this country is to protect and serve the citizens of the community. It seems that the students of High Point University have somehow slipped out of this guarantee from the High Point police department.

Recently, and numerous times in the past, there has been an outbreak of vandalism on High Point's campus. This vandalism includes breaking car windows, destruction of campus property and even burglary. Over Christmas break there was at least one major incident of theft in a university-owned house. Also, several on-campus houses were victims of vandalism over break.

The High Point police department claims that the university and its property are out of their jurisdiction. However, High Point's finest had no problem staking out a local Circle K convenience store on a typical weekend. This stake-out included undercover police posing as customers. As students came in to buy alcoholic beverages, the undercover cop gave a signal to his companions outside. The police followed the students back to campus and pulled them over. Last weekend over 30 DUI's were handed out by the police department as part of the action at Circle K.

No one can claim that the police department is shirking its responsibilities by trying to stop intoxicated drivers or underage drinking. What does bother many students on campus, however, is how hypocritical the police department's actions are. While steadfastly claiming no jurisdiction over High Point students or property, the department is more than willing to enjoy its fair share of fines from the student community.

The police department of High Point has only acted to condemn the students of this university and refuses to take part in keeping the campus safe. It is obvious that the security officers cannot patrol the entire campus effectively 24 hours a day and could certainly use a little help. Furthermore, the police have placed themselves in a bad light with many students. The ideal of protecting and serving has molded into the idea of persecution and sentencing.

The police must enforce the laws of this community. No student could possibly ask for this to change.

What High Point University students need is to benefit from positive action from the local police department. The department must work together with security officers and students to make High Point University a safer place to live and experience the college years. Until the antagonism shown by police toward

Sincerely,
Dan Smith

Continuing Education Building leaves behind long heritage

By Joe Avent
Staff writer

The Continuing Education Building may be removed to make way for a new Fine Arts Center.

The last building that the university purchased for academic use on the campus may be the next one to be torn down. The Continuing Education Building has had a long history, most of which is not connected with High Point University.

The building and the surrounding land was Guilford County property. In 1955, the 5,100 square foot building was built as the Guilford County public health building.

In remembering the building, David Bryden, resource librarian of the Smith Library, stated, "I remember going and having my shots there as a kid."

Dr. James Stitt (class of '67). professor of history, recalled that while he was a student at Montlieu Avenue was the edge of campus even though the Hayworth Hall of Sciences was being built.

Stitt felt that the health building had no more significance to students than any other building outside of campus. "However, occasionally, students would slip over for VD tests and pregnancy tests on the (quiet)." For the record, Stitt added that "I, myself, never set foot in the building."

City residents who used the health building occasionally came in contact with students because the bus stop was on campus across from the health building. "Regular clients and students did interact," Stitt said.

In the summer of 1984, the county health department moved downtown. According to the High Point Enterprise, High Point College offered to purchase the property, which included 1.9 acres, the building, and one or two storage trailers, at the minimum asking price of $65,000. In September 1984, Ilderton Oil Company offered $68,300 in an upset bid.

County officials seemed to support the college purchasing the building but also expressed the feeling that the city wanted to get its money's worth out of the property. Then-commissioner Odell Payne told the Enterprise. "It would be a great piece of property for the college. But, I want them to pay for it."

After further negotiations and before the 1985 fiscal year ended, the school paid $92,450 for the building and property.

Due to plans for the construction of a new fine arts center, the future of the Continuing Ed. building might be in jeopardy. Dr E. Roy Epperson, says that there are two possibilities for the future of the building.

"If we locate the fine arts facility there, the building will have to be removed," Epperson said. The fine arts building would be designed so that the entrance would blend into the main entrance circle which was built this fall.

The other option is to build the fine arts building on the other side of the traffic circle thus forming a "U" shape with the Wrenn Building, Smith Library and Roberts Hall.

The school has two architects working on the feasibility of option two. The main problem with this plan is that it might be too close to Montlieu and violate various zoning laws.

If the Continuing Ed. building is removed, the offices and classes housed there might be moved to Cooke Hall if a new facility is built for the business department.

If the building is not torn down, it will be remodeled on both the inside and outside in order to better fit in with the other buildings on campus.

"It is my goal for the projects to be completed by 1999 which is the 75th anniversary of the school," Epperson said.

"CONFESSIONS OF A WHITE HOUSE GHOST"

Renowned speech writer to visit campus

HPU News Release

"Confessions of a White House Ghost" will be the topic when James Humes lectures Feb. 1 at 7:30 p.m. in Hayworth Chapel. The ghost is Humes himself, who served as speech writer for Presidents Eisenhower, Ford and Nixon.

Early in his professional career, Humes served as editorial assistnat to Ford in the writing of his memoirs A Time to Heal, published in 1979.

Humes, who was educated in England, is the author of two books on Winston Churchill. An actor as well as a writer, Humes' one-man show on Churchill was televised on PBS

In June 1994, on the Queen's birthday, Humes was the only American to be inducted into The Order of the British Empire.

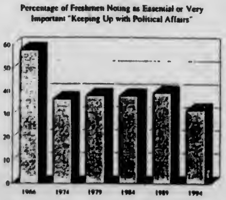
Freshmen show less interest in politics

NSNS news release



American college frehsmen are less interested in politics than any previous entering class, according to an annual survey conducted by the University of California - Los Angeles Higher Education Research Institute.

Just 31.9 percent of fall 1994 freshmen said that "keeping up with political affairs" is an important goal in life, the lowest percentage in the 29-year history of the national survey. This figure compares to 42.4 percent in 1990 and 57.8 percent in 1966.

The percentage of freshmen who said that they frequently "discuss politics" also reached its lowest point ever, dropping to just 16 percent, compared to 18.8 percent the previous year and 24.6 percent in 1992.

The number of students calling themselves politically "middle-of-the-road" increased, while the numbers of "liberals" and "conservatives" were down.

Reliance on college loans rose for the eighth time in the past decade, while reliance on Perkins, Stafford, and other need-based loans reached an all-time high of 18.9 percent.

National norms were computed from responses by over 300,000 students at 670 two-and four-year colleges and universities.

ALPHA PHI OMEGA NEWS

By Amanda Brown
Special to the Chronicle

Alpha Phi Omega has started the semester with a bang! On Jan. 14, our fraternity went to the Salvation Army to sort canned goods from its winter campaign. We had a great time and look forward to going back in February

Over the Christmas break, our chapter sent three delegates to the Alpha Phi Omega National Convention that was held in Dallas, Tex. during the last week of December. April Kabbash and Chris Harwell were our voting delegates and Joe Olinger was our non-voting delegate

Our chapter was one of over 260 that were represented from all over the United States and the world. It was a truly wonderful experience for those that went and it left the feeling that Alpha Phi Omega was bigger than we had realized and we feel special to be a part of it.

With a new semester comes new officers. Our new president is April Kabbash. Our new service vice president is Tawanna Jordan. Our new membership vice president is Melissa Bogle. Our secretary is Jennifer Pahner and our treasurer is Chris Harwell. Congratulations to all of you.

Finally, Alpha Phi Omega is anticipating our spring Rush. It begins February 8, with an open house and social. We will have a service project that is open to everyone on Feb. 12.

On Feb. 14, Alpha Phi Omega will have an open chapter meeting at 8:00 in the Alpha Phi Omega lounge for those who would like to attend. More details on Rush will be posted around campus. Alpha Phi Omega hopes that everyone has a great semester.

Clinton honors HPC war hero

HPU news release

President Bill Clinton honored alumnus Jack Lucas during his state of the union address. Jan. 24.

Lucas, the youngest person to receive the Congressional Medal of Honor at the age of 17, threw himself onto a grenade to save his comrades while fighting in Iwo Jima. Fortunately, a medic was nearby, and his life was spared.

Those present for Clinton's address immediately rose to give Lucas a lengthy standing ovation. Lucas (c/o '56) was accompanied by his son, grandson and Hillary Clinton.

At HPC. Lucas was a member of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity.

Self-study process aims for SAC accreditation

By Heidi Coryell
Staff writer

High Point University is a member of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools (SACS). It is one of five regional accrediting associations.

Every 10 years, institutions that are members of SACS must seek reaffirmation of accreditation. To fill this requirement, the university must go through a "self study" process.

This process lasts two years and demands examination of all aspects of university operations, including educational programs, student services and administrative operations.

During the 1993-94 academic year, all members of the faculty were assigned to a self study committee. The areas of study that were covered by these committees included:

-- a Purpose Committee that reviewed the goals and objectives of the university,
-- an Undergraduate Education Program and a Graduate Program Committee,
-- a Faculty Committee,
-- a Library Committee,
-- an Instructional Support Committee,
-- a Student Services Committee that observed the advising and career counseling that the school offers.
-- a Student Activity Committee that examined the sports programs, student government, dormitory hall programs.
-- an Intercollegiate Athletic Program Committee,
-- a Financial Resources Committee, and
-- a Physical Resources Committee that looks at the buildings and equipment on campus.

This year the committies are collaborating their observations into a 350-page document to be given to SACS. This report will identify things that the university can do to improve the quality of campus life.

On March 13, a visiting committee will be coming to High Point to look at the self study process. This committee is composed of representatives of schools similar to High Point. They will observe High Point and make recommendations and suggestions to offer an outside opinion to the self study process.

This committee may talk to students and ask them to come to meetings in order to gather opinions of the university.

The chair of this visiting committee is Dr. Gloria Raiens, vice president for student affairs at Louisiana State University in Shreveport.

It is with the combined effort of everyone on this campus that an accurate self study can be produced.

cause you meet a lot of the incoming freshmen," said Jimmy Dorff, a senior Presidential Scholar majoring in chemistry. "Even when you're not interviewing, you're supposed to be mingling with the parents and students."

120 Presidential Scholars are currently enrolled. They can renew the scholarship for four years as long as they maintain a "B" average.

Most Presidential Scholars are from out of state. Of the 43 enrolled as freshmen this year, 14 are from North Carolina. However, the 33 percent of in-state freshman scholars is higher than the 24 percent of in-state freshmen enrolled.

The amount of money each category receives changes each year to reflect tuition increases. This year, two students will be selected for full scholarships and 40 for $4,000 scholarships. An undesignated number of students not selected as Presidential Scholars will receive $2,500 Presidential Fellows Scholarships.

The friendliness of people involved in the competition convinces many scholarship recipients to attend here.

"I've gotten thank-you cards from parents thanking me for taking care of them and putting them in contact with the right people. That really felt good," said Kirk Reed, a senior double-majoring in chemistry and biology.

Last spring, the panels interviewed 156 students, the highest number since the program began in 1976.

Internet communications system allows students to go on-line across globe

◻ Beil envisions having Internet capabilities in all dorms

By Tanya Lyons

Ever want to talk to people all over the world without having to spend a dime?

Well, now you can. The Internet system in the computer lab lets you talk to anyone you want, even if you want to go on-line and chat.

Bill Beil, director of computer systems, calls Internet "a great tool."

No fear, Internet is here.

"You can find job openings. You can order books. The system grows by leaps and bounds and gets better and better," he says.

Internet began nationally 25 years ago to connect research companies. It grew into a network that links 30,000 networks. According to Beil, the network doubled its size in one year.

The Internet arrived here four years ago when the library systems were automated.

"Because Guilford College's machines are hooked into the net, we got it here," explains Beil. "At first you could get past the library systems and get onto Internet. Now we have it connected to the computer lab via the machine at Guilford."

In a few years, Internet will reach not only the lab, but also every dorm room. This is part of an expansion plan for students. The hard wiring was done over the summer when cable was installed in the rooms.

Beil plans to have an Ethernet (the HPU system) card to sell to students so they can reach the library system, Internet and other systems, too.

Sophomore Cormac Warde enjoys being on the Internet. "Most people use the Internet for e-mail," he says. "But you can do so much more out there."

Warde describes the games or "muds" people can get onto as social functions. "Most of the people on 'muds' are very helpful," Warde says.

Acquiring an account is not hard at all. All one has to do is talk to a computer assistant and give him your name.

Within a week, an e-mail account will be set up.

On the average, there are 15 requests per week for accounts, according to Beil. Once your account opens, you can go anywhere and do anything.

Sk8er remembers glory days

By John Kinney
Columnist

In junior high, my friends and I were skateboarding addicts. We wore the baggy pants, high tops. flannel shirts and long hair that were associated with skaters. We mastered all of the tricks. There were ollies, kick-flips. no-complies, wall rides, rail slides, truck grinds, back and front-side slappys and many more. When that 3 p.m. bell rang. we would collect our boards from our lockers. rush out of the school and tear up Roanoke

We skated mostly behind a Kroger supermarket. There were curbs to grind, walls to ride. crates to ollie over and one slant at the loading dock where you could catch some air. At times, at least 30 skaters would be back there. yelling in awe at a cool trick. We would hold contests to see who could ollie the highest or catch the biggest air off of the loading ramp.

The amazing thing is that there were never any repeat winners. We had a sense of oneness. A oneness we didn't want to break by saying someone was better than another. Skating was our church.

After we had been skating for a year. it became illegal. Even though all of Roanoke's police force was looking for us, it didn't stop our skateboarding sect. We would ride our hearts out until we saw a police car roll up. Whoever saw it first would just scream. "Move out! Copper. Copper. Mr. Crime Stopper!" We would all run in different directions because we knew if we got caught our boards would be taken.

The dislike for the skaters didn't stop at the police. The jocks at the junior high hated us. A jock fitting the stereotype of a meathead dumped mashed potatoes all over my friend. Scott, and tried to beat him up in the school cafeteria. The jock sprayed Scott with potatoes because he was a skater. That was it. I stood up for Scott. and since I was the same size as the jock. he backed off. But in a move of desperation. the jock told his brother about the incident.

His brother caught up with me at the end of that summer. On a sweaty day, I was skating alone by the pool near my house and the brother was there. I didn't see him until he came up next to me as I sat on the sidewalk in front of an apartment complex. He had two other meatheads with him. One was round and looked like Humpty Dumpty. The other was tall , skinny and had a big head like a sunflower. The brother asked me, "You got a problem. man?"

"No problem here, meathead. Do you have a problem?" I said.

The brother's face oozed with anger and redness like a nasty scar. But that did not scare me at all. I remained in complete control.

"Come on and fight," the brother blurted.

"The hell with you and your meathead friends." I said.

Humpty Dumpty hit my hat off and cocked his big. fat hand to hit me. The brother moved closer to me. but the sunflower kept his reserve. I raised my board and held it like a baseball bat. The sun reflected from the silver trucks holding the wheels on the board and shined straight into the brother's eyes. When the brother realized that I had a weapon that could crack his skull. he backed off and told Humpty to do the same.

"Put down that board. man. Fight like a man!" the brother said harshly.

"No way. I'm ready to fight!" I yelled.

I reached down to pick up my hat to show them that I wasn't scared. A police car rolled up and the cop asked if there was a problem.

"Yes, these guys are meatheads." I said.

"You're crazy, man." the sunflower said. finally showing some agitation.

The cop turned to them, and asked again if there was a problem.

"No," they all said at the same time.

Then the cop told us to go our separate ways. We did. but the cop honked and waved at the meatheads as if to say. "Good job, boys."

Now most of my friends have moved on to other things. Our friendship is kept alive by staying in touch. The eight years I skated. I never had better friends or so much fun. At times, we felt the world wanted to hack us up. but we shoved that aside. Still, I don't know why a lot of people resented skaters, and I don't think I ever will. Hopefully, those meatheads and the police have found better things to do than hassle skateboarders. To the ones out there who still tear it up, skate on!

Sink rises atop literary world, publishes a variety of genres

By Wendy Canaday
Staff Writer

When she was 10, she wrote a play for her church. In the fifth grade she co-published a newsletter for her class. This was just the beginning of her career.

"I've always written, ever since I can remember," said Mrs. Alice Sink, an associate professor of English.

Since those quiet beginnings as a child, Sink has published many stories, essays. and soon. she hopes. a novel Ain't No Bears Out Tonight. It is a fictional account of a murder that took place in Davidson County in 1951.

"It's looking for a home. but it's too early to know anything yet," Sink said.

Sink spent many long hours of hard work on her novel. She took a sabbatical during the 1994 spring semester so that she could concentrate and get her novel finished.

"She is truly a talented writer of humorous Southern fiction," said Dr. Lee Baker, chair of the English department.

"It takes perseverance; you have to stay at it. Writing is hard work," Sink said. She explained that many people think being a writer is easy work. but they are the ones who have never tried it. Writing is a difficult field to get into and stay in.

"A lot of people say to me that they have all these ideas in their heads.

Those ideas won't do them any good unless they put them down on paper. Then it has to be revised, crafted and polished before you can do anything with it," said Sink.

When you write something. it doesn't always stay the way you wrote it. Sometimes you get censored, even when you don't agree with the alteration.

Sink said she had written a short story that she had sent to the University of Baltimore.

Later an editor called her asking for permission to change the title because it contained a swear word as did the last line of the story.

"They told me that they really liked the story but because their audience is geared more toward senior citizens, they would like to take the swear word out of the title. but would not change the last line, as that was in keeping with the character.

"So it came out and it was omitted from the title. but also the last line." Sink said. "I thought it was kind of humorous because it wasn't that offensive. It did kind of ruin the story toward the last line. though."

Along with the enjoyment she gets from her writing. Sink said that she also loves to teach. "Teaching is also hard work. but I think learning should be fun." Sink said. "There is a great study in characterization to be found in the classroom."

"I think she's great. Her class was a lot of fun," said Jen LaBrozzi. one of her former students.

"I'll teach until it's time for me to retire. Then I'll write instead of gardening or playing golf." said Sink.

Sink has recently published two stories--"As Wonderful As a Garter Belt" and "A Jar of Pickles for Granny Ruth"—and an essay titled "My Sense of Southerness."

Her first publication came when she was in graduate school at UNC-Greensboro. It was a seasonal book. The Christmas Phoenix, and is available in the campus book store.

Sink received her bachelor's and master's degrees in creative writing at UNCG.

HOMECOMING QUEEN IS MORE THAN JUST LOOKS

O'Brien keeps busy on campus

By Matthew Johnson
Staff Writer

Colleen O'Brien

Colleen O'Brien may only be a junior, but she has already accomplished enough to give herself an ulcer. Colleen. who is a 20-year-old interior design major. has a smile and a friendliness that are known all over campus. but there is much more to know.

Said Colleen. "I'm not surprised I got an ulcer. I've always been told I'll die earl y. I get too involved and then I stress. I always take on more than I can really handle."

How much can an average student handle? Let's start with being crowned Homecoming Queen which is more of an acknowledgment than an achievement, but important nonetheless. Upon receiving the crown, Colleen was happier than she had been in a long time.

Colleen said, "It was the one moment when all of my stressful moments have seemed worth it." Yet Colleen soon became stressed over her crown when the Campus Chronicle printed an article about the preparation of the dance. Only a one-sentence recognition of Mr. Panther winner Clint Barkdoll and Colleen was printed.

Another position Colleen has been elected to is Pan Hellenic president. She has been representing her sorority, Alpha Gamma Delta, as the Pan Hellenic vice -president for the past semester.

Unfortunately for Colleen's stress factor, Panhellenic is not an organization where the vice-president gets to sit around and look pretty. She was in charge of this past Rush, which went smoothly for all. but was no small task.

She has also been the SGA representative for all of the sororities and had a lot to do with last semester's walkout from the November SGA meeting.

Said sorority sister Penny Tertzagian, "On top of all she does for all of the sororities. she was also named 'Sorority Sister of the Year' by the entire Greek system."

One of her most stressful times came during her days as an RA in McEwen. There she had to be a role model, a big sister. a mother , and a disciplinarian to about 30 girls.

This only lasted two semesters. though. because the stress of this job proved too much. Colleen admits. "I would get too involved and try to solve everyone's problems yet never had time to deal with my own life."

Sophomore year she got involved by becoming the class president. This year Colleen admitted to herself that she did not have the time to devote to the president's role but remained involved by being the junior vice-president.

Said Colleen. "I want to be president (of the senior class) again.

I have a few good ideas and I want to deliver the speech at graduation. The same day of my graduation is my mother's birthday and it would be great to give that speech and dedicate it to her."

Of course. there are many more events Colleen has been involved in. such as being selected as a biology lab assistant to Mr. Ian Vanlare (before she switched majors). However, for the moment Colleen is trying to cut down on her activities. For those who know her. it will not be long before she is back in the middle of things and stressing out again.

Said Tertzagian. "Something tells me this won't be her last ulcer. Not by a long shot!"

LEGENDS OF THE FALL: IT'S THE PITTS

Legends of the Fall is all dressed up with no place to go

By Stephen B. Steffek
Editor

The other night at the theatre. I was I.D'd to make sure that I was old enough to go see Legends of the Fall . I now think the lady behind the counter was trying to send me a message. Don't go see this!

I laughed. I cried. Isn't that what the critics usually say in their reviews? After seeing Legends of the Fall , I know what they mean. I laughed at the absurdity of it while crying that I had spent 2+ hours of my time and $5.50 of my money.

The movie was full of excesses. It was too long, too pretentious, too plotless, too long... or did I already say that? You get the point.

The story opens with a wise Indian, who supposedly never speaks English, telling the story, in plain English, to some poor soul who has a lot of time on his hands. We are never clued in to who the listener is (if I only knew, I would offer him some sympathy for being subjected to such a tedious story).

The Indian's tale is about the family of Col. William Ludlow (Anthony Hopkins) and his sons Alfred (Aidan Quinn), Tristan (Brad Pitt) and Samuel (Henry Thomas, better known as Elliot in E.T.). We learn that Tristan fought with a bear when he was young, drawing its blood after being cut himself. The legend is that when a man and an animal have smelled each others blood, they are one. This clues us in that Tristan has an animalistic streak in him.

Samuel comes home from college in the East to the family home in Montana, bringing his fiance, Susanna. When they read that the Germans are aggressing much faster in Europe than had been anticipated, the three sons go off to war. While in the war, Samuel dies. His older brother, Alfred, snatches up this opportunity, telling Susanna of his love. After Tristan comes back from WWI, she falls in love with him, leaving Alfred in the dust.

They marry, but Tristan leaves, going around the world as the captain of a ship. While he is gone, he sends her a note telling her that their love is dead. She promptly goes back to the arms of Alfred. Many years later Tristan returns and her love for him blossoms again only to find that he has married another woman. And so it goes and goes and goes. I think director Edward Zwick may be the guy in the Energizer ads that uses the wrong battery and falls down in mid-plot. He gets the movie started, but loses it after the first 20 minutes or so. He sets out to make an epic and comes up with something that seems like it has been recycled time and time again though it was never much good to begin with.

Hopkins does a good job until his character has a stroke and he must scrunch up his face. I think he saw the film's dailies and wanted to make himself as unrecognizable as possible. Thomas, whose career has been in limbo ever since E.T. returns to the screen just in time for me to want him off it. He is very mechanical in his performance. Julia Ormond as the ping-pong ball lover of the Ludlow brothers is alright, but doesn't shine with any more light than the others.

The two best performances of the film are from Brad Pitt and Aiden Quinn. Pitt is good as the brooding hero, Tristan. However, he is unable to channel his energy since this movie never gets moved in any specific direction. Quinn, an undernoticed actor in Hollywood, successfully acts as the older brother. The other two standouts in the film are the score and the cinematography. James Horner provides a good score for the film. It sweeps with the beautiful shots of the mountains, lakes, rivers and animals.

So if you have absolutely nothing to do one Friday night, don't resort to this as a last-ditch effort. You could probably have more fun sitting in an electric chair than the theatre seats during a showing of Legends of the Fall .

Veruca Salt makes music scene debut

By Peter Romanov
Staff Writer

If you've heard Veruca Salt's song "Seether" on the radio, then you know just how catchy it is.

It was so catchy to me that I had to buy their CD American Thighs. I must say it was a good move on my part.

Nina Gordon and Louise Post provide a good variety of vocals that are sometimes gentle and other times aggressive just like their guitar playing. The result is simply satisfying.

Gobs of guitars clash with harmonious vocals on "All Hail Me" while the eclectic rhythms in "Forsythia" make it attractive. "Victrola" is an abrasive song with high-pitched vocals making for a peculiar sound. A few songs on this CD remind me of The Breeders or Belly, but that can be good if you like those bands. I sure do!

American Thighs grabs you from the start and hangs on all the way to the finish.

This CD will really stick in your mind. It looks like Veruca Salt may soon be a staple in the alternative music scene.

PORTISHEAD SHAKES UP MODERN ROCK SCENE WITH NEW ALBUM

New Portishead album is not for Dummys

British band makes debut on American alternative music scene with hit "Sour Times (Nobody Loves Me)."

By Stephen B. Steffek
Editor

Portishead is one of the newest bands to hit the music scene with a bang. "Sour Times," is the band's first single. It has earned a position of No. 8 on the Billboard college rock chart. The band's album Dummy has taken the No. 10 spot on the modern rock chart. Indeed, the future looks bright for this English bandwho was previously unknown to many American music fans.

The band has a video on its way to MTV's "Buzz Bin."

This England-based band has created and revolutionized its own brand of music.

The band is singular. It takes pop and hip hop beats and interlaces them with lethargic, drowsy melodies. It overlaps these with the dreamlike vocals of Beth Gibbons.

Gibbons' soft, fantasy-like voice resembles a mirage in that it floats in and out of the melodies.

However, the results of the combination are most pleasing—Gibbons' voice and bandmate Geoff Barrow's inventive instrumentation evoke many emotions for the listener. This is the best part of the album.

The album is full of beautiful songs and provides a very ear-pleasing result.

Many of the songs are so lulling that you can be hypnotized.

After several listenings, the album can be more enjoyable.

From the trance-like quality of "Mysterons" to the throbbing drum beats of "Pedestal," the album lingers.

While this album may not be for some moods, its jazzy-techno tunes will appeal to fans of many musical tastes.

It has little tastes of jazz, blues, techno, hiphop, modern rock. aThis England-based band has created and revolutionized its own brand of music a nd soul.

Be sure to check out Portishead's new album, Dummy, if you feel like a change of pace.

Steve Steffek believes that John Travolta, Sid Vicious and Peter Fonda are three of the most influential figures in American history.

Releasing successful fourth album gives alternative band big head

By Seth Carter
Staff Writer

I just picked up a copy of Big Head Todd and the Monsters' long-awaited sequel to the brilliant Sister Sweetly album. The new one is titled Stratagem. This time around, BHTM is giving us a heaping helping of fast-paced rockers that are guaranteed to establish the band.

BHTM could easily be atop the music world as we speak.

The great thing about the band is that it refuses to sell out to mass media conformity. The price, though, is little recognition.

"Kensington Line," the first track, sets a blistering pace for the album. The beat is a straight two-four, solid rhythm, but somehow the band seems to reinvent the medium and turn it into a signature piece.

The next track is the title cut which is also of the heavier nature. While it moves along, it differs from the previous song in its use of a jangly-sounding rhythm guitar. The chorus of the song conjures up images of Tom Petty on speed.

The soul of the band comes back in the next cut, "Wearing Only Flowers." The Big Head Todd guitar sound is instantly recognizable.

The introduction riff is a lead line played with a wah-wah pedal over a rhythm track of Curtis Mayfield-sounding chords.

The use of the Hammond organ on the end of the chorus adds a classy touch to this already pleasing track.

The album jumps right back into its theme with the rambling "Neckbreaker." The verses are fairly mellow and the chorus is reminiscent of early Aerosmith.

The cosmic "Magdelina" serves to bring the album's adrenaline down a notch though it still maintains the intensity of the other songs. The plaintive vocals add a human dimension to spacey slide guitar passages and droning acoustic background.

The sixth track, "Angel Leads Me On," is classic BHTM.

The vocals are mellow and soulful. The playing is full of clean double stop runs on the freeboard and moving bass-lines.

The album's first single, "In the Morning," is a representative track. It is hard-driving, but it still maintains the unmistakable feel of the band's previous works.

"Candle 99" is an effective blend of heavy feedback and folksy acoustic strumming. The vocal track is excellently produced with a hint of chorusing effect that serves to make the song a bit more glassy and shimmering.

"Greyhound" again returns to the fast-paced sound of some of the earlier tracks.

It sounds like what would have happened if Scotty Moore had played "Midnight Train" in the '90s.

The drums do an effective job of capturing the feel of the old '50s rock ability songs. This adds a nostalgic feel to a well-crafted tune.

One would be hard pressed to find a more moving song than "Poor Miss," the album's tenth track.

The chorused guitar arpeggios at the song's introduction really create a laid-back precedent that the rest of the song follows quite nicely.

The vocals reflect Todd Park Mohr's affinity for poetry.

They are, essentially, a very melodic poem about unrequited love put to atmospheric music. I would say this is one of the most moving tracks on the album.

"Shadow lands" is the last track of this effort. It creates a moody palette for the lyrics to come alive with dark passion. The song turns into a wash of feedback at the end of the song. This Hendrixesque effect serves to give the album a sense of continuity, perhaps into the next release.

I guess we'll just have to wait and see. I judge great releases by what I can take away from them. I had to go back and listen to it again just to ingest all of its facets.

The album was superb in capturing the essence of emotion the band radiates.

Even if one just took the release for face value, he would find that Stratagem, the group's fourth effort, is excellent by all standards.

Seth Carter thinks that Elvis is alive and well, working at the bait and tackle shop on the coast.

"Voyager" takes over bridge of "Star Trek" saga

Kate Mulgrew takes the helm from Jean-Luc Picard in the newest installment of the Star Trek series

By Katherine Hill
Guest Columnist

"Hot, plain, tomato soup" and so began the newest installment of the Star Trek empire aptly named "Voyager." This is probably the most anticipated series for the Trek-set since...well...the last new series. Deep Space Nine (DS9). But never fear, the creators of this show have remained true to the legacy while making some interesting casting decisions.

For those who somehow missed the premiere, here's the basic outline of the show. The U.S.S. Voyager, along with a Marquis ship, are taken to the edge of the galaxy by an unknown alien force. Once there. the crews from both ships must pull together to try to find a way back home (which happens to be a distance of 70 or 80 years travel at warp 10).

All is not lost however: the U.S.S. Voyager is commanded by the capable Captain Kathryn Janeway.

Casting a female captain was certainly an interesting choice for the producers since the majority of Trek series viewers are males between 18-49. But, despite the anticipated questions of how well a female captain would come across. they chose Kate Mulgrew as lead.

The rest of the cast is a little more predictable, and perhaps... comfortable to most Trek viewers. The first officer is Chakotay. a Native American who had commanded the Maquis ship prior to joining the Voyager crew. Lt. Tom Paris fills the "Don Juan" role (past alumni include Captain Kirk and First Officer Will Riker from Star Trek and The Next Generation series, respectively). The "Think first with fists" title is held by the half human/half Klingon B'Elanna Tores, who happens to be the chief engineer. The rest of the crew is rounded out with the "just graduated from the academy" communications officer, a Vulcan tactical/security officer. two space aliens (one of which resembles a cross between a Keebler elf and Cathy Rigby) and a holographic doctor.

The Voyager set itself is very true to the Star Trek tradition with lots of nice hallways and a large bridge installed with every bluish design layout imaginable. This should be a real crowd pleaser for the techno-trekkers, who undoubtedly are drooling in anticipation of the next technical manual release. But for the novice trekker, it is just enough to elicit a wow, instead of a "huh?".

Perhaps more important than the cast or set is the plot. For the true Trek fan, the plot is where the "belief" is, and if the plot is weak the audience will be lost. The first installment of the Voyager was no disappointment in that category. The cast blended together well, the special effects were top notch and the story line was solid. The Voyager premiere ran orbital rings around the Next Generation first episode, which had numerous production problems which showed up on tape. But can the Voyager series meet or beat the success of the original Star Trek or the Next Generation? The outlook is definitely promising, and with 70 years to get home this crew may go where no one has gone before.

Katherine Hill is an avid Trekker in addition to being director of Campus Activities. She is currently applying to be captain of a special Starfleet flagship called the U.S.S Student Life.

Paglia re-Vamps non-fiction market with latest book

By Amy Cavallo
Staff Writer

With a title like Vamps and Tramps , it is difficult to conceive that Camille Paglia's brilliant third book is a scholarly work of criticism and debate.

It is equally difficult to conceive that part of her book discusses feminism because, after all, what feminist writer would dare put the word "tramp" in her title? Unfortunately, Paglia's books have been stigmatized as purely feminist books, but they are much more diverse in content.

In this volume, Paglia explores the dying world of intellect with her essays ranging from sexuality, prostitution and rape to politics, pop theater and book reviews.

She challenges the frequently redundant and weepy books on pop culture with her incredible insights on history, biology, mythology and plain old common sense (the element most lacking in feminist literature).

To a student reader, Paglia may appear intimidating. However, it is the students that she is aiming to reach. Reforming educational institutions (even High Point University) is one of her major goals.

Her belief is that today's students must shed the MTV Generation label that we've been given.

Her books are perfect stepping-stones for us to begin our own methods of critical thought, an idea to which many colleges do not subscribe. Students are often spoon-fed information from educators and the media. She supports enthusiastic and sensible professors who encourage students to discuss and debate issues, not merely to regurgitate inforamtion.

Vamps and Tramps is written in a feisty, yet agile manner.

Though some students equate a scholarly work with boredom, Paglia is truly entertaining, humorous and witty.

There is no other contemporary author of pop culture that has matched her vitality and intelligence.

I enthusiastically recommend Vamps and Tramps to students. Get beyond the title and just dive into it.

DENVER BAND BURSTS ONTO MUSIC SCENE

Spell tries to become a "Superstar" band

By Stephen B. Steffek
Editor

Mississippi, the latest album from the Denver, Col., band Spell, is a good rock and roll album.

It is unique because of its duets between famale and male vocalists Chanin Floyd and Tim Beckmann.

When this formula works, it works well.

When it doesn't work, it is very obvious. The vocal conflict between the two can be very distinct. These vocal clashes are never more painfully evident that in the song "More."

However, the majority of the songs work well and provide well-balanced rock and roll tunes.

"Superstar," the band's first single. did very well on the college music and modern rock charts. It is still receiveing airplay on WWIH.

Some songs on the album do not use the duet-like style. Indeed, on these songs, Floyd does an excellent job of carrying the song.

The somewhat unpolished quality of the band's music can be viewed as a plus or minus depending on the listener's musical tastes.

Check out Mississippi, the newest release from Spell. This may be one band to watch for on the music scene.

AUTHOR OF VAMPIRE CHRONICLES TACKLES GHOSTS IN LATEST SET OF BOOKS

Rice continues Mayfair saga in Lasher

By Tanya Lyons
Staff Writer

Anne Rice continues the Mayfair line in Lasher with a story that threatens the very existence of the family.

The novel begins where The Witching Hour left off with Michael Curry wondering whether Rowan Mayfair will ever return to him. Rowan gave birth Christmas night to Lasher, the family ghost. Lasher then tries to destroy Michael by drowning him in the pool out back. Michael returns, but no longer has the strange power in his hands to touch things and see visions. After Michael recovers, he vows to kill Lasher, now flesh.

Lasher abducts Rowan and drags her to Scotland, where Lasher first gained awareness with Suzanne the first generation of Mayfairs, several hundred years ago. Rowan tries to study Lasher to find out what kind of creature he really is. She manages to send samples to a friend of hers. Dr. Samuel Larkin. who discovers that Lasher is not human or animal. But before Larkin can discover what Lasher is, he is killed by an unknown person.

The family is still trying to find out where Rowan is, and tries to search the globe for her. While all of this is happening, a mysterious stranger kills several Mayfair women in an attempt to procreate with them. The family discovers it is Lasher and band together to prevent any more deaths.

Rowan eventually escapes Lasher, and on her way home to Michael, she gives birth to Emaleth, a creature similar to Lasher. Before Rowan can kill Emaleth, she lapses into a coma and is found by a family that lives nearby.

Rowan is flown back to her home to spend her last days with Michael.

After several days of crisis. Lasher arrives at the First Street house and tells his story ranging back several hundred years to his origins. His story does not impress Michael. Instead Michael carries out his vow and kills Lasher with a hammer. Emaleth returns to revive Rowan and in turn Rowan kills Emaleth.

Despite its captivating story, Lasher did not have the pacing of The Witching Hour. I had a hard time keeping up with the story from time to time. I admit the story was interesting, because I knew what happened in the original book. There was also a story from Julien, the only male Mayfair witch. I could not understand its purpose, save for one poem which foretold the fate of the Mayfair line. Rice's writing is captivating. but I wouldn't wait to read Taltos, her third installment of the Mayfair story.

Men's basketball struggles in conference, falls from rankings

☐ Barton, Pfeiffer and Coker give Panthers three early setbacks in CC

By Sonny Gann
Staff writer

The men's basketball team started the year hot at 10-2 but has sputtered recently, losing three of its last four to begin conference play. High Point (11-5, 1-3) opened the season ranked eighth in the NAIA, but the Panthers' recent skid has forced them out of the top-25. Still, coach Jerry Steele has a bright outlook.

"Who knows what our record will be, but we are going to get better with (Mike) Farrell and (Pete) Wyatt," said Steele. "That gives us eight people instead of six we can play. That will prevent us from getting tired or run down."

The Panthers started the season with a bang, winning five of their first six games, then went 5-1 on a road trip to Florida. High Point lost the opening game of the Webber College Tournament to Lee, Tenn. but then won back-to-back games against Cornerstone, Mich. and Northland, Wis. to capture fifth place.

The Panthers carried that momentum into the Warner Southern Sunshine Tournament held at Lake Wales, Fla. High Point opened by beating Houghton, N.Y. and then defeated host Warner Southern in the semifinals.

High Point fought back from 19 points down to defeat Bethel, Ind. 109-100 in overtime. Steele called the trip a success and positve in every aspect for the Panthers.

"It was a great trip for us because we played six days in a row and got a lot of good playing in," Steele said. "Lee College shot the ball well and we fell behind and never really came back.

"The next five games we played good defense and we were pretty much in control except against Bethel. We were 19 down with seven minutes left. We came back, tied it, and won in overtime. Emotionally it was a big win for us."

The return to the Carolinas hasn't been a pleasant one for the Panthers as they have lost to Barton 67-63, Pfeiffer 88-82, and Coker 64-57 to begin conference play. High Point did record a win in that stretch against Lees McRae, 72-64.

Steele feels the team has played well in spots but hasn't put a good 40 minutes together like they did in Florida. Steele also thinks the denfensive toughness hasn't been there like it was earlier in the season.

"The key for us is we have to play defense forall 40 minutes and say tough on the boards," said Steele. "If we don't do that we will be up and down."

The Panthers still present a balanced scoring attack with Toby Brown (14.8 ppg), Brett Speight (15.8), and Rob Martin (23.8) all in double figures. Demetrius Alexander (9.9) and Mike Farrell (8.9) aren't off pace by far.

Danny Watson and Telly Bernard are distributing the ball well with a combined 123 assists in 16 games.

But the big story is Martin, who was recently named NAIA National Player of the Week Jan. 9.

Against Pfeiffer, Martin poured in a season-high 38 points. The 6-7 forward is being scouted by two NBA teams.

Pro scouts eye "Sky" Martin

By John Buday
Staff wrtier

Rob Martin's great leaping ability has earned him the nickname "Sky." Now, his hard work and dedication in collegiate basketball might earn him a trip to the professional ranks.

The 6-7 senior forward from Atlanta is averaging 23.8 points and 8.3 rebounds per game. Those numbers have not gone unnoticed.

Martin is being scouted by the NBA's Boston Celtics. After the first game of the season against Winston-Salem State, a Celtics scout talked with Martin and Coach Jerry Steele.

Martin said the scout told him to "Keep up the good work, and I'll look out for you."

The scout held true to his word as he returned to the Purple Palace last Wednesday to take another look at Martin's skills during the Pfeiffer game.

High Point lost 88-82 to the Falcons, but Martin dazzled the crowd with 38 points. During the 78-76 win over WSSU, Martin led High Point with 23 points and 11 boards.

In addition to being named Carolinas Conference Player of the Week twice, he was awarded NAIA Player of the Week Jan. 9.

"I want to play at the next level," Martin said.

Also taking a peek at Martin are the Detroit Pistons and a team from Germany. The Pistons' scout was at the Panthers' second game versus WSSU in which Martin scored 32.

If the NBA isn't in Martin's near future, he's keeping his options open.

"I'll play overseas-if I have to prove myself and then come back," he said.

Athletes earn honors

Five High Point athletes gained recognition from the NAIA during the month of January.

In women's soccer, Sheri Green was named to the NAIA All-America team along with Whitaker Augier and David Sullenberger of the men's soccer team.

In women's basketball, Karen Curtis was awarded Carolinas Conference Player of the Week Jan. 9, the same week Rob Martin was named NAIA National Player of the Week.

Seiler's unlikely presence boosts team

By Keith Corbett
Staff writer

For most high school athletes, dreams of playing college athletics end on graduation day, forcing them to become content to live with memories.

Sophomore Mike Seiler, a sports-medicine major and native of Denton, Md., spent his freshman year at High Point reminiscing on past high school accomplishments.

A four-sport letterman in football, basketball, baseball and tennis, Seiler felt uncomfortable in the role as a fan, particularly a High Point basketball fan.

"It was a spur of the moment kind of thing," Seiler said of his decision to try out as a walk-on this year's basketball team. "I love to compete, and it was something I had to do."

"Mike has made a bigger contribution than anyone has realized - maybe even him."

-- Coach Jerry Steele

And what he has done has even bewildered Coach Jerry Steele.

"I couldn't ask any more (of him)," Steele said. "He missed the first eight days of practice during fall break, and we were banged up early during the season.

"Mike has had to learn the system. He's been a key role in our success."

Though that role might not be scoring 20 points and grabbing 10 rebounds a game, the 6-5 center's presence in practice has motivated his teammates.

"He's out there to push our starters," Steele said. "He has accepted his role, and his attitude is superb. He is always a contributing factor to the outcome of the game, whether he plays or not."

Contributing is something Seiler is used to. "My father has always pushed me to do whatever it takes to do my best wherever I can," said Seiler, who brings a 3.73 honors GPA to the court.

"He busts his butt day in and day out," forward Toby Brown said. "He's the most mentally tough individual I've ever met. "I know my role, and I accept it, but that doesn't mean I'm going to be satisfied with it," said Seiler, who is averaging 1.3 points per game in three appearances. "I want minutes like everyone else."

Though his minutes are lacking, primarily due to a two-year hiatus from the sport, his time is definitely coming.

The mental toughness that he strives for and his teammates feed on has made Seiler's basketball dream a reality.

Women's basketball in position to make strong conference run

Karen Curtis leads Panthers in scoring, rebounding and assists

From staff reports

During the last three weeks, the Lady Panthers have proven they should remain a top contender in the Carolinas Conference.

After a 76-67 loss at UNC-Asheville dropped High Point to 5-3, the Lady Panthers won four of their next six games, giving them a 9-5, 2-1 record.

Elon and Queens fell victim to High Point earlier this month in non-conference home games. The Fighting Christians were shot down 65-58 while Queens lost 81-66.

Point guard Karen Curtis had a combined 45 points and 20 rebounds in the two games. Curtis was named conference player of the week Jan. 9.

Barton was High Point's first conference victim, falling 78-75 in Wilson. Curtis led the Panthers with 22 points and 12 rebounds. She is averaging 19.9 points and 7.5 rebounds per game. Curtis' 5.9 assist per game average ranks among the top in the conference.

"The conference is always tough, especially when you have a pretty high seed to begin with," said center Mary Lyle, who backs up Tiffanie Wilson (6.2 pgg, 5.4 rpg).

The Panthers fell 71-42 to non-conference opponent Longwood before knocking off Pfeiffer 73-61. A 65-64 loss at Coker Saturday gave High Point a 2-1 conference mark.

"Every year we've always had a strong team, but it's been in different areas," Lyle said. "This year, our backcourt is good. The whole team has a lot of speed. We have to use speed to make up for our lack of height."

Forwards Greta Miles and Tedra Lindsay have got the job done on the boards. Miles averages 12.6 ppg and 7.4 rpg while Lindsay's numbers are a similar 12.7 ppg and 5.8 rpg. April Rose is averaging 8.9 ppg and 5.1 rpg.

In an important conference matchup, High Point travels to Mt. Olive Wednesday.

"We've always had a pretty good rivalry," Lyle said. "That should be a good game."

Curtis spearheads attack

By Andrew Awai

Karen Curtis is not your average point guard. Her numbers speak for themselves.

This red-shirt freshman has found herself spearheading the heart of the 9-5 Lady Panthers' offense, averaging 19.9 points, 7.5 rebounds and 5.9 assists per game.

Originally from Apex, Curtis has a rich basketball history. Her record is impressive, to say the least. Karen attended Cary High School, leading her team to victory in the state championships as a senior in 1993.

Success is certainly no stranger to Curtis. She played in the East-West High School All-Star game where she was named MVP for three straight years, and she has also excelled in AAU summer leagues.

Those who see Curtis play will marvel at her grace, speed and tremendous confidence in handling a basketball -- a confidence that stems from a natural sense of leadership.

Point guard Karen Curtis puts in a breakaway lay-up as Pfeiffer players trail her drive.

"Even as a freshman she still shows a lot of leadership abilities," teammate Mary Lyle said. "She definitely has a lot of talent. She's one of the best players in the conference."

It is hoped that Curtis' addition will strengthen the Lady Panthers' potency down the stretch. She believes the team can go places if it stays focused and her own high-powered play remains consistent.

"As the point guard and play setter, I have to be the floor leader, vocal on the court and control the tempo of the game," Curtis said.

"We have a good team. If we can focus on working together, as a team, we can be much better."

Six games in six days highlight Christmas break

By Rob Humphreys

> "I've never seen so many oranges in my life."
>
> - Rob Martin upon visiting Lake Wales, Fla.

It's January 2nd, 1995.

While most of us are at home falling asleep on the couch watching college football, probably still hurting from New Year's Eve festivities, the men's basketball team is in Central Florida, not leisurely soaking up the warm sun, but pounding the hardwood in theWebber College Holiday Inn Tournament.

The Panthers were flat in the first game, a 99-86 loss to Lee College, Tenn. which dropped them to 5-2. Lee's full-court press and potent shooting erased a 49-44 High Point lead at halftime.

"All of us were out of shape and tired," forward Rob Martin said of the team's first game in nearly three weeks. "The second half we ran out of gas and played sloppy."

High Point rebounded to win its next five games, taking top honors in the Warner Southern Shootout with a dramatic 109-100 overtime win against Bethel. Ind. Toby Brown's 28 points led the Panthers in a 19-point comeback over Bethel, which was ranked No. 1 in the NAIA Div. 2.

Amid their busy schedule, players managed a diversion to Busch Gardens in Tampa New Year's Day. But the warm Florida weather was especially appreciated.

"Some people don't get to experience this -- walking to a basketball game in shorts," point guard Danny Watson said.

Lady Panthers climb atop conference standings

Forward Greta Miles collects two easy points in the lane against Pfeiffer while teammate Holly Hendley pursues. Miles and the Lady Panthers have won their last six games and are in first place in the Carolinas Conference.

If High Point wins its first round game at home against the eighth seed Thursday, it will advance to the semifinals of the CC Tournament at Pfeiffer March 3-5.

The Lady Panthers, winners of their last six games, have clinched atleast a tie for first place in the Carolinas Conference.

High Point (17-6, 10-2 CC) overcame nationally-ranked Belmont Abbey for the top seed in the tournament with a 72-57 victory over the Crusaders at the Purple Palace Saturday.

Point guard Karen Curtis led the Panthers with 17 points and 12 rebounds in a strong defensive showing.

"Belmont Abbey is averaging over 77 points per game, and our defense really shut them down," coach Jo'e Ellenburg said. "We went into a hard-nosed man defense and really picked it up."

The Panthers also beat Belmont 76-71 last month on the road eight games ago. Since then, they have lost only to Mt. Olive, 65-63.

Coach Joe Ellenburg

In addition to drubbing Belmont, High Point picked up two wins over Lees-McRae last week.

The Panthers enter the Carolinas Conference tournament at Pfeiffer ranked No. 1. They will play either St. Andrews, Lees-McRae or Pfeiffer in the first round at home.

"I think we can win the conference tournament and make it to nationals," said Curtis, who

Students given chance to discuss research during April symposium

By Lori McBrayer
Staff writer

The second annual Undergraduate Research Symposium will take place April 12 in the Campus Center. It is an event in which undergrads present their research to students and professors from all departments.

"It was pure excitement last year," said Dr. Gray Bowman, chair of the chemistry department. "We didn't know what to expect. We were extremely pleased with the results."

Professor of English Edward Piacentino and Bowman organized the symposium. They were satisfied with the nine presentations given last year.

"We had a good, respectable beginning," Piacentino said. "We were starting without the experience of having done this before."

Bowman sees the symposium as an opportunity for students to adjust to public speaking.

"I think this is a good thing for students to do because it helps them sharpen their own image of themselves as professionals," Bowman said. "One of the most important things you have to learn to do is to present yourself and your ideas in front of a group of peers."

He says that sometimes stagefright keeps students from participating.

"It's like getting a shot," he said. "You worry about the shot. Then you get the shot. It stings for two seconds, and then it's over."

A summary of proposed presentations needs to be turned in to Bowman or Piacentino by April 3.

The presentation will take place in the Westminster Room and the Great Room. Students have 20 minutes each, which includes time for questions and answers.

Jose Gomez and Russell Schuster presented a marketing proposal at the symposium last year and were pleased with the results. Gomez plans to give

Pro wrestling unique all around world

By Kevin Fielder

There may be many different forms of entertainment in the world, but none of them stand out like professional wrestling.

The lights go out, the music starts, two imposing physiques enter the ring, the bell sounds and the fans go crazy.

All across the world, fans fill the seats of high school gyms, arenas and stadiums to see their favorite good guys and bad guys go tooth and nail in the ring.

Each country has its own style of wrestling. In America, the style is backyard, back-alley, catch-as-catch-can wrestling. These guys come to the ring to "kick butt." They grunt, scream, yell, kick, bite, and hey, you even see moves from collegiate-style wrestling.

Names such as Nature Boy Rick Flair, Sting, The Steiner Brothers, Arn Anderson, Brett "The Hit Man" Hart and Hulk Hogan grace the professional ranks of American wrestling.

In Japan, the style is more scientific. More wrestling skills are used along with martial arts and aerial moves. Some of Japan's toughest are The Great Muta, Jushin Thunder Liger and Tiger Mask. With these guys, some of the best action is in the air instead of the mat.

Affirmative Action = reverse discrimination

Whatever happened to equality among all races?

by Fred Jordan
Staff Writer

Charles Manson, John C. Calhoun and Malcolm X may yet get their dreams. If the institution of affirmative action continues, racial unrest will get out of control.

What has happened to the idea of equality? No longer do we hear the cries for civil rights through the creation of an equal working, social and political nation. No, people like Ben Chavis and Rodney King have perverted the idea that any progress has been made towards making this a truly better country. The dream has died, and with it the desires of George Wallace have surfaced wearing African icons and designer jumpsuits.

What did the "Dream" that Martin Luther King Jr. spoke of in Washington mean? The average college freshman today and the average American probably wouldn't know. I will say that the dream did not involve the self-inflicted genocide that exists through gang violence. The dream did not involve the manipulation of children to gain profit from the welfare system, which should be abolished. And the dream did not involve government programs such as affirmative action.

But in each of these cases the modern African-American has betrayed the ideals and dreams of the Medgar Evers and King. [By the way, I am an English-French-German-Irish-Scotch-Confederate-American.] Blacks have indeed disgraced the memories of all martyrs who fell in the struggle not to be treated with exception, but only with equality. I think that King would have preferred to sit down and talk to the KKK about seating on transit vehicles, than to base the completion of his dream in the hands of men like the Reverend Al Sharpton.

The problem is affirmative action. African Americans only make up 12.4 percent of America's population and Hispanics only 9.5 percent. So why does this prejudicial legislation exist? Part of the blame falls on the want-to-be liberal Democratic Congress that made exceptions to help the disadvantaged blacks of the '60s. At the time some measures were needed to right the balance, but those days are over. The LBJ machine somehow sold the idea that the government owes the black man something. If the government owes anybody something, it is the Indian tribal governments that should be getting a bigger check. The need to police the white man to make sure things are fair is over.

In fact, U.S. News & World Report recently quoted a Wall Street Journal/NBC News survey that said two-thirds of America opposes affirmative action and that some Democrats feel that it will be a huge issue in the next Presidential election. If nearly 70 percent of America is opposed to it, then we can look for an elephant in the White House pretty soon, and I'm not talking about Hillary. Affirmative action is an issue now. It needs to be removed so that progress can again be made on the civil rights front.

Here is a fact: if you own a company, you are going to hire people you know and trust. You are going to look at the abilities and experience of individuals and weigh your decision upon those calculations. You are not going to hire somebody or not hire somebody because of his color, unless the government forces you. But one of the big platforms for the new black movement is to have more minority representation in the upper management of professional sports. These people don't want a team to hire somebody because of personal merit. They simply want a black man in the front office.

All right, let's put that same logic to work on the playing field. You would now need to have a basketball team that consisted of one white man, one black man, one Asian, one Native American and Gloria Steinam or Jane Fonda could rotate for the fifth position because you know that they would raise all kinds of hell about the ERA getting left out. Teams with that format would be less competitive and much less exciting [I doubt Fonda can dunk]. That would be stupid, wouldn't it? Of course, it would, because you would be giving people jobs not based on their ability, but upon their ethnic heritage. And that goes against everything that the dream was about. It would destroy the desire to succeed.

Although the concept of affirmative action was upheld by the Supreme Court of the United States, the practice of establishing quotas was called into question. In the case of Baake vs. California, a hopeful medical student sued the state of California. He felt he had been denied admission to the University of California at Davis medical school because of his race. He was white. He had better grades and test scores than 26 students who had been admitted, all of whom were African-American.

He won. Similar cases are pending in Texas and Maryland. Why does affirmative action continue? Could it be that civil rights groups combined with Equal Rights Amendment lobbyists have a force second only to the National Rifle Association in Washington.

Money does indeed talk, and it apparently dictates legislation. So the dream has been sold to the highest bidder and whoever will support prejudicial legislation.

Unfortunately, the dream was also destroyed by too many people's own actions. Sometimes the dream turns into a nightmare locked away behind walls, gates and cold iron bars.

Today the jails are filled with over 80 percent minority populations. There are some activists that try and blame the "established" white man. The only reason those people are in jail is because they committed crimes and were convicted of those crimes. It becomes very simple then. They go to jail where they sit and rot. This is also part of the problem.

The prison system should be dramatically reformed, reinstating the dream through constructive job training and massive education programs within the jail system. If measures such as these were instituted, then maybe the inmates would start to see the reality of what the dream really was.

It was the same idea that the founding fathers had for this country, the idea that we can succeed if we try. There are no limitations upon any person today except the white man. Constantly barriers are put up to create an unequal working environment for a white male. This is nothing more than government-sanctioned prejudice. There is nothing to differentiate these actions from the hiring bans on the Irish or blacks in the past. It is simply wrong and needs to be done away with completely.

But we cannot lose sight of the dream. The dream can be obtained. We just have to strive to succeed in this land of boundless opportunities. After all, if Kathie Lee Gifford can be asked to sing the national anthem at the Super Bowl, then anything can happen.

I'm not trying to say that an African American should be discriminated against. My point is that no white male should be discriminated against either. It is a simple idea, one that the Reverend Martin Luther King Jr. spoke of in Washington all those years ago.

I have a dream. It is a wife and kids and a station wagon. It will be playing church-league softball and going to PTA covered-dish suppers. It will be lazy summer days spent marching the streets of Birmingham, to make our country free. But, America, where are you? I hope you will be dreaming too.

In defense of Kathie Lee

Hey, I'll admit it ... I watch her!

By Jason Schneider
Staff Writer

As I was driving to class several days ago, I heard two morning radio show hosts bashing Kathie Lee Gifford. I was not amused.

I'm not ashamed to admit it: I watch Live with Regis and Kathie Lee everyday. And if I have an early class, I record it and watch it later.

I first discovered this show when I was in high school and was drawn to it because of the 15 to 20 minutes of "host chat" that opens it every day. Since it is unscripted, it is during this segment that the most humorous things occur.

Another reason I decided to become a faithful follower of Live was the fact that is one of the few remaining morning talk shows that really is live.

And anything can happen on a live show. That element—the unexpected—is what keeps me riveted to my television from 9 to 10 a.m. every weekday morning. That. and of course, Kathie Lee.

Kathie Lee is the morning voice of morality who is just a little bit wicked. She can talk about flatulence just as easily as she can talk about religion, and often has much to say on both topics. She is a wife and a mother of two, and the topic of most of her morning conversations is Cody and Cassidy. But what kind of mother would she be if she didn't talk about her children?

Another thing I like about Kathie Lee is the way she tells about even the most glamorous events in a way that everyone can relate to them. Whether it is dinner at the White House or a Barbra Streisand concert, she makes it seem like Sunday lunch at Aunt Rose's or your little sister's piano recital. She is not snobby or snooty about it, simply unpretentious.

Whenever Kathie Lee has a day or a week off, the show just isn't the same. Previous co-hosts who have "pinch hit" for her, Dana Fleming and Christine Ferraro, just do not know Regis well enough to banter with him the way Kathie Lee does. Joy Philbin knows him too well (she and Regis have been married for 25 years), although she does come in a close second.

But Live is best when both its namesakes are present. Besides, what better way could there be to start off a dreary weekday than with a laugh and a smile from "America's Sweetheart?" The rapport between Kathie Lee and Regis is better than a cup of undecaffeinated coffee. They must be doing something right (has anyoune seen Mike and Maty?), for in June they will celebrate 10 years of Live with Regis and Kathie Lee.. Here's to 10 more.

The Pin Points Theatre actors will present the show 1001 Black Inventions Sunday at 7 p.m. in the Memorial Auditorium, located near the corner of Montlieu and Barbee avenues.

There is no admission charge, and the public is invited to attend.

In one act, the cast tells a comic tale of a typical modern family as it attempts to live in "The Twilight Zone," which is a world without inventions by black persons.

Another part of the 90-minute show is about contributions made by Daniel Hale Williams, Jan Ernst Matzellger, Dr. George Washington Carver and Benjamin Banneker.

Students build homes for needy

National Student News Service

About 5,000 students will be travelling nationwide this spring break, but not to swill beer and spike volleyballs. Instead, they'll be building affordable, decent housing through Habitat for Humanity's Collegiate Challenge.

Although the nonprofit organization is Christian-affiliated, students of all types are encouraged to work together against the homelessness problem.

•"Habitat for Humanity doesn't push any doctrines or dogma," emphasized Lisa Osanka, a senior projects coordinator for the group. "We believe in the theology of the hammer; that is, your background doesn't matter as long as you are willing to work." This spring break more than 100 affiliates, mostly small, grassroots groups, will host Collegiate Challenges that accommodate student groups of five to 300 in building new homes in various locations. Involved students first must raise funds for their own travel, and contribute building materials and housing costs for the host affiliate. Student chapters have developed many creative ways to raise the necessary funds.

Each year the chapter at Lakeland College in Wisconsin arranges a "Shantytown" where students and professors sleep outdoors on cold nights and get sponsors to donate money for the cause.

After the Patagonia company donated fleece this year to the University of Colorado-Boulder chapter, members made and sold fleece headbands. "We tried to challenge the assumption that fundraising was lame," offered one volunteer.

After fundraising, students engage in actual house building at the designated sites. A construction background is not required, and most volunteers have little building experience when they start."

"It's not nearly as hard as you'd think," said one Boulder student. "It's kind of like putting Legos together."

Since being founded in 1976, Habitat for Humanity's student volunteer program has steadily grown.

This year, the Collegiate Challenge grew by about 800 students over last year's turnout.

"Students are the future of Habitat for Humanity," Osanka said. "Many still work with us after they graduate. It means a lot to everyone involved to tangibly help eliminate poverty housing."

To date, habitat for Humanity has overseen the creation of about 30,000 homes for 100,000 people.

Members of Circle K can provide information pertaining to Habitat for Humanity projects right here in the Triad.

Sig house strikes out; returns to normal use at end of February

By Nicole Thompson
Special to the Chronicle

Have you ever heard the phrase "three strikes and you're out?"

It's not just a figure of speech in this case. After three strikes against the Delta Sigma Phi house, the Student Life Board (SL) has decided on disciplinary action that will affect a number of members in the fraternity.

The three strikes were for:

- Having over 50 people in the house,
- a noise violation and
- a fight.

The case resulted in a hearing before the SL Board and a temporary loss of the house until the end of February.

Sophomore Cory Fink, a member of the fraternity, said, "The house will be more or less treated like a dormitory until then," meaning only the brothers live there.

They can't have parties or any functions at the house. At the end of the month, the fraternity will go before the board again to see if it has met the guidelines for reinstatement.

Many Sig brothers feel they have been treated unfairly.

"The guidelines for the striking system is that there should be two complaints issued before each strike is given away," Fink states.

The brothers' main objection is that there was only one complaint that they know of issued for one strike.

"This decision was a culmination of a lot of different things," Dean of Students Gart Evans said. "A variety of things led up to it."

One person. who asked not to be identified, agreed with both sides, stating, "There was a lot of controversy within the strike because both the Student Life Board and the Delta Sigma Phi fraternity had good arguments."

Some of the brothers don't like the board's decision.

"The way the outcome was decided, the Student Life Board realized that if they kicked any brothers out of the house, then the school would lose money from not housing them since they would just move off campus," said Scott Pederson, a Sig. "So the only rational solution was to take away all of our privileges at the house and to not label it as the Delta Sigma Phi fraternity house."

Dean Evans is a Delta Sigma Phi alumnus, and he was the fraternity adviser for two years. Did being a brother make him stick up for his fraternity?

"We just want the fraternity to start getting things done," Evans said. "They haven't been recognized for anything like Presidential Scholars or community service for a long time.

"It's not that the fraternity can't achieve things; it's just that they don't try."

It will be a while before the campus hears "Party at the Sig house tonight!"

Pro wrestling

In Mexico, it's called "Lucha Libre," and carries World-Cup soccer fame with all the flags waving in the air. The style here is scientific with a big emphasis on high-risk moves that keep the crowd on its feet.

These guys dive through ropes, do moonsaults (backflips) on the floor from the top rope and execute pins from any position. Masked Mexican wrestlers such as Ray Misterio Jr. and Hijo Del Santo are the most respected and popular. You find more masks in the crowd than t-shirts.

In Mexico, even the midgets keep the excitement going. Take Espectrito and Mascarita for example. They're small but as tough as the big guys. If the wrestlers aren't careful, these little guys will hit them from anywhere.

Another unique aspect about Mexican wrestling is that contestants may weigh as little as 145 pounds and be under six feet tall. You don't have to be big to be bad!

So what's so exciting about watching men in tights throw each other around and scream about how tough they are?

"Wrestling is a crowd-pleaser," said World Championship Wrestling coordinator Kenny Smith. "It's a place you can go and relax, forget about everything and let your frustrations out."

Big Van Vader straddles the turnbuckle.

Fans yell, laugh, scream, argue and make fun of wrestlers. They basically have a good time whether their man wins or loses.

Ever wonder what keeps professional wrestlers in this crazy business?

"The challenge, the effort and the competition," said The Russian Bear Ivan Koloff, a wrestling legend for 32 years.

Regardless of popular opinion, wrestling is very competitive. People get in the ring to please the crowd, and to do so, somebody has to get beat.

Kids love the excitement, too. They pick out their heroes just like they were characters in a comic book, remaining loyal until the end.

"I think it's great for the kids if they've got somebody they can look up to," professional wrestler Dynamite Dan said.

A commonly-asked question is "What kind of people actually go to this stuff?"

The answer: people from all walks of life -- college students, doctors, lawyers, city-people, country-folk, old and young, rich and poor. Unlike the common steorotype, most of these individuals still have their teeth, are quite intelligent and are not all from the South.

When asked why he chose wrestling as a career, Dan Cooley said it is a "family business." He started at age 16 and has been involved for two years.

"Just stepping in there is tough, but doing it every night is tougher," Cooley said.

Fellow wrestler Pat Friday put it real simple, "You like doing it. You get paid."

"It's very hard," said Mr. Fantasy, a pro wrestler from Trinity. "We have a trainer that works with all the wrestlers. Good guys one way, bad guys the other."

Another local, Mad-Dog Davidson, said "There's money in it. You rake some bruises and bumps, but there's money in it. It's a good sport to get into if you like pain."

Traveling is one of the toughest parts of the job.

"On the road you eat a lot of hamburgers," Hammer Man said. "I never get to eat a decent meal."

The biggest question asked by observors is always "Is it fake?"

"Look at my chest, look at my arm," Mad-Dog said refering to red hand prints that were left on his chest after his match with Hammer Man.

Pat Friday's response: "Hmmm. Let me slam you!" My response: "Oh, trust me. I know it's not fake!"

If you really want to know if it's fake, then check out Boogies Wrestling Camp in Shawsville, Va. The Boogie Woogie Man Jimmy Valiant shows the ropes to the next generation of wrestlers.

So is professional wrestling the geniune article, or is it fake?

Who cares!

Pro wrestling is entertainment. It's what people like, and no matter what part of the world it's in, be assured that fans will be on hand to boo and cheer the people in masks and tights.

another presentation this year.

"It was a really good experience, I think," Gomez said. "It motivated me to write better papers."

Piacentino sees the symposium as beneficial for students and the university.

"I'm hoping it will give students a chance to get some recognition, a chance to show other students and faculty that there are some people on this campus who are doing some very significant things," he said.

"For the school, I'm hoping it will make the university community aware that research is important," Piacentino said. "So often, it's non-academic things that get attention."

Professor of English Marion Hodge strongly supports the symposium and feels that research is a large part of the education.

"Students can do more than take notes and examinations," Hodge said. "They can rebel against ignorance and blindness, their own and their elders.

They can be makers. They can do research. They can participate in the Student Research Symposium."

Spring Dance postponed; Radisson's policy forbids alcohol at functions with minors

By Tanya Lyons
Staff writer

So much for an early start to the Spring Semiformal Dance.

Officials at the Radisson Hotel in High Point made a breach of contract two days before the Feb. 3 dance because of a policy that did not allow minors to a function that serves alcohol.

Clif Taylor, general manager of the Radisson Hotel, apologized profusely for the situation, saying, "We have a moral and legal problem with serving alcohol at a function where minors are involved."

Katherine Hill, director of sudent activities, had no wish to create bad blood between the Radisson and HPU.

"We do a lot of business with them," Hill said. "In fact, several of the Presidential Scholarship competitors stay there during the weekend."

Hill added that the staff members of the Radisson were extremely helpful and wonderful to work with in planning the event.

Although several students and HPU staff members may be angry that such an important event fell through, planning goes on to try it again. Hill said that plans are in the works for a very tentative April 1 dance.

This dance will be held in conjunction with the annual Bike for Breath to raise money for the American Lung Association. This dance will be handled in the same way the last dance was to be undertaken.

There will be food, drinks and a free non-alcoholic bar for those who are underage and do not drink. There will be buses running to and from the dance as well as two off-duty police officers to ensure student security.

Hill hopes this dance will serve the purpose the last dance was meant to -- bring Greeks and independents together in a social atmosphere. Hill hopes to repeat the success that was enjoyed with the Homecoming Dance.

Vouchers and tickets from the previous dance will be valid as passes for this new dance. When they become available, tickets can be purchased in the Officeof Student Life.

Bike for Breath scheduled for April 1

By Janet Glazier

The third annual Bike for Breath will be held Saturday, April 1. The bikers will trek 13 miles to and from the Campus Center.

The first 6.5 miles will be to the Waterview Park area near Oak Hollow Lake. At the lake, there will be food, music, games and prizes.

Bike for Breath has been held every year since 1993, in honor of Laury Lynch, a Kappa Delta sister and education major, who died of an acute asthma attack.

Laury Lynch

The proceeds will be split between the Asthma Analogy Foundation of Americas, and an elementary education scholarship in her name.

In case of rain, the make-up date will be April 2.

"THE WORD BEAUTICIAN"

Humes thrills audience with presidential humor, insights

By Jeanne Holley
Staff writer

On Feb. 1, High Point was fortunate to have James Humes, a leading expert on White House history, address the student body. With his creativity, knowledge and remarkable speaking techiques, Humes was able to gain a positive response from the audience.

Humes is a lawyer, consultant, diplomat and legislator. He is the author of How to Get Invited to the White House, a best-seller, and has served as a speechwriter for five presidents.

While being educated in England, Humes became interested in the study of Winston Churchill. He developed close ties with the Churchill family, and went on to write the award-winning biography Churchill: Speaker of the Century.

Humes has a talent for being able to impersonate Winston Churchill, and has been cast as Churchill in one-man shows.

Humes compares speechwriters to "word beauticians." He said that presidents do not want new ideas; they want speechwriters to transform old ideas.

Humes spoke about several personal experiences involving every president since Frankin D. Roosevelt. He also included some interesting anecdotes about First Ladies.

Humes tries to make his speeches as simple as possible so that they conform to the president's personality. Although he faced some humorous situations involving his speeches at times, for the most part he cherishes all his White House experiences.

Humes has appeared on the Today Show and Good Morning America. He has been called "one of the most popular speakers in the country." Humes has also been interviewed by several radio and television stations across the country.

Presently, Humes resides in Philadelphia with his family, and is a professor at the University of Pennsylvania. In June, he will be installed into The Order of the British Empire, making him the first American to be inducted.

As a child, Humes dreamed of being a pitcher for the New York Yankees. Now, as a grown man, a pitcher he is not. but a remarkable historian he is.

Alpha Gamma Delta ΓΗ Chapter

The sisters of Alpha Gamma Delta have had a very busy semester thus far. On February 11, we had a Valentines' Crush Party which was a success and everyone had a blast! We also helped ZTA with their fund-raiser for the Barbara Ann Werkheiser scholarship.

We are starting a new fund-raiser for our philanthropy, Alpha Gamma Delta foundation, and to promote family unity. We just recently elected Dana Myslevic as the new activities chair. We would like to correct an error in last month's a article, Amanda Shaw was not listed as one of our new pledges.

On February 18, we had our annual pledge/sister football game, sisters won 30-0! We're looking forward to a prosperous semester in the Greek community. Good luck to the other Greeks with their events this semester!

ΑΓΔ

Delta Sigma Phi ΔΖ Chapter

Delta Sigma Phi fraternity has been very busy completing community service hours. During Presidential Scholarship weekend, we completed 300 hours of community service. As of February 27, we should be off of probation.

Our basketball team is having a great time out on the court, come out and support us. We hope that everyone has a safe and fun spring break!

ΔΣΦ

Kappa Delta ΓΓ Chapter

The sisters of Gamma Gamma celebrated Valentines' Day with our Valentines' party and would like to thank everyone at Willobaur for their generosity. Also, Chris Swensen was chosen our sweetheart. Congrats Chris! We also elected our 1995-96 council: Lizzi Torrone, President; Jennifer Fisher, V.P. Pledge Education; Candy Cain, V.P. Membership; Stephanie DiMarzio, V.P. Standards; Amy Jones, V.P. Panhellenic; Annie Meckley, V.P. Public Relations; Tracy Tarr, Treasurer; Shannon Spohn, Assistant Secretary; and Natalie Walker, Secretary. Congratulations to you all and good luck. We would also like to congratulate the sisters of ZTA and ΑΓΔ on their new councils.

The sisters have also been very busy preparing for our annual Shamrock project. This year, we are hosting a fashion show at Market Square on March 18. All proceeds will go to the Hallelujah House in High Point and the National Committee to prevent child abuse.

Theta Chi ΕΑ Chapter

The brothers of Theta Chi have been very busy in the last month. We celebrated our 40th anniversary last weekend.

We recently elected new officers for the 1995-96 term. They are: Brian Schmidt, President; Phil Bickling, Vice President; Matt Johnson, Secretary; Jeff Whitehead, Treasurer; Jim Brower, Pledge Marshal; and Brian Bocholis, Risk Manager.

ΘΧ

Zeta Tau Alpha ΔΓ Chapter

The sisters of Zeta Tau Alpha have been very busy this month. We volunteer at the Oak Hill Elementary School teaching water safety for the Red Cross. We also sponsored a hazing standard program. Alumni and National Leader Consultant, Dana Caudill, was the speaker.

We also created a penny drive to raise money for a scholarship in memory of Barbara Ann Werkheiser. We would like to thank Delta Sigma Phi, Phi Mu, Alpha Gamma Delta And Lambda Chi Alpha for all of their support with the penny drive. We would also like to thank those of you who have donated your money to this cause.

Jennifer Marshall was voted Zeta with Zest for her outstanding work with our new members. Congratulations to sister April Kilduff on her engagement to Theta Chi, Jose Gomez. We hope everyone has a fun and safe Spring Break.

Phi Mu ΓΖ Chapter

The sisters of Phi Mu have been very busy in the last month. After Rush, we extended four open bids to Denise Boyd, Carey Maloney, Stephanie Ogilbee, and Jackie Reaves. We now have a total of 12 pledges, meaning that we met rush quota. Our pledges recently held a fund-raiser giving tuck-ins. Last week, our pledges chose their carnation sisters (similar to Big Sister).

We also helped ZTA with their fund-raiser for the Barbara Ann Werkheiser scholarship. We hope that everyone has a relaxing Spring Break!

The Office of Student Activities is looking into chartering a chapter of the Order of Omega, a Greek honor society.

The organization was founded at the University of Miami in 1959. The founders were a group of outstanding fraternity men who felt that individuals in the Greek community should be recognized for their service to the Greek community and the University.

The purpose of the organization is to recognize those members of Greek organizations that have attained high standards of leadership activities in interfraternity activities. The Order of Omega strives to bring together outstanding fraternity men and women to create an organization which will help mold the sentiment of the institution on local and intercollegiate fraternity affairs. It will also help to create an atmosphere where ideas and issues can be discussed openly across Greek lines and to help work out solutions.

Currently, there are over 300 chapters nationwide and approximately 10 other campuses are petitioning the national.

Alpha Phi Omega

By Amanda Brown
Staff Writer

Alpha Phi Omega has been really busy these past few weeks. Rush began Feb. 8 with an open house in the Alpha Phi Omega lounge. We had a good turn-out.

As rush week progressed, we had a movie night on Feb. 10 and did Adopt-a-Highway on Feb. 12 as our rush service project. We ended rush week with an open chapter meeting on Feb. 14.

In other news, Alpha Phi Omega is pleased to announce that we will be sponsoring a CPR class along with the American Red Cross on the High Point University campus. It will be held on Saturday, April 22, at a location that is yet to be announced.

It will be $25 per person. There will be certified trainers from the American Red Cross and our own Katherine Hill will be one of them. This class will be open to all students, but there are a limited number of spaces available. There will be more information given out later as it becomes known to us.

NEW GEN-X MOVIE A REAL CROWD PLEASER

Sunrise earns Linklater place in film industry

New film proves to be more than just mindless romantic comedy

By Stephen B. Steffek
Editor

Before Sunrise is a unique new film about a pair of early twentysomethings who meet on a train and form a deep, meaningful relationship.

Ethan Hawke (Alive, Reality Bites) plays a young American man who is taking the train to Vienna. From there, he will fly home. French-raised actress Julie Delpy (Killing Zoe, Europa, Europa) plays a girl who is going home to start her college classes for the year. When she moves away from an arguing couple sitting nearby, Celine (Delpy) sits across from Jesse (Hawke). They begin to talk and find a common interest in each other. They get to know each other better and find out that their time together has come to an end when they reach Vienna.

While she is going on to Paris, he is getting off in Vienna. On a whim, he invites her to join him for a night of exploring the town and each other. She accepts, deciding to take a later train, and they spend the rest of the movie walking around the town, talking. Sounds pretty boring, right? Well, it isn't.

The storyline of the movie is simple. Since the movie is so uncomplicated, the audience experiences the growth in the pair's relationship as they do. The thing that makes this an interesting film is that its dialogue is so unaffected. In most films, the writer must pigeonhole and make his dialogue fit in so that it will relate to other parts of the movie.

This movie's main purpose is to showcase its discussions. That is the true reason for its charm. The characters discuss their lives, thoughts and feelings in complete honesty, something that is rarely found in conversations today.

Director Richard Linklater (Dazed And Confused, Slacker) maintains his trademark style of putting the words that his characters speak before the images of them doing so. This is a movie that is as much fun to listen to as it is to watch.

Another thing that contributed to the film's unique atmosphere is the fact that it is written by both a man and a woman. Screenwriters Linklater and Kim Krizan provide true- to-life dialogue and viewpoints from the standpoint of both sexes.

Another interesting factor in the film is its realistic situation. While people don't often decide to spend 14 hours with a complete stranger, it is possible.

Hawke and Delpy both turn in excellent performances and make the movie enjoyable. This should provide a springboard into the upper echelons of Hollywood for each of them. They play their characters with a humanity not usually present in films. They become the boy and girl next door.

I did not feel like I was watching two actors hammer out a scripted movie. Instead, their discussion is heartfelt and naturalistic. It makes the movie.

One of my favorite scenes takes place in a record -listening booth. Not a word is spoken and yet the two communicate more of their thoughts to the audience than in some scenes where dialogue is included.

Overall, Before Sunrise is definitely one of the best, most enjoyable films I have seen in a long while. It gives the audience a fresh story with two very enjoyable characters. It is utterly engrossing and scoops the audience right up into the screen.

New album shows that Van Halen still has what it takes Rock group shows sense of Balance on latest record release

By Seth Carter
Staff Writer

Well, Van Halen has finally come of age. As if the newly spawned facial hair wasn't a big enough indicator, their new album, Balance, should tell us. This release seems to stick with the listener more than most of Van Halen's previous releases. While the songs are more varied, there is a more intense focus on this effort. The songs definitely have a harder edge than most of Van Halen's other music.

The album opens with a riveting tune, " The Seventh Seal." The song sets the pace for the rest of the album. Musically, it moves at the standard, blistering Van Halen pace, but it is darker and moodier. Lyrically, it picks up where "Right Here, Right Now" left off. The lyrics give the listener a peek inside the cnical thoughts Sammy Hagar, the band's vocalist, has about this world.

" Can't Stop Lovin' You" is the band's attempt at a love song. It is typical Hagar-era Van Halen.

The album's first single, "Don't Tell Me (What Love Can Do)," is a riveting tune which comes forth with angst. This song truly shows how much Van Halen has changed over the years.

"Amsterdam," the fourth track, is an adequate showcase for the talents of Alex and Eddie Van Halen. The two brothers seem to propel the tune from mediocrity into brilliance. The chous is hokey, but the guitar work is mindboggling.

The fifth track, "Big Fat Money," is definitely one you have to be in the mood to play. It is probably the album's weak point.

"Strung out" is an experimental piece Eddie Van Halen played by gutting the inside of a piano. It doesn't have much merit on its own but serves as an effective introduction for "Not Enough," the seventh track.

This song is one of the release's best songs. Surprisingly, it is one of the most easy-going and mellow Van Halen songs ever. It serves as a nice break from the harder theme of the effort.

The hard rock starts back with "Aftershock," which begins with a Metallica-sounding riff, but explodes into the Van Halen style.

Since the album overflows with screaming guitars, the band decided to feature the percussion talents of Alex Van Halen with "Doin' Time," the ninth song. For all the Zeppelin fans out there, this tune is the "Bonzo's Montreaux" of the '90s.

The drums lead into "Bahuchitherium," an instrumental that features now legendary guitar work of Eddie Van Halen. The track captures that Joe Satriani feel and expands on it.

" Take Me Back (Deja Vu)" features an acoustic guitar at its beginning—a definite rarity for Van Halen! The song breaks into full force and is a bit more "upbeat" than the rest of the album. It is necessary, though, because it saves the album from monotony.

The last song is the introspective "Feelin'." It presents many pairs of conflicting ideas, perhaps asking where the balance is achieved.

Van Halen has scored another successful album. It's not for everyone, but if you like hard rock, you owe it to yourself to check out Balance.

TOWER PLAYERS NEWEST PRODUCTION

CRIMES OF THE HEART

School theatre group puts on new show in Empty Space Theatre

By Stephen B. Steffek
Editor

Babe (Dawn Farabee) and Meg (Shanley Childress) wish sister Lenny, a happy birthday

Last night, the High Point University Tower Players premiered their first play of the semester.

Beth Henley's play Crimes of the Heart will play tonight, tomorrow and Saturday, beginning at 8 p.m. in the Empty Space Theatre.

The play is about a trio of sisters from Bennettsville, S.C. who must deal with several family crises as they happen.

The play opens with Lenoira, better known as Lenny, celebrating her own 30th birthday since everyone except for her snooty cousin Chick (Chase Bowers) has forgotten about it.

She has just found out that her youngest sister, Babe (Dawn Farabee) has been charged with trying to murder her husband, a South Carolina state senator.

Her sister, Meg (Shanley Childress), comes home from Nashville after Lenny telegrams her that something is wrong. Meg has not been home for over a year because she has been trying to embark on a successful country music career. After being home a while, Meg tries to reunite with her old lover Doc Porter (Scott Ericson). The complication for this plan is that Doc has gotten married since he last saw Meg, so she must weigh her happiness against that of his wife and two children.

Babe is being defended in court by the son of a family friend, Barnette Lloyd (Brian Ersalesi). After he begins to handle her case, the two fall for each other and a romance begins to spark. As the play progresses, the girl's grandfather, Old Granddaddy, suffers a stroke and slips into a coma. The girls must deal with this.

The plot is sprinkled with frequent visits from cousin Chick. She begins to grate on everyone's nerves and leaves the play in an amusing character twist on Lenny's part.

I enjoyed the play. It does tend to drag in parts, however. I do recommend that you see it if only for that valued IDS 151 credit, however.

The Tower Players once again illustrate their ability to produce a fun night of theatre on the campus.

The set, designed and built by faculty member Bill Webb is the standout in this play. It is the most realistic and inventive set I have seen in the Empty Space Theatre while I have been here.

Of the set, Webb says, "The set is really nice. It is the most realistic one I have ever worked on." When they are on the set, it really looks like it is Lenny's kitchen. Every detail has been given close attention down to the matchsticks.

Director Ron Law has once again assembled and directed the cast in an excellent fashion. They are well prepared to play their roles.

The only problem with the play is that it tends to drag in several parts. There are many good laughs and emotional moments.

The characters are portrayed excellently by Tower Players vets Bowers, Campbell, Ersalesi and Farabee. Newcomers Childress and Ericson also do well in their debut rolls.

Director Ron Law says of the play, "I think this is one of the better acted plays we've ever had considering it is not the most experienced cast. This is also the best set we've ever had in the Empty Space."

In conjunction with the Oscar nominations, several of the year's hit movies have been re-released into theatrical release. Forrest Gump, The Shawshank Redemption,Quiz Show and Bullets Over Broadway are all set to enjoy a renewed interest from audiences around the country. Due to the number and prestige of the nominations each film earned, their companies have decided to give them a second chance. Unlike the ultra-successful Gump, the films*Quiz Show*, Shawshank and Bullets may find audiences that they did not have during the first go-round at theatres.

The Lion King is scheduled to be released on video next week. List price will be $26.99 and below. The River Wild and Stargate are scheduled for release next week.

The Academy Awards ceremonies will be held on March 27. The Grammy Awards will be shown on March 1.

Top box office movies for the weekend:

1. The Brady Bunch-(15 million)
2. Just Cause-(10.7 million)
8. Forrest Gump-(3.05 million)
9. Pulp Fiction-(2.86 million)

He will speak Nov. 19. Watch for future announcements.

Aurora Gory Alice shines light on new alternative band

By Peter Romanov
Staff writer

Just because their song "Here & Now" appears on the Melrose Place soundtrack, there is no need to be afraid of Letters to Cleo.

Their music is consistent and very listenable. The music and vocals also compliment each other.

Kay Hanley's coy vocals protrude through mild guitars and have no problem keeping up with the fast, sometimes rough sounds the other band members create.

"Aurora Gory Alice" is a CD with a lot of breath-of-fresh- air songs. "I see" keeps you calm before it shakes you out of stillness with Hanley's jumpy vocals and the intrusion of scratchy guitars. "Step Back" has a country sound with simple acoustic guitars and lively but gentle vocals.

"Aurora Gory Alice" is full of great music. If you don't trust me, then see them for yourselves at Ziggy's on March 2 with Dillon Fence. Thanks to printed lyrics, I found out what Hanley says in "Here & Now".

My sleepless nights are over!

Schwarzenegger makes his action dreams come True

By Jason Schneider
Staff Writer

What would you do if you found out, after fifteen years of marriage, that your spouse was a spy?

That is the situation presented in the action-comedy True Lies. released on video by Twentieth Century Fox. Directed by James Cameron, True Lies stars Arnold Schwarzenegger as Harry Tasker and Jamie Lee Curtis as his wife, Helen.

The story goes something like this: Harry and Helen have been married 15 years and have a 14-year-old daughter, Dana (Eliza Dushku).

Both Helen and Dana believe Harry to be an unexciting computer salesman, but he is really an undercover agent with the federal government's Omega Sector. It is here that Charlton Heston makes a special appearance as Harry's boss, Spencer Trilby.

As the movie opens, the James Bond-esque Harry is seen crashing an elite party at a private estate in Switzerland (his wife and daughter think he is at an electronics convention) in order to obtain some coded files from a computer. His partners in this mission and others are Arthur "Gib" Gibson (Tom Arnold) and Faisil (Grant Heslov).

It is at this party that Harry meets Juno Skinner (Tia Carrere), an art buyer who specialized in Persian artifacts and , unknown to Harry, a member of a nuclear terrorist group called the Crimson Jihad.

Eventually Harry is discovered as being an uninvited guest, and a thrilling chase through the snow-filled woods begins.

He is pursued by armed guards on skis and in snowmobiles as he tries to reach the van where Gib and Faisil have been monitoring him.

The action really begins, though, when Harry discovers that Helen, a humdrum legal secretary, has been receiving mysterious messages from a man called Simon.

Thinking she is having an affair, he puts her under surveillance. When she is eventually "arrested," she has no idea that Harry is behind the whole scheme.

Harry and Gib, their voices disguised, cut a deal with Helen, telling her that if she will go on an undercover mission for them she will serve no prison time.

She accepts, and it is when this phony mission is intercepted by members of the Crimson jihad that events take a dangerous turn.

True Lies contains the usual accoutrements that are that hallmark of a Schwarzenegger action film: gun-toting bad guys, bombs, car chases, hand-to-hand combat and women in danger. Since this movie is billed as an action-comedy, many of the scenes are lightened by humor, such as the whole premise of Harry using spy technology to find out whether or not his wife is being unfaithful.

Other smaller touches of humor are scattered throughout, including a terrified man on a toilet during a hand-to-hand combat scene in a bathroom and the dance that Helen performs in a stranger's hotel room.

The stunts that are performed in this film are incredible. Among the best is the scene in which Harry hangs out of a helicopter to rescue Helen from a runaway limousine that is speeding, out of control, along the Seven Mile Bridge in the Florida Keys.

Another thrilling scene is the one in which Harry maneuvers a Harrier aircraft between high-rise buildings in order to save a hostage the Crimson Jihad has taken. These are destined to become two of the most famous sequences in True Lies.

The special effects are worthy of mention, also. Whether it is the bombing of a bridge or the explosion of a nuclear bomb, True Lies contains a wealth of special effects that serve to heighten the viewer's anticipation and make them move a little closer to the edge of their seat.

Both Schwarzenegger and Curtis give splendid performances as usual, but the real scene-stealer is Tom Arnold.

His intelligent and convincing portrayal of a government agent is both comic and earnest and quite a change from the moronic Arnie character that he played on "Roseanne."

Although True Lies is a little longer than most movies made today (around 2 hours and 20 minutes), it is an exciting, entertaining and funny film that engrosses the viewer and makes the time pass faster than a speeding bullet.

Webb makes himself at home on campus

By Tonya Hollingsworth
Staff Writer

William Webb, the newest addition to the theater faculty, is both in love with his work and determined to contribute part of himself to build a successful program here. Webb graduated with a bachelor's degree in theater with a concentration in performing from Alfred University in New York.

He went on to the North Carolina School of the Arts, where he received his master of fine arts degree in technical direction.

When asked how he became interested in theatrics, Webb relates that he "caught the bug" while taking a technical theatre class in undergraduate school.

As Webb relates the reasons he has become so enamored of theater and technical direction, passion enflames his features.

He says he loves technical direction because it is very hands-on and one is actively participating in the creation process.

Bill Webb lounges around the set of Crimes

His commitment is made apparent by the paint speckling his face as he prepares the set of "Crimes of the Heart" (Feb. 22-25, Empty Space Theater).

Webb enjoys working inside an actual theater, meeting the challenges each structure brings.

He is also driven by the possibilities of live theater. Webb reflects, "There is such spontaneity in live theatrical performance. You never know what is going to happen next."

He feels that because this effort involves such cooperation, it brings people together."

"Theater is a group collaboration to create one piece of art," he says.

Outside of the university, Webb's attention is consumed by both his family and his work as a technical director.

He has worked on such projects as the Melissa Ethridge, Michael Bolton and Nine Inch Nails concerts and always feels the thrill of being part of such a large-scale production, using equipment on the cutting edge of technology.

At home, Webb enjoys time with his wife, who is a child psychologist. They hope to start a family soon.

Webb says he is very happy here and enjoys the friendly atmosphere.

His faculty status on campus allows him more opportunity to teach his knowledge and skill. He feels that a new theater facility is necessary to remove the limitations with which the university's theater program must now deal.

Concerning the students, Webb says, "I hope to build the kind of technical program at High Point University so that the students are able to run the show. I want them to be hungry to work."

This hunger is the element which drives Webb and is what helps him inspire those who have the opportunity to learn from this dedicated man.

HANDICAP DOESN'T KEEP LEARNING ASSISTANCE CENTER DIRECTOR DOWN

Gomez keeps L.A.C. in order

By Lori McBrayer
Staff Writer

Sarah Gomez walks toward her office in the basement of the library. A woman stands up from one of the tables and walks into her path. "Do I know you?" Mrs. Gomez asks. It is Alice Sink, a longtime friend and colleague.

Mrs. Gomez, director of the Learning Assistance Center (L.A.C.), was diagnosed with multifocal choroiditis almost a year ago. It is a rare disease which causes an inflammation of the blood vessel layer of the eye. Doctors have few treatments and no cure.

Mrs. Gomez can see the outline of people, but cannot distinguish features. She knows when someone is near her, but she cannot tell who it is.

She cannot drive. She depends on her husband to make sure her clothes match. She cannot read newspapers or magazines.

Mrs. Gomez is thankful that she has grown children and a husband who has retired.

"If this had happened at a different time in my life, I don't know how in the world I would have coped with it," Mrs. Gomez said.

Although she says that it would be easy to slip into a depression, those who work with her are impressed with the way she is dealing with the disease.

Sarah Gomez

"She tackles things head on," said Barbara Blake, assistant director of the L.A.C. "Even though she was faced with a lot of adversity, she really worked 100 percent on achieving a resolution."

Learning to live with a disability takes a lot of energy and time, but Mrs. Gomez is still devoted to helping others.

"I am trying to find out as much as I can about how I can best function and still serve students," Mrs. Gomez said.

Mrs. Gomez was hired over six years ago by Alice Sink, who was the director of the L.A.C. Mrs. Sink hired her because of her commitment to students.

"She loves people and will work with a student and work and work," Mrs. Sink said. "That just shone through."

Johnna Pettit, a junior elementary education major and an L.A.C. lab assistant, explained, "She is probably one of the most caring people I've ever met. She's always very concerned about the students."

Less than two months after the disease destroyed the central vision in one of her eyes, she had adjusted to daily life. Eight months later, the disease spread to the other eye.

"They did not tell me there is a high percentage that it will go to the other eye," Mrs. Gomez said.

She has a master's degree in developmental education and an education specialist degree in counseling, but she feels she has much to learn about how to adjust to living with her disability.

"Not anything in any of my degrees prepared me for what I'm doing now," she said.

Mrs. Gomez had a steroid implant in November, but she had a reaction which caused an elevation in her blood pressure and gave her bad headaches.

"I wanted to be in a dark room where I could just get some relief," she said.

Mrs. Gomez said she came back to work so soon because she thought it would be helpful to have a routine and because she knew that the students would help her.

"If it weren't for this network of students, I probably would not have felt so inclined to come back, particularly so soon," she said.

Mrs. Gomez is determined not to let a disability affect her quality of life.

"I feel like I have only one life, and I want to make the best of it," she said. "I don't want to give up."

"DONNA"PROVES TO BE MORE THAN A REGULAR SECRETARY

Harper keeps Student Life on the right track

Donna Harper continues to be more than just another friendly face on the High Point campus

By Matthew Johnson
Staff Writer

Donna Harper may be the one reason this campus moves so smoothly, but many do not know who she is. Ms. Harper has been the secretary in the Student Life office for just under five years and a surrogate mother to many students for just as long.

Said Shelly Roth, a Student Life student worker, "Donna adds a little humor and a wonderful smile to all who find themselves waiting in the office. She really cares about students here, and it really shows." In fact, the students feel so comfortable in her presence that they simply refer to her as "Donna."

If one were to take away Donna's smile, she could still stand alone. On any given day she can be found answering the phone, taking a message, typing something at her desk and pulling out a fax at the same time. She is part of a team that houses, disciplines, directs and parents students. In other words, she is an intrinsic part of what keeps the students feeling at home.

There are many students that probably have talked with Donna yet still do not know who she is. When you have questions about cable, you talk to Donna. When you need either a student or teacher's phone number, you're usually talking with Donna. When you're sitting in the Student Life office waiting to speak with either Dean of Students Gart Evans or Assistant Dean Amy Deuterman (and there is always a wait), it's Donna who comforts you and helps the time pass.

Donna Harper

The most important thing about Donna, however, is not how important she is to the infrastructure of this institution but how she conducts her position.

Nowhere in her job description does it call for Donna to get as involved as she does.

"I had been working here part-time when I was offered the job so I knew there was a lot of involvement with the students but I have been overwhelmed at times," she says.

Donna, who grew up an army child moving from place to place, probably became adjusted early on to meeting and dealing with different kinds of people.

Or maybe it's from raising her own 18-year-old son, Jesse, that prepared her to help mother the students.

Said senior Frank Donnelly, "She's so sweet. She always makes me feel comfortable and at home. Actually, it's as if I am home."

For all she does, one would think that her job would become stressful and tiresome. Yet Donna can often be found on campus after work hours, watching a basketball game and interacting with students. Donna insists that she loves her job and looks forward every morning to coming into work.

"I would recommend this job to a friend if she was a good secretary and a person ready for the contact. However, it is the contact with the students and the people that makes it all worthwhile," she says.

Snow skiing in the South?

By Tara Fitz
Staff Writer

Yes, Virginia, there is skiing in the South! Before you spend another uneventful weekend, sitting around playing Sega, get a few friends together and experience "Nighthawk" at Seven Devils. Conveniently nestled between Boone and Blowing Rock in the town of Seven Devils, Hawksnest Ski Resort offers the only late-night ski package that combines good conditions without the crowd.

A mere 120-mile drive westward will bring you to the self-sufficient, wintry village that boasts its own town hall and post office.

A three-mile winding road is the lifeline connecting Seven Devils to the rest of civilization. Hawksnest offers good skiing in a smaller, more personal atmosphere. There are three lifts and about 10 trails that offer something for everyone.

On Friday and Saturday nights you can ski from 6 p.m. until 2 a.m. Lift tickets are $20 and rentals $12.

Some northerners may scoff at the idea of southern skiing, envisioning a beginner hill with a rope-tow as the only trail. These people will be pleasantly surprised to find a winter wonderland less than two hours away.

Stewart McGlaughlin, an alumnus of High Point University and Delta Sigma Phi, says, "I am pretty impressed with what North Carolina has to offer." He adds, "There aren't as many trails as up north, but it's worth checking out."

McGlaughlin and some of his Sig alumni brothers have skied "Nighthawk" and recommend the two hour trek to the slopes.

English Professor Ed Piacentino began skiing last year. "I lived in Boone during the late sixties, and like many others, was apprehensive about it (skiing) because I might break a leg or something. I was in grad school at Appalachian and couldn't afford to miss class if I got hurt," he says.

Piacentino enjoys outdoor sports and finds the ski experience exhilarating.

He says, "I have sailed most of my life and find that skiing gives me a similar sense of freedom."

For those of you who have never tried it, it's never too late. A word of advice though: take a lesson from a professional, not a friend. Piacentino and McGlaughlin both recommend a lesson or two your first time out. McGlaughlin says, "A professional is trained to teach you all of the ins and outs, as well as safety measures."

He adds with a grin, "It only costs about $20 for a lesson that could save you from a bundle of hospital bills."

There are two or three resorts in the Boone area, and some in West Virginia that are about a two to three hour drive also. Local advice and information can be obtained from Edelweiss Ski Haus in Greensboro (852-3775). It has sales, rentals and up-to-date ski reports for the mid-Atlantic area.

FRESHMAN EARNS RESPECTABILITY ON CAMPUS

Hooker does good job

By Ruth Ann Milam
Staff Writer

"Hi, I'm Carol!" No one who was here during New Student Orientation could escape that friendly voice and infectious smile. Carol Hooker had arrived!

Just in case someone was able to miss her, Carol was quick to remedy that situation. "Elect a HOOKER... for freshman class president" signs could be seen all over campus.

She lost the election, but that hasn't slowed her a step.

She has become an active member of the Student Government Association and the Student Activities Board, not to mention holding elected positions in Baptist Student Union, the Odyssey Club and the Honors Student Council.

She is also a member of Alpha Delta Theta, the Christian Service Sorority, works in the Indigo Club (game room) and is actively involved with Young Life of High Point. In between all of this, she has been able to maintain above a 3.8 GPA in her double major of sociology/pre-med.

"Wherever I am, I want to be involved. I can't just be a spectator. I didn't want to be just a student of HPU, I wanted to be a member of it," said Hooker.

Sue Gessner, a sophomore majoring in English and communications, said, "I interviewed her (for Presidential Scholars), so I knew she was an active person. I was kind of worried because she just jumped right in. I was worried that she'd burn out." Carol hasn't burned out, however, despite the fact that she was diagnosed with epilepsy this past summer, and in October she discovered that she has multiple sclerosis (MS).

She has also been dealing with asthma for four years. In the face of what others would see as roadblocks, Carol smiles and overcomes.

Carol describes what motivates her by saying, "My faith (in God) and knowing that there is a purpose in all of it.

I know that I'm going to see something tremendous come of it--whether in my own life or in my helping someone else go through something similar--that's what keeps me going." Katherine Hill, director of student activities, has worked with Carol on the Student Activities Board and with the Indigo Club.

She says that Carol is an inspiration to her: "Anyone can get involved like Carol, but with her health problems she has to make sacrifices that others wouldn't be willing to make.

It's not easy for her, she has to make choices."

Brian Ersalesi, a freshman theater/English double major, says that Carol has never lost the ability to laugh. "What would seem like an incredible setback she takes with a smile and encourages others with it. She cares so much about people."

In addition to her myriad of other activities, Carol is now involved in recruiting people to walk and collect donations for the annual MS Walk in High Point.

The money raised will be used to fund research to find preventive measures, and ultimately, a cure for multiple sclerosis.

Although Carol seems like a superwoman, Sue Gessner says, "She's human, too. She does put everything on the back burner and chill for a while."

Carol Hooker is a fighter who cares about others. She faces each new thing that comes her way, whether it is good or bad, with a smile and a positive attitude.

Hill says, "I'd clone her if I could because we need people like her who really care about what's going on."

SPRING SPORTS PREVIEW

Golf team ranked fourth in NAIA pre-season poll

By Kevin Fielder
Staff writer

The golf season is just around the corner for the Panthers, who are looking very strong and ready to defend their 4th-place NAIA ranking.

This year, the team shows signs of being one of the best ever. Returning are seniors Grant Thomson and Allen McGee, and sophomores Tony Romani, David Faulkner and Adam Parson.

New to the team are junior transfers Luke Mongrain and Charles Davis. Mongrain transferred from Midland College in Texas, while Davis comes from the College of the Redwoods in California.

"This is going to be a fantastic year for the Panthers," Davis said. "I expect we'll win ninety percent of the tournaments we enter. That may sound cocky, but I think we're just that good."

The Panthers are without last year's Carolinas Conference champion Donny Franks who is rehabilitating a knee injury but should return next season.

High Point begins the season March 4-5 at The Battle of the Carolinas in Holden Beach.

Since High Point is affiliated with both the NAIA and NCAA Div. II, the Panthers have a shot at claiming both titles.

"We'll know where we stand with this new affiliation with Div. II (after the first tournament)," Coach Dee Sasser said.

"We'll have to compete well against the Div. II teams, but we've beatem a lot of them before, so we should be OK," Thomson said.

Faulkner, unintimidated by the new competition, said "All we have to do is be at our peaks at the nationals, and we'll be OK."

The seven golfers are ready to end a long off-season filled with practice and qualifying tournaments. As Sasser says, the next step is to begin playing.

"We're just ready to play," he said. "They're tired of messing around. They're ready to go to some tournaments."

Thomson's long road to recognition at High Point took many turns along the way

By Nicole Thompson
Special to the Chronicle

When 11-year-old Grant Thomson first swung a golf club with his dad in Glasgow, Scotland, he never knew that he would become a first-team NAIA All-American at High Point University.

Thomson, a senior marketing-management major, came to America after winning many men's tournaments and playing for Scotland against nations like Italy and England.

He went to junior college in Midland, Tex. and won a national championship, playing No. 1 on his team.

Panther teammate Luke Mongrain, who saw Thomson play at Midland, says: "Grant was known to have a good short game and to win almost every time."

After his junior college experience, Thomson went to Southeastern Louisiana where he had a falling-out with the golf coach after only two weeks.

Thomson says he wasn't given everything that he was promised when he was recruited by Southeastern. The school started reneging on its contract, according to Thomson, and it was going to make him pay for his next semester after he had been promised free tuition.

He decided to go to a small NAIA school which fulfilled its promises. He transferred to High Point in the fall of 1993.

After winning numerous tournaments, he was ranked third in the nation, and he led last year's team to an eighth-place ranking in the NAIA.

Teammate Tony Romani says, "Grant has become the base of the team. He knows what he wants to do and he goes out and does it."

Among Thomson's credentials is the rare achievement of being an academic and a golf All-American. He claims that he has learned to manage his time well, making a high GPA and a low golf score.

He needs his degree to back him up in case all his golf experience doesn't steer him in the right direction.

Coach Dee Sasser is optimistic about Thomson's future. "Grant can go as far as Grant wants to go," he says. "He's real self-motivated."

Thomson is already affiliated with two manufacturers to sponsor his golfing career, but this just isn't enough.

After he graduates this May, Grant plans to head home to Scotland, the land of golf, to play in a couple of tournaments to get more sponsors. From there, he plans to go to Australia or Arizona and become a pro golfer.

Four starters return to men's tennis team

From staff reports

Third-year coach Jerry Tertzagian returns five players, four of whom were starters.

Senior Donald Marriott and Finnish transfer Pekka Pohjamo should play at the top two spots while Kalle Kuusisto of Finland and Andrew Awai of Trinidad will play at the three and four slots, respectively. Keith Corbett, Matt Allen, Giac Tran and Matt Laslo will battle for the five and six spots.

The three doubles teams will pair players No. 1 - 2, 3 - 4, and 5 - 6.

"Right now, we're working it out," Tertzagian said about his lineup. "There's eight guys that are pretty close. We're having some challenge matches."

The off-season loss of Todd Hooper, who would have played No. 1, takes away from the team's chance of winning the Carolinas Conference.

"It's going to be a strong conference this year," Tertzagian said. "Barton is head and shoulders above everybody else."

High Point travels to Queens Friday for its first match and returns home Tuesday to play Wingate.

Johansson's move from Sweden reaps benefits

By April Sides
Special to the Chronicle

Asa Johansson is 2,000 miles from home, but she's found a new home on the tennis courts of High Point University.

This 20-year-old junior from Gothemburg, Sweden is not, however, a newcomer to tennis. Her move to the U.S. has given her more of an opportunity to perfect this talent.

With her whip-like serve and relentless determination, you would think Asa was born with a tennis racquet in her hand. Her tennis career actually began at the age of 12, when her dad gave her a tennis racquet for her birthday.

"When I started playing tennis (in 1985) was when it started getting really big in Sweden," Johannson explained.

Still, she only played, at most, once a week until she came to to the U.S. because it is much more expensive to play in Sweden. Court fees there soar as high as $60.

"Unless you're really good, it's really expensive to get a coach," she said. "And everybody that plays is really good so it's hard to become someone over there. There's a lot of competition."

Asa Johanssen

Asa hasn't found any trouble becoming competitive in the states. She came to the states during her junior year of high school in 1990 when her father's company, Volvo, transferred him.

At first, she had trouble speaking English, but said that everyone was so nice to her that she picked up on it quickly. In the two years that she played tennis for Southwest Guilford, she only lost three matches.

It was in high school that she first played doubles with Heather Haberfield, now her doubles partner at High Point. The two share many tennis memories.

The brightest moment came when they defeated rival Southeast Guilford their senior year in doubles. "It was like we won the Olympics or something," Haberfield said.

Her friendship with Heather, coupled with a tennis scholarship are the two key factors that brought Johannson to this campus. She has improved in the time she has spent playing tennis here.

Johannson has played two-and-a-half semesters at No. 1 and one semester of her freshman year at No. 2. She finished second in the conference her freshman year and third her sophomore year.

"She's very determined out on the court, and she refuses to lose," Haberfield said.

"She's very personable, a good sport and mentally tough on the court," teammate Christina Miller said. "She's just a good asset to the team."

Asa's parents will be returning to Sweden in June, but Asa thinkds she will remain here. The tennis team will definitely benefit from this decision.

New women's coach: 'we'll be competitive'

By Keith Corbett
Staff writer

The women's tennis team's future looks bright with a new coach at the helm leading the way. First year head coach Jerry Tertzagian has a quite optimistic but realistic view.

"We hope to be competitive," said Tertzagian. "Our kids are working hard. I don't know what the competition is going to be like for the girls."

The Panthers open the season at home Monday against conference rival Lees-McRae.

Spearheading the attack and playing No. 1 will be junior Asa Johansson. No. 2 Heather Haberfield will pair up with Johansson to form the top doubles team.

The No. 3 player, Cristina Miller, will team with No. 4 Danielle Gibeck who moves up a spot from last year's roster due to the absence of junior Jennifer Terp.

Filling Terp's shoes and playing sixth will be walk-on Rebekah Lee. Lee will join No. 5 player Julie Fair on the No. 3 doubles spot as this year's team makes an attempt to improve on last year's fourth place Carolinas Conference finish.

Track team: quality over quantity

By Sonny Gann
Staff writer

Track coach Bob Davidson isn't worried about the quality of athletes on his track team. He knows he has some athletes who will do great things.

What worries Davidson is the quantity of athletes he has. Due to graduation, ineligibility, and people leaving the team, an already small squad has become even smaller.

Disntance runners Jeff Goddard and Brian Donaruma and high-jumper Gil Cooper have been ruled ineligible. Sprinter Wesley Wright is no longer with the team. Cross-country superstar Robert McCulloach has moved back to Scotland.

Goddard will be the biggest loss. He finished first in the 1500 meters and second in the 800 meters in the championship meet last year. Without Wright, Davidson sees the relay teams as a question mark.

"Goddard would of had a big year," Davidson said. Davidson knows that the people he has will excel.

Senior Sean Carter returns in the 3000 steeplechase and the 5000. Carter won the 3000 steeplechase at the championship meet last year.

Senior Sean Jones is a sprinter and Davidson says if he stays healthy he should contribute. Whitaker Augier is the other senior on the team. Augier finished second in discus and shotput at last year's state championship meet.

"He could prove to be the top gun in small college competition in three events," Coach Davidson said. "He has the potential to be the top performer in the long jump, triple jump, and the javelin."

Other returners are Mike Dyess in the 1500, Shea Goins in the shot and discus, Mike Jacobs in the steeplechase, Robert Martin in the high jump, and Adil Diggs returns to the hurdles after a year's absence. Diggs finished second in the 55-meter high hurdles in the VMI indoor meet last month.

Junior college transfer Tony Pampa should help in the 400 meters and both relay events. Davidson said Pampa has the potential to be "outstanding". Daniel Doub joins the teams in the 800 meter and mile relay. Davidson said Doub was "looking promising." New-

Men's basketball anticipates third-place CC ranking

By Sonny Gann
Staff writer

After starting the conference 1-3, the men's basketball team has won six of its last eight games to share third place with Mt. Olive heading into the last week of the season.

At 7-5 in the Carolinas Conference, 16-7 overall, the Panthers control their own destiny in the standings with the remaining home games in the Millis Center. Saturday, High Point hosts the Trojans of Mt. Olive in the final regular-season game.

"We win, and we finish in third place," Steele said. "You don't want to get into any tiebrakers. The top four teams host first round games next Thursday."

The Panthers would rather host a game than travel. In the coference, High Point has only lost one game at home, but on the road the Panthers are 3-4. Still, senior Forward Robert Martin likes the teams chances in the CC tournament next Thursday.

"Pfeiffer is the team to beat," Martin said. "We haven't beat them, but if we pl.ay good defense we can. I think we will be motivated for the tournament. If we play hard we can win it."

Martin is leading the team in scoring with a 23.1 points-per-gameaverage. Pete Wyatt has picked up his scoring and inside play of late and is averaging 14.8 points. Brett Speight and Demetrius Alexander have helped on the inside, averaging 14.4 and 8.1 points per game, respectively.

Mike Farrell's outside shooting has helped open up the inside for all the big men. Danny Watson and Telly Bernard have 97 and 75 assists on the year, respectively.

"Watson runs the show and Telly is gaining confidence every game," Steele said.

The Panthers suffered a blow following the Pfeiffer game on February 11. Senior Toby Brown, averaging 14.7 points per game, was dismissed from the team for personal reasons between he and Coach Steele. Brown's leadership and defense will be missed.

Following a loss at Coker Jan. 21, the Panthers rattled off wins at Belmont Abbey, St. Andrews, and Mt. Olive. High Point then returned home and beat Barton in overtime, 91-82. The Panthers then suffered setbacks at Lees McRae and Pfeiffer before returning home last week and notching an impressive win over Coker 77-64. Saturday, the Panthers held off Belmont Abbey at home 74-71.

"We are getting better," Steele said. "Starting next Thursday, four teams advance and four teams hang it up (in the conference tournament). We got to be ready to play."

Reasons for Brown's dismissal from team remain a mystery

Conflicting accounts exist between ex-player and coach

By Rob Humphreys
Assistant Editor

Toby Brown can no longer play the sport he loves for High Point University.

Men's basketball coach Jerry Steele dismissed Brown from the team Feb. 13, two days after Brown and a heckling Pfeiffer fan exchanged words during a timeout in High Point's 92-86 loss in Meisenheimer.

"At this stage of the year, everybody goes through frustration, whether you're winning or losing," Steele said. "He and I talked. My comments will be to him as an individual."

To Brown, the punishment seems extreme for telling the fan to "shut up and get a haircut."

"I've still got a lot of respect for Coach Steele, and I've got to respect his decision as a head coach," said Brown, a versatile senior who was averaging 14.7 points per game.

"When I thought about it, maybe I needed to be punished, but how harshly I don't know. That's the biq question."

The only explanation Steele would offer for his decision was Brown's "frustration" at this stage of the season. But Brown disagrees.

"I don't want the public to think I had any frustration with the team or Coach," Brown said. "I'm never tired or frustrated with playing basketball. I miss playing, and it hurts to see them play. I'm still going to come out and holler for my boys."

Brown said that Steele never gave him a warning during the season or had any discussion with him concerning his "frustration."

"I don't understand it that much," he said. "I just know what happened and how I feel. It could be miscommunication or a number of things. I can't figure it out.

FILE PHOTO

Toby Brown

"If I'm getting punished for what I did at the Pfeiffer game, I apologize. I can't wait for this to get over with so I can get on with my life."

According to Brown, the head coach at Barton told Steele that Brown said he was "tired of playing for this SOB." Steele said the Barton coach never spoke those words. He would not disclose a list of reasons for Brown's punishment.

For Brown, a reserved man who seldom shows any emotion on or off the court, dealing with this situation has been hard, especially since he serves as a role model to many children.

"I had kids come up to me tonight and ask me why I'm not playing," he said during the Panthers' 74-71 home victory over Belmont Abbey. "Do you know how much that hurts?"

comer Marcus Ousley should help in the discus and the shot put.

Davidson would like to see a sixth straight title in the Francis Marion Invitational. He feels that individual performances may be just as important this year as the total team points.

"We are about five people short," Davidson said. "Those five could really contribute. We are looking at focusing on individual accomplishment.

"Hopefully, looking at that from a team stand point will help us at the championship."

Bike for Breath rolls into third year

Memory of Laury Lynch remains focal point of Saturday's festivities

By Brenda Egedy
Special to the Chronicle

On Oct. 10, 1992, life ended all too soon for an extraordinary young woman.

Laury Lynch's life and sudden death so deeply affected her friends and peers that they still participate in an annual event of remembrance and celebration three years later.

Laury Lynch

Junior Laury Ann Lynch, 20, passed away as a result of an acute asthma attack.

Saturday's Bike-for-Breath, the fundraiser created by university students, raises money for the Asthma and Allergy Foundation of America and contributes to an educational scholarship fund in the memory of Lynch.

Laury suffered from asthma all her life. The night before her death, she had an asthma attack too difficult for her body to overcome. Laury remained on life support overnight, and the following day her doctors knew there was nothing more they could do to save her.

A chapel service was held in her honor for students and faculty. The chapel was overflowing with her sorority sisters, friends, family and professors who all knew and loved her. Laury had touched the lives of all who knew her.

She was an elementary education major and a sister in the Kappa Delta sorority.

"Laury was very caring and giving. She was always around to make you smile," said Carlin Camp, a sorority sister. "She was the kind of girl who would do anything for anybody."

Lynch's roommate and sorority sister, Jennifer Soos, was one of the students involved in the creation of Bike-for-Breath.

"The only thing left now is to keep her memory alive, remembering her: her beautiful smile, her caring and kind personality, her spunky and vivacious outlook on life, and most of all, her warm and gentle heart," wrote Soos following Lynch's funeral.

Because of Laury's death, the stunned

AN ACT OF BRAVERY IS REWARDED

Lucas honored for WWII heroics

HPC alum Jack Lucas saved American lives in Iwo Jima by jumping on two grenades.

By Stephen B. Steffek
Editor

Only one thing has remained the same for High Point College alum Jack Lucas since he went off to fight in World War II 52 years ago, at the age of 14. He still lives with his mother.

Lucas, a graduate of the class of 1956, came to High Point on March 17 to be honored by the brothers of Pi Kappa Alpha. He holds the honor of being the youngest man to receive the Congressional Medal of Honor since the Civil War. Under 200 men living hold the honor of having earned the Medal of Honor.

Lucas fought at Iwo Jima and saved the lives of some of his fellow Marines by throwing himself on two grenades. He suffered considerable injury and was given the Medal of Honor at the age of 16 by President Harry Truman.

Lucas' military saga began when he was 14. He had a strong desire to fight the Japanese but wouldn't legally be able to do so until he was 17. In order to get into the Marines, Lucas lied about his age and forged parental consent papers, allowing him to fight.

After boot camp, Lucas went to Pearl Harbor. He stowed away on the U.S.S Duel while at Pearl Harbor when he learned that the ship was going to a venue of battle.

Coincidentally, it was the ship that his first cousin was on. Lucas had been listening to Tokyo Rose (the Japanese propagandist) on the radio and gotten so angry that he wanted to "go over and kill as many of them (Japanese) as possible."

He was able to remain stowed away on the ship, undetected from Jan. 10 to Feb. 19, 1945 by figuring out schemes to eat and sleep without being caught.

When he reached Iwo Jima, Lucas was thrown into heavy fighting. He and his group of four men had a surprise with 11 Japanese soldiers in a trench.

The groups were about four feet apart. After some gunfire, Lucas' gun locked up and he noticed two grenades on the ground. After warning his comrades, he threw himself over the grenades to contain the explosion.

Rockin' renditions earn "Hat Band" top honors at talent show

A review of HPU's talent showcase

By Stephen B. Steffek
Editor

When the dust had settled, the "Hat Band" found itself to be the winners of the Third Annual High Point University Talent Show.

On Friday night, a group of excellent talents competed for the first prize amount of $50. The show featured a variety of different talents, showcasing several musical acts and a stand up comedy act. Masters of Ceremony Katherine Hill and Dr. Charles Warde kept the audience laughing between acts with prizes and comedic banter.

Opening the show was a very strong performance from freshman Nick Atkins who played guitar and harmonica. He opened with a song and then went into a session of bluegrass picking.

In my opinion, he was one of the better acts of the night. Atkins got the crowd going and really kicked the night off with a bang.

Ian Lohr and Wellington DeSouza, both sophomores, kept the crowd going with a piano / acoustic guitar act. Lohr sang and played guitar while a very talented DeSouza ran through the piano keys. They were very good.

Freshman Brandon Woosley came out next with a stand-up comedy act. Woosley had several very good jokes, but needed to get his delivery down just a little bit better.

Paul Driscoll, a sophomore, hit the stage next with a guitar. He performed his rendition of an old John Prine song called "Angel of Montgomery." He was very good and earned second place, winning $40.

Lakiesha Pate and Melanie Kellam earned the third place prize of $30 with their vocal R&B tune. The duet was very good with Kellam on primary vocals and Pate as a backup singer.

The "Hat Band" came out

REBUTTALS TO FRED JORDAN

Fred: Wake up from your 'dream' and smell reality

To the editor:

In reference to Fred Jordan's "Affirmative Action=Reverse Discrimination" (Campus Chronicle, Feb. 23), it seems that yet another opponent of affirmative action is missing the point. What did the "dream" that Martin Luther King Jr., spoke of in Washington mean? To quote Dr. King from his August, 1963, speech: "I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed: 'We hold these truths to be self-evident; that all men are created equal.'"

This dream can never be realized if everyone (black or white) continues to bicker and complain about how tough it is to make it in today's society. Didn't your mother ever tell you not to be a tattletale or when you fell down and scratched your knee, to brush yourself off and keep playing the game? I bet you forgot, didn't you?

By the way, I know a whole bunch of lazy white people who "take part in the manipulation of children to gain profit from the welfare system," too. I have to agree with Jordan, however, in that there must be something done to the welfare system.

Reformation seems more practical than doing away with it altogether. Hiring practices must be reformed also. Quotas should be eliminated and the best "person" should get the job. Of course, this is not always true. Unfortunately, Jordan is unable to convey his point in a harmonious, focused manner. Categorizing all African-Americans and saying that "they" have disgraced the memories of all martyrs is no better than calling all Southerners bigots. His opinions are truly radical. It's easy to point fingers at people when you do not know what the situation is.

We must address each issue separately and refrain from passing judgement without all the facts. It is said that those who point fingers are unable to look at themselves and determine their own flaws. It scares me to think that someone from this generation is so closed-minded. It seems society has moved two steps forward and one step back since that 1963 speech.

I'm not sure just what Jordan's intentions are. His insinuations continuously bash blacks and put white males in the victim's corner. "Blacks have disgraced..., 26 black students were admitted to U.C. ..., jails are overcrowded because of minorities (blacks), " and to top it off, he has the audacity to say "I'm not trying to say that an African-American should be discriminated against."

What are you saying, Fred? This editorial column remains unfocused and poorly written You say: "I have a dream. It is a wife and kids and a station wagon. It will be playing church-league softball and going to PTA covered-dish suppers. It will be lazy summer days spent marching the streets of Birmingham, to make our country free."

Once your feet hit the pavement of the real world, I don't think your lazy summer days will be so lazy.

They will be spent huffing and puffing to keep up with the rest of us in the rat-race of what is otherwise known as "real life." We're all entitled to our opinions, but carefully evaluate what you're saying before you open your mouth. Freedom of speech is detrimental to all of us when the privilege is abused.

I am disappointed in the Chronicle for printing such "white trash." If I were a prospective student or faculty member, I would think twice about HPU, even if the "fine print" indicates the opinions expressed are not those of the University's. Isn't "the University" represented by the student body? Without the students there would be no university. Fred Jordan, do yourself a favor: wake up from your "dream" and smell reality.

Disappointed-White-Irish-German-Scotch-Greek-Union-American

Jordan mocks what he doesn't understand

To the editor:

Poor, poor Fred. How rough he has it to be a white male these days. He is so distraught with reverse discrimination that he has become blind.

Fred has labeled and judged people he disagrees with now; yet his statements have been short of brilliant, if anything at all. He bases his beliefs on lack of truth rather than substantiated facts. It's simply the old cliche, "We mock what we don't understand."

For the record, I do not believe in affirmative action, either, but to think that Martin Luther King Jr.'s dream has died is absurd.

I would like to know the last time Mr. Jordan actually stopped to take a look around. King's dream has not died; it simply needs to be applied to a different world.

In today's world it's hard to be of Caucasian descent and be employed. Even with a college degree in hand, it's not the same world it used to be. Black and Hispanic graduates face a 26 percent unemployment rate. So to say that they are on an equal level and do not need help to compete is ridiculous.

You say that King's dream is being manipulated by the use of children to gain profit from welfare.

Well, I don't know where you've been, but minorities are not the only ones on welfare. Plus I don't know what welfare or gang violence has to do with affirmative action (ranting maybe?).

Anyway, before I get to ranting myself, I would like to make my point. It is not discriminatory towards white males for others to stand up and want equality. If you think minorities are fairly and equally represented in the workplace, then you are wrong.

Women , for example, whether white or whatever, make less than men even if they are better qualified: this is a fact. So if women yell a little and say it's not fair the way men get treated compared to them, it's not reverse discrimination; it's believing in King's dream of equality.

Oh and by the way, I too thought it strange to choose Cathy Lee Gifford to sing the national anthem at the Super Bowl, but if you actually listened to her, you, like many others, found out that she was an excellent vocalist and did a fine job.

Sincerely,
Matthew Johnson

Car trouble makes for "one of those days"

By Jason Schneider
Staff Writer

Have you ever had one of those days?

You know the kind I'm talking about. One of those days when absolutely nothing goes right, no matter how hard you try.

Last Thursday was one of those days for me, but it didn't really begin until around 4 p.m.

I was on my way home and had one stop to make, an errand for my mother. After completing it, I returned to my car (a Pontiac I just got in October) and it would not start. It just made a pathetic clicking noise.

After banging my head against the steering wheel for a while, I went back inside from whence I came and asked to use the telephone. The tow truck from Roadside Assistance would be at least 30 minutes coming, so the woman inside called her friend, who came over and jump-started my car.

With the car running in the driveway, I called the dealership and told them what had happened and that I was on my way (a 30-minute drive, I might add).

At the dealership, the service manager took one trial crank and said my car needed a new starter. A rental car was brought over and my car was fixed by 2 p.m. the next day.

That's not such bad luck, you might say. A rather happy ending, even. Well, listen to this. That was not the first time I've had trouble with a new car.

Just last October, I drove my two-year old Plymouth Laser to Wal-Mart on North Main, and when I got back in it to head home, it died. I don't mean it wouldn't start. I mean no radio, no automatic seatbelt, no anything. I couldn't even use my car phone to call someone because there was no power anywhere.

I used a pay phone to call my dad, who works in High Point, and he picked me up and took me back to his office where I called the dealership. They brought the tow truck and gave me a rental car. After it was "fixed," I had to take it back twice to have more adjustments made before I traded it in.

But even before that, one month after I got the car, a valve dropped through a piston one morning and the car spent a month at the dealership while I drove a rented Dodge Dynasty and waited for parts to come in from California and Japan.

So you see, I have had plenty of those days, and they usually revolve around cars (and I haven't even mentioned the time I was bringing my Olds Cutlass home after having the carburetor adjusted and the transmission fell out).

I often wonder if I wouldn't be better off with a horse and buggy, like the Amish.

I'll bet they never have to jump start a horse.

Car trouble makes for "one of those days"

By Jason Schneider
Staff Writer

Have you ever had one of those days?

You know the kind I'm talking about. One of those days when absolutely nothing goes right, or [illegible] you by.

Last Thursday was one of those days for me, but it didn't really begin until about 4 p.m.

I was on my way home and had one stop to [illegible] the day [illegible]. After [illegible] it, I brought [illegible] Pontiac I put [illegible] and it would not start. It just made a pathetic [illegible] noise.

After banging my head against the steering wheel [illegible], I went back inside [illegible] where I came and asked to use the telephone. [illegible] would be at least 30 minutes coming, so the woman inside called her friend, who came over and jump started my car.

With the car running in the driveway, I called the dealership and told them what had happened and that I was on my way (a 30-minute drive, I might add).

At the dealership, the [illegible] manager took one look and [illegible] new battery. [illegible] brought over and my car was fixed by 5 p.m. that day.

That's not that bad [illegible], you might say. [illegible] Wait. [illegible] That was not the [illegible] trouble [illegible].

But until Sunday [illegible] drove my five-year-old Plymouth Laser to Wal-Mart on North Main, and when I got back in it to come home, it died. I don't mean it wouldn't start. I mean no radio, no automatic seatbelt, no anything. I couldn't [illegible].

I made a [illegible] and [illegible] who works in High Point, and he picked me up and took me back to the [illegible]. I called the dealership. They brought the tow truck and [illegible]. After [illegible] "Brad, I [illegible]" I stated [illegible].

[illegible] before [illegible] a valve dropped through a piston [illegible] and the car spent a month at the dealership while I drove a [illegible] Dodge Dynasty and waited for parts to come [illegible].

So you see, I have had plenty of those days, and [illegible].

I think [illegible] buggy like the Amish.

Alpha Gamma Delta ΓΗ Chapter

The sisters of Alpha Gamma Delta hope everyone had a great spring break. We would like to congratulate all the newly initiated sisters of Kappa Delta and Phi Mu. Rose ball will be held at Market Square on April 1. We're definitely planning to have a great time! We're planning to assist with the Easter Egg Project in April.

Delta Sigma Phi ΔZ Chapter

We officially have our house back!

The Paddle Dance was held on March 11 and everyone had a great time. The Sailors Ball will be held on April 7-9 in Myrtle Beach. There are a lot of alumni planning to attend.

We almost made it to the semi-finals in the basketball tournament. Thanks to all of our supporters!

We are having car washes all weekend every weekend. Stop by and get your car washed.

Have a happy Easter!

Kappa Delta ΓΓ Chapter

The sisters of Kappa Delta have been very busy this past month. First, we would like to say congratulations to all of our new sisters: Michelle Anastasio, Shelli Crouse, Heather Doerr, Becca Dolle, Nicole Elswick, Koren Fox, Laura Harris, Sara Mateer, Jen Parietti, Julie Scott and Nikki Thompson. We love you all.

Also, March 18, we had our annual Shamrock project whose proceeds go to the prevention of child abuse. This year it was a luncheon and fashion show at Market Square. It was a huge success. Thanks to Carrie Coulter and Cristina Miller for all of your hard work.

Gamma Gamma Chapter celebrated its 40th anniversary March 24-26 at Market Square Towers. At the formal dinner on Saturday, the following awards were given to outstanding sisters: Carrie Coulter, Past President's Award; Cristina Miller, Council Award; Alisa Palmer, Sister of the Year; Reagan Chapman, Intramural Award; Pam Wilcox, Spirit Award; Irene Apgar, White Rose Award; and Heather Doerr, Pledge of the Year. Pam Wilcox and Jennifer Fisher were also recognized as Sister of the Month for January and February. And special thanks to Irene Apgar for her time and effort. You did a great job, we really appreciate it!

The sisters would also like to congratulate the new sisters of Phi Mu and we hope to see everyone at Bike for Breath on April 1.

Pi Kappa Alpha ΔΩ Chapter

Pi Kappa Alpha celebrated its annual Dreamgirl social event the weekend of March 17. The event was held high honor this year as International President F. Anderson Morse was in attendance. Morse spoke at the awards ceremony, and it stayed throughout the evening. Morse is the first president of a Greek organization to visit High Point University.

Also in attendance was Jack Lucas. Lucas, a High Point graduate of 1956, was honored by Morse and the entire brotherhood. He is one of only two Pikes to receive the Congressional medal of honor, the highest award given by the United States.

Later in the evening, Nicolle Terry was crowned as this year's Dreamgirl. The entire brotherhood would like to congratulate Nicolle, as well as the entire Dreamgirl court.

The basketball team lost a close game in the first round of the playoffs. After trailing by more than 12 points, the team came back to force overtime. Congratulations on a great season.

In the coming weeks, it will be time for Bike for Breath. Pi Kappa Alpha is proud to participate fully in the event. Keith Anderson, one of the coordiantors of the event, is working hard to make the event successful once again this year. Pike encourages everyone to make a pledge and support the fight against asthma.

Zeta Tau Alpha ΔΓ Chapter

Welcome back from Spring Break. We hope everyone had a safe and relaxing week. The sisters of Zeta Tau Alpha have been very busy this month.

Our chapter sponsored state day at Kepley's Barn. State day involves every Zeta Tau Alpha chapter in the state of North Carolina. We received four awards which include: achieving and maintaining maximum chapter size, greatest scholastic improvement, outstanding service and recognition for being a major donor for our foundation.

April 1 we will be starting our "Don't be a fool" campaign for our philanthropy. April is national breast cancer awareness month.

We recently celebrated our 100th Link Ball. Mike Tuttle was crowned our Zeta sweetheart. David Honeycutt, Chile Gomez, Matt Sides and Keith Anderson were also on the court.

We would also like to congratulate the sisters of Kappa Delta on their new sisters and hope they have a successful Bike for Breath.

Lambda Chi Alpha IΦZ Chapter

The Iota Phi Zeta chapter of Lambda Chi Alpha will be in Myrtle Beach this weekend for White Rose 1995.

As well, we will be participating in an Easter egg hunt for elementary students at Parkview and Northwood schools. We will also be helping out with the Special Olympics.

Sunday we installed our new officers: Keith Corbett, President; Andy Belk, Vice President; Jason Ulsch, Secretary; Kyle Wade, Treasurer; Dave Penna, Risk Manager; Will Nagy, Social Chairman; Dean Preston, Rush Chairman; Mike Goldspiel, Alumni Correspondence; Billy Wilkinson, Ritualist; Trey Scott, Scholastic Chairman; and Ryan Pugh, Fraternity Educator. Congratulations to all of them!

Have a Happy Easter!

Phi Mu ΓZ Chapter

The sisters of Phi Mu have had a very busy month. On March 1, we initiated 12 new sisters. Congratulations to Amanda Brown, Denise Boyd, Laurie Campos, Stephanie DeLamater, Wendy Delling, Carey Maloney, Stephanie Ogilbee, Jackie Reaves, Mary Beth Reichart, Heather Schwarz, Athena Scott and Cindy Shugar.

Our annual Carnation Ball was held March 25, 1995. Congratulations to this year's sweetheart, James Eisenbrey. Also congratulations to Angie Springstead for being voted Sister of the Year by the sisters and the phis and to Jeanine Danzi for being voted Sister of the Year by the sisters. Congratulations to Jackie Reaves, who was voted Phi of the Year by the sisters, and Mary Beth Reichart, voted Phi of the Year by the Phi class.

Congratulations to our new officers: Megan Keenan, President; Barbara Porrello, Vice President; Carey Maloney, Recording Secretary; Shannon Touchton, Treasurer; Wendy Delling, Membership; Denise Boyd, Phi Director; Tara Kaheny, Corresponding Secretary; and Amanda Brown, Panhellenic.

Dreamgirl held in high honor

By Dan Smith
Staff Writer

The Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity held its annual Dreamgirl semi-formal in Winston-Salem the weekend of March 17. The event held special honor this year as several distinguished members of the fraternity were on hand.

International president F. Anderson Morse attended the event. Morse, the highest ranking officer in the fraternity, is the first president of any Greek organization to visit High Point University.

"Pi Kappa Alpha is the first Greek organization to have an international president visit a High Point chapter," says Kevin Kotec, Delta Omega President. "This makes us stand out in the eyes of the University; both with students and the administration."

Also in attendance at the weekend-long event was Jack Lucas. Lucas, a 1956 graduate of High Point University, was honored by Morse and the entire brotherhood. He is one of only two Pikes to receive the Congressional medal of honor, the highest commendation of the United States government.

While he was only 17 years old, Lucas threw himself on live grenades. The act saved the lives of many men, as well as furthering the aims of the United States military. Lucas is the youngest man ever to receive the award.

The weekend also helped demonstrate good faith on behalf of student and administrator. Gart Evans and John Lefler attended the event on behalf of University administration.

"It's nice to have the university officials show support for the Greek system," said David Sullenberger, social chair. "This puts us in good standing with the school, as we are trying to move the Greek system ahead."

With Nicolle Terry being crowned Dreamgirl, the weekend was complete.

"This is the best I have ever been treated by a chapter and school," said F. Anderson Morse, International President. "I eagerly await my next opportunity to come to High Point University."

ALPHA PHI OMEGA

Alpha Phi Omega has three new pledges for the spring semester. They are Angela Mangini, Monica Roberton and Amanda Taylor. We would like to welcome them to our service fraternity and offer our support as they complete their pledging period and attain their service hours.

Our chapter is going to sectionals from March 31-April 1. Sectionals are being held at Appalachian State University this year, and we will be sending eight members. The members that are going include April Kabbash, Chris Harwell, Jennifer Paulson, Joe Olinger, Melissa Bogle, Kim Stives, Angela Mangini and Monica Roberton. Our voting delegates are Jennifer Paulson and Joe Olinger. All Alpha Phi Omega chapters in our section of the state will be present. Activities are planned that will make our section more unified.

Alpha Phi Omega would also like to remind everyone that the Red Cross CPR training course will be taught on April 22. It is offered to anyone on campus, but there are a limited number of spaces available. The price for the course is $25.00. All money is due on April 13 to hold your spot. For more information, please contact April Kabbash at 841-9488 or 841-4554 and leave a message.

in wacky outfits and thrilled the crowd with the performance of the night. Guitarist Seth Carter opened the act with an abbreviated recreation of Jimi Hendrix' "Star Spangled Banner."

The band then launched into an original song. After that, they continued the act with a very good cover of Hendrix' "Hey Joe." The band included drummer Kevin Fielder, pianist Wellington DeSouza and bassist Brent Ward.

Following that performance, Kevin Fielder did a comedy act and Melanie Kellam performed an a cappella version of "Jesus Loves Me" while the judges voted.

The true highlight of the night came after the prizes had been handed out and the crowd had started to file out. A jam session with some of High Point's best talent ensued.

The "Hat Band," Sean Jones, Adil Diggs and several other musicians got onstage and did everything from rap to rock covers. It proved to be a good showcase of student talent.

Unfortunately, there was not much of a crowd there to enjoy it. The event had good attendance, but many of the spectators left early.

Lucas

Fortunately for Lucas, only one of the grenades went off, blowing him over onto his back and perforating his right lung, which still gives him trouble. Presuming him to be dead, his fellow troops left the trench after killing the remaining Japanese soldiers.

When recalling the events directly after the explosion, Lucas said, "It never knocked me out. If it had knocked me out I would have drowned in my own blood...I couldn't get air. The blood was coagulating in my mouth.

"Another outfit moving up discovered me. They dressed my wounds (and got medical help)...They (the stretcher bearers) dropped me and sliced the back of my head open."

Lucas made it safely back to medical facilities, enduring terrible pain. He was covered with a poncho. When he came out of the morphine-induced haze, Lucas says of the incident, "I said, 'Oh my God. I am dead.' Because in the movies they only put a poncho on you when you are dead."

He faded in and out of consciousness. He was hoisted up onto an LST ship. As he looked around, he saw that it was filled with the bodies of many pain- ridden soldiers. He was treated in an operating room on an American ship.

When he visited the Iwo Jima 50th anniversary ceremonies earlier this year, Lucas said he cried because of the many men who had suffered, both mentally and physically there.

After getting back to America, Lucas went on to graduate from High Point College, re-join the services as a paratrooper and build a meat business from $250,000 to $3,500,000 a year.

His wife tried to have a hit-man kill him in an effort to get his money. The man she tried to hire, however, was a federal agent.

He has met every president since Truman, except Carter. Most recently, Lucas was in the limelight when he sat with Hillary Rodham-Clinton at the January state of the union address, where he was honored.

When talking about being recognized at that event, Lucas said, "I tried my best to smile. I could not grin one time. I had to swallow probably 40 times a minute to keep from crying.

"I said, 'This big old grizzly bear cannot get up there in front of these people and cry. ' I wasn't trying to perform as a good soldier. I was trying to keep from crying."

Of his political views, Lucas said, "I'm not an affiliate of either party. I've always been my own man. I don't want anybody dictating to me my thoughts on who I want to have up there. I vote for the most qualified to fill the post.

I voted for President Clinton. I felt that a man who had the grit to do what he had to do to get nominated (was capable of holding the office)."

Lucas now lives happily in Hattiesburg, Miss. He has experienced and accomplished things that many people never will. After all he's been through, Lucas feels that he is lucky and that God is looking out for him.

What: The Third-Annual Bike-for-Breath
When: Saturday, April 1 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.
Where: Meet in front of Campus Center. 13-mile course goes to North Ramp Park near Oak Hollow Lake and back
Cost: $10 per biker
Prizes: Trek mountain bike, gift certificates, shirts and more

Bike-for-Breath is an event sponsored by students in remembrance of Laury Ann Lynch, a High Point student who died of an acute asthma attack in 1992. Money raised from the event benefits the Laury Lynch Scolarship fund and the Asthma and Allergy Foundation of America.

Bike-for-Breath

campus community joined together to find a way to perpetuate her memory and make the school a better place because of her life. Creating a scholarship in her name was the first idea of students.

"We were so hurt and shocked by her death," said Michele Kovner, one of the original students who worked on forming the educational scholarship. "We wanted to do something beneficial to ease some of the pain."

In December of 1992 some of Laury's closest friends introduced the idea of "Bike-for-Breath." Students began planning the event, hoping it would result in an enjoyable afternoon and money for the scholarship.

In 1993, the first bike-a-thon began on campus, and students, faculty and members of the community pedalled into Kernersville for a picnic and prize giveaways. All the money raised was divided between the Laury Lynch Scholarship and the Asthma and Allergy Foundation of America.

In 1994, the Second Annual Bike-for-Breath was even more successful, and the sponsors hope the Third Annual bike-a-thon will have even more participation.

"We're trying to make this year bigger and better than ever," said Emily Lefler, Laury's little sister and an event coordinator. "It's wonderful to see the event become a campus tradition that will last for years to come because those that do not remember Laury can see how much she meant to those who were fortunate enough to know her."

The coordinators of the Third Annual Bike-for-Breath are requesting the help of all students, who are invited to help plan the day and/or participate in the April 1 festivities.

"The day should be enjoyed by the entire campus and High Point community," said Pam Wilcox, another event coordinator. "The celebration will be beneficial to a lot of people... not just those who knew Laury, but students receiving the scholarship and those suffering from asthma as Laury did."

Bosstones give good show at local club

By Jen LaBrozzi
Staff writer

The Mighty Mighty Bosstones, the founders of the musical hybrid called "Ska-Core," have two albums on the Mercury label. The Boston band, known for its underground mentality, is gaining popularity on the above-ground scene.

Dennis Brockenborough walks into Ziggy's, the sunlit club in Winston-Salem, with a Newcastle dark ale in one hand and a wooden box in the other. He looks up, smiles and says "Hi, I'm pleased to meet you." He plays slide horn and sings background vocals. Dressed in traditional solid colored J Crew style clothes, he is missing one characteristic of true Bosstone fashion...plaid.

"The Mighty Mighty Bosstones name was a tongue-in-cheek sort of thing. There was a band in Boston called the Bosstones, which was the Boston College glee club. Then there was a band after them called the Mighty Bosstones, which was a bunch of older guys, so...it just kinda..." he giggles, squints his eyes, smiles, then looks away toward the technicians setting up the lights and soundboards. He looks back and smiles again, prepared for another question.

"The reason we're not on TAANG records anymore, is that TAANG was just a bad label. They were making a lot of money off of us and they wanted us to die like all the punk bands. But we didn't. Even Evan Dando (of the Lemonheads) still is owed a lot of money to this day. We're on Mercury now. They're OK. We don't judge our success by commercial radio play, but our label does. It's been good, kinda overwhelming just because we never expected to get played on stations like that. Mercury lives in that commercial alternative world."

Dennis is only one player of the eight-member band which started a unique blend of reggae-based Ska and hardcore music.

Dennis said, "Ska- Core to us was a name we came up with as a kind of a joke, and now it's a genre!"

"There are eight different members bringing eight different influences. Music influences go from jazz, reggae, hardcore, punk rock and contemporary songwriting to alternative and jangly rock. It's all there."

The Mighty Mighty Bosstones have been together for over six years. Dennis says, "Some of the guys have been together since elementary school."

They tour constantly, first the East Coast, then the West Coast. "I can't say which is better," Dennis said, "There are more clubs on the East Coast, but more of a turnout on the West Coast. Those kids live and die for music. I think I enjoy the West Coast more."

The sun is setting and the club is getting darker.

"I never think there's enough time in the day. We play here; then we leave immediately for Atlanta. Are there anymore questions?

If not, I'm gonna play with my new toy. It's a pedal."

He holds up the wooden box like a proud father. "See you at the show tonight!"

At 10:30 sharp, the crew comes out ready to play. Dicky, the lead singer is in the front with the Bosstone (their own dancer). The brass section with Dennis in the center is behind them with the bassist.

In the very back is the unseen drummer whom Dennis calls "Joey the Kid." The opening song, "Devil's Night Out," brings the crowd to attention.

The bottom floor in front of the stage contains a pit of slamdancers of all types: clean-cut college fraternity guys, skinheads, hardcore skaters and mods. The club is packed, much to the owner's surprise. He lost money with the Bosstones just a year ago.

"You guys want OLD SCHOOL or NEW SCHOOL?" Dicky screams, referring to the bands' older or newer sounds.

"OLD SCHOOL!" the crowd shouts.

"Do you want to hear OLD SCHOOL or NEW SCHOOL?" Dicky shouts again, as if unsure of the answer.

"OLD SCHOOL!" the crowd shouts again.

Dicky gives a look as if he is almost insulted because of the new album, but still willing to comply.

The night rages on with sing-alongs and stagediving to songs such as "Someday I Suppose," "Do Something Crazy," "Pictures to Prove It" and "A Little Bit Ugly." The set ends with "Kinder Words" from the latest album Question The Answers and then the Bosstones head straight for the bus.

After changing, some of the band members come out to sign shirts and talk to the audience. Dennis is nowhere to be found.

Some bands play on a high horse and feel that the crowds will always stick with them even if they blow them off. Not Dennis and the Bosstones. They appreciate their fans, and they always have a good time whether it's Los Angeles or Winston-Salem.

Oscar fever subsides

By Stephen B. Steffek
Editor

The race for the coveted Oscar statue is over. Ceremonies for the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences awards were held on Monday night.

When the smoke cleared, Forrest Gump emerged as the Schindler's List of this year. Gump, which is now in the fourth spot on the list of all-time Hollywood moneymakers, took home a total of 6 awards.

Gump edged out Pulp Fiction, Four Weddings and a Funeral, Quiz Show and The Shawshank Redemption in order to win the category of BEST PICTURE.

Robert Zemeckis, Forrest Gump's director, won the BEST DIRECTOR award. Zemeckis took the award over Academy notables Woody Allen and Robert Redford and newcomers Quentin Tarantino and Krzysztof Kieslowski.

Tom Hanks proved to be Hollywood's golden boy by taking home the BEST ACTOR statue for the second year in a row. Other nominees in the category were Morgan Freeman, Nigel Hawthorne, Paul Newman and Jessica Lange took home a statue for the BEST ACTRESS category. Lange, who has been up for the award four other times, beat Jodie Foster, Miranda Richardson, Susan Sarandon and Winona Ryder.

Martin Landau won the BEST SUPPORTING ACTOR award for his portrayal of Bela Lugosi in Ed Wood. He beat Samuel L. Jackson, Gary Sinise, Paul Scofield and Chazz Palminteri.

Dianne Wiest won the category of BEST SUPPORTING ACTRESS. She won over actresses Uma Thurman, Jennifer Tilly, Rosemary Harris and Helen Mirren.

Quentin Tarantino got a BEST ORIGINAL SCREENPLAY nod for his runaway hit Pulp Fiction. It took the award over Bullets over Broadway, Four Weddings and a Funeral, Heavenly Creatures and Three Colours Red.

Eric Roth won the BEST ADAPTED SCREENPLAY statue for Forrest Gump. He beat the writers of Nobody's Fool, The Madness of King George, Quiz Show and The Shawshank Redemption.

RETRACTION

In the last issue of the Chronicle, I failed to mention that the review I gave of the Tower Players' production of Crimes of the Heart was based on a rehearsal. I would like to apologize for any negative opinions I stated in my review. When I said that the play "dragged," I was referring to the script rather than the performance. My comments were not meant to keep people from attending the production, only to let them know what the performances entailed. On the contrary, I enjoyed the play. I thought it to be very well acted, directed and overall entertaining. The play did very well, breaking a record for attendance in the Empty Space Theatre for Saturday's performance.

Jayhawks refuse to sit back and watch the Grass grow

By Seth Carter
Staff Writer

With their recent exposure as Tom Petty's opening act, I thought I'd take a look at the Jayhawks' new effort, Tomorrow the Green Grass. When I first checked out the album, I noticed they had picked up a new member, Karen Grotberg, since their major-label debut a few years ago. She adds a new dimension to the band's already deep songs with her backing vocals and piano-playing.

The first single from the record is "Blue," which is a spacious, acoustic-oriented piece. It, like most of the effort, is mellow and emotional. The ambiguous "Two Hearts" captures the Jayhawks' sound at its finest, ragged yet eloquent. Images of Neil Young's electric days are evoked with the driving "Real Light." "Over My Shoulder" presents the warmness of the band's sound. This album would sound great on vinyl.

The issue of a friend's suicide is beautifully dealt with in "See Him on the Street." The song is representative of the album in that it deals with troubling issues in a way that seems to comfort the listener. The vocals for "Red's Song," another of the album's many standouts, sound strikingly similar to the Grateful Dead. When talking about this album, it is easier to discuss as a whole because it is a wonderful work all the way around.

The sound mixes strange harmonies, folk, country and rock with stream of consciousness lyrics and eclectic musicians. Together, all of these elements create powerful images and make the Jayhawks' Tomorrow the Green Grass a winner.

Snyder offers more than just "Seattle"

By Seth Carter

When I first heard "Talkin' Seattle Grunge Rock Blues" on the radio, I must admit I was amused, so I decided to pick up Todd Snyder's Songs for the Daily Planet. I've got to say I am also impressed. If you like great song writing and tongue-in-cheek lyrics, this one's for you. Songs like "My Generation (Part 2)" and "Alright Guy" are satires of the late '80s and early '90s. They are hilarious and truthful.

The album also tackles more serious issues. "this Land Is Your Land" addresses the evils of expansion in our country. My favorite track on the CD, "You Think You Know Somebody," is a touching song about the harsh reality of child abuse. Todd Snyder is definitely not afraid to examine delicate issues.

The effort turns introspective as well. "That Was Me' is Snyder's look at his own life and his regrets. "I Spoke as a Child" examines our innocent childhoods. There are uplifting songs too. "Somebody's Coming" adds an almost spiritual touch to the recording. I guess what I am trying to say is that this is a diverse album with a little bit for everybody. It is a musical journey through all aspects of life. Everybody owes it to himself to give this album a listen. Todd Snyder's Songs for the Daily Planet can relate to anyone.

Vowel Movement debuts on modern rock scene

By Stephen B. Steffek
Editor

Little did I know when I saw the Oblivious and Concrete Blonde play together in November 1993, that the lead singers of both bands would merge to create both an album and band called Vowel Movement. When I interviewed them, Johnette Napolitano (of Concrete Blonde) and Holly Vincent (of the Oblivious) were both very sincere and friendly.

After the interview, they discussed the possibility of doing an onstage duet at the next show.

Vowel Movement keeps the cohesion of the guitar/drum sound that got the pair its foothold in rock and roll. However, it takes some interesting variations on this firm rock sound. The album opens with the very strong "Dinosaur." The song has a standard rock and roll twist to it, but it manages to utilize every component of the song to create an overall emotion.

Other strong tracks on the album include the instrumental "Frank," the hard- rocking "Jackie Baby," the lulling "Hitchhiker," "I Don't Wanna" and the calming "Death of a Surfer." All of these are viable rock tracks.

The album, which was put together over only six days in the studio, keeps a sound that is reminiscent of a garage album. It has been played often enough that they know the main melodies and rhythms, but there is a certain spontaneity and fresh sound of a jam session. This works best on "Frank."

Both women share vocals on the album. This helps to add to the variety and creates a strong atmosphere in the music. If an artist doesn't enjoy what she is doing, the listener can tell to an extent. It affects the listener's perception of the music.

If, however, the artist loves her work, the audience is energized. This emotion comes through in the new eponymously titled album from Vowel Movement.

PJ Harvey returns to give fans her Love

By Peter Romanov
Staff Writer

PJ is back! No, I'm not talking about pajamas. I'm talking about PJ Harvey's new release To Bring You My Love. The music on this CD is as dramatic as the vocals.

Religious tones also run rampant through each song. PJ exclaims in one song, "Jesus come closer, I think my time is near." Quirky beats and sharp vocals present themselves with grace and force on this CD.

"Meet Ze Monsta" and "Long Snake Moan" are among the fast-paced songs while "Send His Love to Me" is flavored with an organ and pleading vocals. Sullen songs like "The Dancer" roll out confessional lyrics that state "I've prayed days, I've prayed nights, for the Lord to send me on some sign."

PJ's music pulls you into the speaker and insists you feel what she feels. To Bring You My Love is an emotional roller coaster that you won't want to get off.

POLICE OFFICER SECURING HIS FUTURE

Bean's 'been there, done that' in pursuit of elusive college degree

By Keith Corbett
Staff writer

In a time when the average college student is quite adamant about voicing his complaints, you will hear no such whining from Keith Bean.

Bean, a chemistry-business major , is no ordinary student. His day-in and day-out routine would make any student on this campus think twice about complaining.

"It's quite admirable what he has done," said security officer and coworker, Rick Vallet.

Bean, making his second attempt at a college degree, started out at East Carolina University in 1981. "I went to ECU to have fun, but all I got was a GPA in the 1's," said Bean, a native of High Point.

After 10 years of jobs varying from owning a trucking business to working in the soft drink industry, Bean can comprehend the need to have a college degree when attacking the work force. "You cannot live without it (refering to the degree)," said Bean.

And living is getting harder and harder for the 31-year-old father of three.

Working 40 hours a week from 11 p.m.-7a.m. at Piedmont Chemical, protecting HPU's campus from 3p.m.-11p.m., and carrying a full time load as a student, while maintaining a 3.6. GPA, does not leave much room for sleep.

Keith Bean, a man who wears many hats at HPU.

While one might complain about only getting five hours of sleep on one particular night, Bean is happy when he can maintain that average each night of the week.

How does he do it? "I just don't sleep much," Bean replied with a smile. But when he does, he dreams of a better life.

"My ultimate goal is to go to medical school, but realistically, graduating with honors and being able to provide for my girls will suffice," said Bean, who is about one and a half years from receiving his diploma.

Dr. Charles Smith, associate professor of biology, said," He is clearly one of the better students I've had; he seems to show a sincere interest in understanding the material. His desire to learn can't be underestimated."

With all these future accomplishments on the horizon, Bean lives with one major regret. "I wish I would have buckled down earlier (referring to ECU in 1981), said Bean.

Bean sees motivation as the key for success. Though it wasn't present in his lifein 1981, it definitely is there today: but , "it had to be induced," said Bean, who can also see it lacking in some of the youth today.

"For some of the kids that aren't doing so well, I think it would be a good idea to take some time off from school and get a feel for what's out there. Once you find out you can't make it without that piece of paper, you will approach school in an entirely different manner," Bean said.

"Today's kids need some guidance, and I think it's easier for them to relate to someone who has been there. I'd do whatever I could do to help out these kids."

Bean's own attempt at daily survival and his ability to persevere have been more beneficial for HPU students than he could ever imagine.

Prasada-Rao's acoustics flavor Coffee House

By Kevin Fielder
Staff Writer

Not all good musical acts in the area are at Ziggy's. Some of them can be found on campus during High Point University Coffee House sessions put on by Student Activities.

Recently, I and a small group of students got to witness the acoustic and singing ability of Tom Prasada-Rao, an artist from the Washington D.C. area who is known in coffee houses around the country.

He played for about two hours on March 18. Tom's music was a mixture of folk, rock and blues. He played '60s classics such as The Youngbloods' "Get Together" and Sly and The Family Stone's "Everyday People" in addition to playing his own music.

If you like listening to acoustic guitar, you missed a treat. Everything he played was up close and personal as most acoustic music seems to be.

The way he sang, you could tell that he sings from the heart and really enjoys playing music. I found myself many times slipping into a mellow relaxation.

His playing was fresh and his singing was calm and easy-going.

No hard choppy vocals and no cursing the world to total damnation.

This was music that was easy listening and soothing to the soul.

In addition to playing his own music, Prasada-Rao invited one of High Point University's own students up to play.

So if you are one of those who missed out because you forgot, didn't get a chance to go or are one of the cool people who knock campus activities before you try them, you missed Tom Prasada-Rao, and you missed a good show.

O'Leary gives Guiding Light to students

By Lori McBrayer
Staff writer

Assistant producer Mary O'Leary emphasized the stressful nature of making a soap opera during a discussion of her show Guiding Light on March 27.

Guiding Light, the longest-running TV show, was first broadcast in 15 minute segments on the radio in 1937.

It moved to TV in 1952, but it remained on the radio for four more years.

"There's certainly no other program that's on television today that was also on radio," O'Leary said.

The name "soap opera" was given to the show because Procter and Gamble, which owns and operates the daytime drama, created it to sell soap.

Unlike most TV shows, Guiding Light does not show reruns. There are about 260 new episodes a year.

"It's a tremendous amount of work that has to be done in a very, very small amount of time. And that's what you're always doing—fighting the clock," said O'Leary.

The show fired two head writers in November because of low ratings. Their replacement was a Vermont playwright who had never worked in daytime TV.

Most of the audience's questions concerned the number of hours the cast and crew work each day and their pay.

The head writer for a daytime drama earns between $8,000 to $11,000 a week.

"But you have to realize that you're responsible for creating a lot of shows," O'Leary said. "You're turning out a lot of stories, and you get burned out, which is what happens to a lot of our writers."

O'Leary said that a new writer recently went on a vacation but spent most of the time with his lap-top computer, working on story ideas for the show.

"He once said, 'Every waking moment, I think of Guiding Light,' " she related.

On an average day, the cast begins rehearsing around 7 a.m. and ends the day around 8 p.m. Most actors under contact earn $800 to $900 an episode, with at least two episodes a week.

However, daytime drama actors do not have the luxury of teleprompters. They must memorize their lines each morning.

O'Leary spoke to several aspiring actors after the presentation about how they can get into the business.

She explained that agents know where actors can find roles and that most actors have no other way to learn of available parts.

"You really have to go out and get an agent," she said.

O'Leary received her B.A. degree from Rhode Island College, where she studied theater education.

She worked as a stage manager for a theater company until taking an entry-level position in the production office at Guiding Light.

"I specifically targeted daytime shows because they were like dealing with plays," O'Leary said. "It was exactly like producing a play except it's on television."

The Student Government Association (SGA) has been extremely active this semester. Following the semiannual Board of Trustee meeting, March 15, student leaders, faculty, staff and board members enjoyed an unbelievable dinner together. Following the meal, SGA took care of general business. The evening proved to be very informative for all who attended.

SGA is trying something new this semester. The organization is offering special meetings in addition to its biweekly general meetings. The special meetings are intended to provide insight on issues that one needs to be professional.

The following are examples of the special meetings: a public speaking seminar, a speaker on parliamentary procedure and a constitutional revision retreat. As we progress and grow as a school, it is necessary for our governing documents to evolve with us. Therefore, there is a definite change needed in our constitution.

Last Satuday, about 12 student leaders spent the entire day at the penthouse in Market Square Tower revising the constitution. A member of the Board of Trustees, Mrs. Lyles, provided the meeting area. Numerous changes were suggested at this time. However, the most significant was the idea of creating an arm of SGA that would produce student activities. The constitution will be up for a vote in a few weeks. Be sure to look it over and vote.

Odyssey Club sponsors discussion of Interview

By Ruth Ann Milam
Staff Writer

Vampires, witches and creatures of the night are some of the recent interesting topics of discussion on college campuses nationwide.

Just what is our fascination with such mysterious beings? Part of it has to do with books by such popular authors as Stephen King and his characters like those of Salem's Lot.

Anne Rice's books are the most recent topics of discussion, with her vampire Lestat. In the best-selling novel Interview With The Vampire, Rice gives the reader the experience of getting inside the mind of one of these creatures we find so fascinating.

On April 6, there will be a book forum to discuss strengths and weaknesses in plot and structure of Rice's thriller, Interview With The Vampire. The forum, sponsored by the Odyssey Club, will be a chance for a panel of volunteers to discuss with a group of their ideas about the book. Each member of the panel will be given the opportunity to speak about his or her opinion of the book's plot, characters and stylistic qualities.

The discussion will also be open to the members of the audience to participate in and give their own points of view on the subject.

This will be the second annual book forum sponsored by the Odyssey Club. Last year's book was the Robert Waller best-seller, The Bridges of Madison County.

Due to the success of last year's forum, the club has chosen to hold another with the hopes that a wider audience can be reached.

To help achieve this goal, it has been arranged for students attending the forum to receive for IDS 151.

Keith Ridgeway, a freshman member of the Odyssey Club, says, "I'm excited about the forum. I haven't read the novel, but I will have to read it in my English 200 class next semester. This will be a good opportunity for me to get a preview of the book."

The forum will be held in the Great Room of the Campus Center on April 6 at 6 p.m.

All students wishing to participate should report early to partake of the pre-panel discussion and refreshments. The Odyssey Club would appreciate everyone's support in order to make this forum a success.

Scholl's integrative counseling gets physical

The UNCG graduate student emphasizes movement in his student counseling sessions

By Tanya Lyons
Staff writer

Mark Scholl, a UNCG graduate student and spring semester intern here, loves counseling and working with small colleges.

"There is less emphasis on research and more on service to the students," said Scholl, a graduate of St. Andrews College in Laurinburg.

Scholl advocates a stronger connection between what students learn and what they are going to do.

"I feel that students don't get enough exposure to career development in the context of the curriculum," he said. "I think student issues need to be integrated more thoroughly."

He enjoys public speaking and conducting workshops. Scholl has held job search strategies and acquaintance rape workshops under the direction of Marilyn Wolf, director of counseling.

When in session, Scholl uses kinesthetic activity, which involves movement in counseling.

"It's not uncommon in one of my sessions for the patient to stand up, move around and stand in different parts of the room," he said.

Scholl also encourages sculpting when working with couples to help them see how one person perceives the other..

Once he acquires his doctorate in counseling, his first choice for employment would be in a college setting. Scholl enjoys the small size of most southeastern schools.

Some of Scholl's interests are acting and basketball.

Hopefully, he will be able to continue helping people and deriving enjoyment from the service he provides.

Mark Scholl's hours are:
Monday 10 a.m. - 3 p.m.
Thursday 1 p.m. - 5 p.m.
Friday 9 a.m. - 5 p.m.

Modern moshers:

Some hints for concert combat

By John Kinney
Staff writer

By the stage, people dripping with sweat and blood are slamming around in a mosh-pit. And a stage diver who has a missile lock on you is ready to commit a hit and run.

This is a typical scene at any rock concert.

Who knows for sure why these trends have entered the music world? It's probably due to people's need to come alive within the music they love.

Stage diving has become an amateur sport. All you do is jump off the stage into the crowd, but people have different types of flight. Some go for height, distance, number of flips, number of humans knocked down or any combination of the four.

Sometimes people at concerts don't bother to catch the divers at all. This is called a suicide dive. There's total pain and no fame when this happens. Just imagine jumping from a six foot stage, expecting to be caught, and becoming one with the cement.

Now enter the pit. This is a place where people run and dance at full speed like airplane propellers. Mad Max in The Thunderdome isn't as terrifying as the mosh-pit.

Safety comes first in the pit. The modern moshers are wearing the following protection:

1) Goggles—to stop whipping hair from blinding you

2) Steel tip boots—to ward off foot trauma

3) Helmet—to keep you alive when an undercut mosher flies in the air and kicks you in the head with his steel tip boots

4) Skateboard knee pads—to protect you from people's three foot wallet chains. The chain in full motion gives new meaning to the word "stinger."

5) God's gold card—to get out of the mess you're in when you fall down in the pit

Concert trends are always changing. Some day pro wrestling could be mixed in with moshing. There could be a ring at the concerts and the moshers could have a battle royal for a championship belt.

Diving platforms could be installed. You could give all the dives different names and degrees of difficulty and have judges present at the shows. The most spectacular event could mix stage diving and moshing.

First you would dive off the stage, trying to knock down as many people as possible; once you reach the back of the club, you enter the ring with a wrestler called "Smasher." A tournament named "Masters of the Music-verse" could be held every year.

PERCEPTION IS REALITY

Fear of weight gain burdens women in struggle to stay slim

By April Sides
Special to the Chronicle

"Listen to how much I ate today," my friend Amy begins, as if she's about to give me a huge list of fattening foods. Instead, she says, "A half a sandwich for lunch, and a whole bagel for dinner: That's a lot!"

I listen to this, feeling half angry and half amazed, if she really believes this is a lot. Such a menu is definitely not going to add anything to her weight. In fact, I wonder how eating that much every day will enable her to live.

So many girls seem to suffer from the intense fear of gaining weight. This problem has been going on for many years. It is as if it is an inborn trait among females and that being a female means you must go over everything you eat with a magnifying glass to make sure it contains absolutely no fat.

According to Hillel Schwartz, author of Never Satisfied, a history of America's obsession with dieting, statistics show that some children are dieting so precariously that they are affecting their own growth. In a recent study of nine-year-olds in San Francisco, as many as 40 percent were dieting. In the 1970s, the average age at which an American female began dieting was under 14. It seems we have projected onto our children our fears and fantasies about our own bodies.

During this age of "fat -free" foods, it is impossible not to think about weight. Everywhere we go to buy food, we are reminded of how many grams of fat are in something or whether or not something is fat -free. It is natural for someone to care about this for health reasons but not for a teen-ager, or for that matter, a middle-aged woman who will do anything to avoid being "fat."

My friend Ann is 18 years old and is at least 10 pounds underweight. She will not touch anything that is not fat-free and she exercises obsessively. This kind of behavior is dangerous and can lead to eating disorders. Despite everyone's efforts to convince her to eat more, she continues this routine. It's as if she has talked herself into thinking she is overweight. If you try hard enough, you can believe anything.

So when and where did all of this nonsense begin? And what is it that so many women are seeking through starving themselves? According to Schwartz, "Diets promise us much more than better bodies. They promise a new world. If you diet, you will actually be disappointed if the loss of weight does not bring with it a new romance or a better life or financial success. So people who diet begin to think of dieting as a means of establishing a new way of life. This leads to a vicious circle: We promote an ideal of slimness in order to reconstrue our society."

Thankfully, there is some hope of doing away with this weight obsession. America is becoming more and more tolerant of the overweight. People are beginning to think more about fitness than weight. So weight-consciousness is changing into shape-consciousness.

Also, because of the prominence in the media of cases of anorexia and bulimia, people are becoming more conscious of the extremes to which the culture of slimming tends. Finally, the way we are moving now in fashion is towards a fuller body, dedicated to health and flexibility rather than to a vision of [illegible] thin.

Meanwhile, I try to explain to my friend Amy that what she has eaten today is certainly not a lot. I am prepared to lecture her on worse problems involved in not eating enough. After all, what good is being thin without health and happiness to [illegible] along with it?

Their clubs have been polished and the spirit of competition is shining. The spring golf season has begun.

High Point opened the season March 4-5 in Holden Beach at the Challenge of the Carolinas hosted by Catawba. The Panthers came in seventh place out of 21 teams wtih a score of 623.

Their next tournament was the Greensboro Exchange Intercollegiate hosted by Greensboro College. The Panthers' score of 596 netted a second-place finish.

At the season's third tournament, the Max Ward Invitational in Burlington, High Point placed second to Elon, 587-595.

"We feel like the worl'ds biggest bridesmaid..."
- Coach Dee Sasser

"We feel like the world's biggest bridesmaid because it seems like everywhere we go we finish second," coach Dee Sasser said.

The Panthers' latest placing was third at the Tuscum College Invitational with a score of 602.

The problem High Point players face is that they cannot seem to play well on the same day.

"We're just kind of waiting for the time when we all start playing more consistent," Tony Romani said. "When we all click together, I think at that time there's nobody that can beat us."

Last weekend the Panthers placed sixth out of 36 teams at the Camp Lejune Tournament. Allen McGee and Luke Mongrain both had top-ten finishes in a field of 180 golfers. According to Sasser it was the largest college tournament in the country.

Expectations remain high for the team, ranked fourth in the NAIA pre-season poll. Players are focusing on a strong finish to live up to their ranking.

"As a team, we're playing good, but not great at this point," Sasser said.

"It's better to start off poor and then end well," McGee said.

Conference champion keeps positive outlook during rehab of ACL

By Kevin Fielder

There are athletes who think the world is over when they get an injury.

Then there's Donnie Franks.

His determination and will to keep a postitive outlook have aided the star golfer down a long road of recovery.

Last October, Franks sustained an injury to his anterior cruciate ligament (ACL), of all places, on the golf couse. He was retrieving a ball knocked out of bounds at Oak Hollow when he jumped into a seven-foot ditch and twisted his knee.

It cost him a season of golf.

Franks, the defending Carolinas Conference champion, has used the time off to concentrate on his studies, among other things. But the idea of being sidelined has been hard to handle.

"It drove me nuts," said Franks, a native of Orlando, Fla.

Franks can be seen walking the campus with his left knee in a brace. He has been working with the sports medicine program to rehabilitate his ACL.

Franks started off working on movement exercises, then progressed to lifting weights with his legs to build his cardiovascular system and provide a complete workout.

Trainer Stacy Littleton is full of accolades for Franks in his comeback attempt.

"He's got a lot of determination," she said. "He wants to play golf, and that's important to him. He wants to do the things he's always done."

Franks' focus currently centers around his rehabilitation efforts. After graduation, he plans to turn pro.

Track and field suffers from lack of manpower

By Sonny Gann
Staff writer

Track coach Bob Davidson is pleased with his team's performance this season. They are not doing as well as they did last year. But Davidson cites a shortage on manpower as a big reason for the decline.

Still, Davidson feels his team is improving.

"Numerically, we are not getting the events covered as well as we did last year," Davidson said. "But some people are doing very well and even a lot better ."

So far the team has had three meets. Davidson called the Wilmington meet March 10 and 11 a way for the team to "get off the ground." This was an unscored meet. The Panthers then finished fifth out of nine teams in the Pembroke meet, scoring 68 points.

High Point then travelled to Florence, S.C. last weekend and came in third out of nine teams in the Francis Marion Invitational with 86 points.

Adil Diggs has been the best performer for the Panthers. Diggs won the 400 meter hurdles at the Pembroke meet and came in second in the 110 high hurdles. Diggs then went to the Francis Marion meet, was a double winner in both events and got runner-up MVP of the meet. His 23 points led High Point at the meet.

Daniel Doub was second on the team with 22 points at the Francis Marion meet. Doub won the 1500 meters and finished third in the 800 meters.

Other top performers have been Whitaker Augier, Tony Pompa and Sean Carter.

This week the team travels to Lynchburg, Va. for the Lynchburg Track Classic. Davidson looks forward to this meet to see how his team is coming along, but most importantly to get ready for the championship meet April 22 at Pembroke St.

Baseball team three wins shy of last year's total

From staff reports

An 8-12 record may not seem too impressive at first glance. But when compared to last year's 11-30 performance, it is a vast improvement.

The Panthers' began the season with losses to Pembroke St. (3-2) and Greensboro College (3-1) before taking a pair from Southern Wesleyan, 6-5, 6-2 and knocking off Guilford 10-7.

High Point then hit a slump, losing six of its next seven to drop to 4-8. Since then, the Panthers have gone 4-4 and dwell near the bottom of the Carolinas Conference with a 2-7 mark.

The Panthers are 5-5 at home, but don't expect many late-inning comebacks; they are 1-6 when trailing after six innings.

Chad Duggins leads the offensive attack with a .351 batting average while Matt Griffin carries a .349.

Keith Spicer's 3.38 ERA is tops among starting pitchers, and his 2-2 record ties him with Robbie Moore (2-0, 3.63) for most wins.

High Point is batting .251 as a team, compared to opposing teams' .260 . For player and team stats, see pg. 12.

Lady Panthers advance to nationals with CC tournament title

Arkansas Tech defeats High Point women in first round

From staff reports

The women's basketball team rose above pre-season predictions of a fourth place Carolinas Conference finish to dethrone Belmont Abbey and becmoe conference champions.

The Lady Panthers capped an 11-game win streak when Tiffanie Wilson's last-second three-pointer netted a 73-71 victory over Belmont in the CC tournament finals March 5.

With the win, High Point earned its first-ever berth in the NAIA national tournament held in Jackson, Tenn.

Arkansas Tech, seeded eighth in the 32-team field, beat the Lady Panthers 82-57 and extinguished their dreams of a national title.

High Point, which ended the season 22-7 overall, 12-2 CC, trailed 30-25 at halftime and managed to pull within 30-29 early in the second half. But Arkansas Tech outscred the Lady Panthers 48-18 over the next 15:07 to put the game away.

Next year the Lady Panthers will try for a spot in the NCAA Div. II nationals as the Carolinas Conference emerges from the NAIA.

MEN

High Point lost in the conference finals to Pfeiffer, ?-?, ending a 20-9 season. The Panthers finished 8-6 in CC play, going 10-7 after opening the season 10-2.

Pfeiffer, which was 3-0 against the Panthers this season, lost to Birmingham Southern in the finals of the NAIA National Tournament.

Forward Robert Martin was selected third-team All-America, averaging 22.4 ppg and7.9 rpg. He is being scouted by two NBA teams. For final statistcs on both teams, see pg. 12.

Men's tennis team improvises to fill injury-plagued roster

By Rob Humphreys
Assistant Editor

A spring roster of eight has dwindled to five as recent injuries have sidelined three men's tenniš players.

Keith Corbett (No. 5), Matt Laslo (No. 6) and Mike Allen (No. 8) are all out with shoulder injuries.

Corbett may return from his rotator cuff injury in time for the Carolinas Conference Tournament, but it is unlikely. Laslo, who injured his right shoulder hitting an overhead, and Allen, who dislocated his shoulder last week during a recreational football game, should return soon.

Until then, three players have stepped in to fill the vacancies. Left-hander Jeff Blosse has emerged as the top walk-on, winning at No. 5 singles against Union (N.Y.) 7-6, 6-7, 7-5.

"He's on the team now, and hopefully he'll make a contribution," coach Jerry Tertzagian said. "Jeff's a pretty good player."

Despite playing with replacement players at No. 5 and No. 6 for the last week, the Panthers have kept a hot pace, winning six-of-seven spring matches with their only loss coming to Pfeiffer, 8-1. A 3-0 record in the fall brings High Point's overall record to 9-2, 2-2 CC.

The next two weeks will be crucial in determining seeding for the CC Tournament April 21-22 at Barton.

"We've got a big part of our schedule coming up with Belmont Abbey (Tues.), St. Andrews (Fri.) and Wingate (Mon.)," Tertzagian said.

The team hosted defending conference champion Barton Wednesday afternoon

The spring season started with an 8-1 victory over Queens, followed by a 9-0 rout of Gardner Webb and a 7-2 spanking of Catawba. Mt. Olive was the next to fall, 8-1 before Pfeiifer handed High Point its first loss 8-1.

Laslo injured himself during doubles with Jack Tran in the Pfeiffer match. He defaulted his singles match, leaving the team with five players, one short of the needed six.

Pekka Pohjamo is 10-0 at No. 1 singles while doubles teammate Donald Marriott is 7-3 at No. 3. They are 9-1 in doubles.

Kulle Kuusisto is 8-2 at No. 2 singles. Andrew Awai holds a 7-2 record at No. 4. They are 7-3 in doubles.

Corbett, Laslo, Tran, Allen and the replacement players have rotated in and out of the No. 5 and 6 spots.

Women's tennis aims for winning season, strong conference showing

Lady Panthers stand 2-1 in conference after shutouts of Lees-McRae and Mt. Olive

By Rob Humphreys
Assistant Editor

Coach Jerry Tertzagian didn't know what to expect from his women's tennis team when the season began.

His expectations for his players now center around executing the fundamental ingredients needed for a strong conference showing.

"We're trying to have a winning season," said Tertzagian, in his first year of coaching the women's team. "As long as we work hard and do the best we possibly can, that's the key thing."

Halfway through the season the Panthers stand 4-6 overall and 2-1 in Carolinas Conference play. St. Andrews and Pfeiffer should pose the stiffest competition during the CC Tournament April 21-22 at Barton. High Point faces St. Andrews Friday and Belmont Abbey Tuesday in conference matches.

The women, six-deep on the roster, began the spring season Feb. 27 with a 6-0 rain-shortened win over Lees-McRae. Last Thursday the Panthers finished off Lees-McRae 9-0 in a rematch at Appalachian State.

High Point also polished off Mt. Olive 9-0 but lost to Pfeiffer 8-1 and Gardner Webb 8-1. The Panthers' 1-4 fall record counts in their overall standings.

No. 1 player Asa Johansson is 7-3 and Heather Haberfield is also 7-3 at No. 2. As a doubles team, they are 5-4. Christian Miller is 8-2 at No. 3.

Singles records:
A. Johansson, 7-3
H. Haberfield, 7-3

SGA spring in review

By Heather Coyle
SGA President

During the spring semester, the Student Government Association (SGA) attempted to serve students rather than merely acting as the financial agent for the various campus organizations.

We have addressed several issues that continue to concern the campus community as a whole.

For example, the SGA, voted unamiously to commend ARA's decision to continue the practice of hiring challenged individuals, benefitting both students and the community.

The SGA discussed at length whether students should be involved in the extension of professors' and administrators' contractual agreements. Voting members were reluctant to make recommendations to the appropriate hiring officials due to the lack of information available to students.

High Point University seniors are now counting down the days until the graduation ceremony.

However, there are several activities left in the 1995 commencement activities for the seniors before they don their caps and gowns.

The Evening Degree Program will hold its Senior Picnic on April 27 at 5 p.m.

The Senior Party will be held at the Jaycee Fairgrounds in Jamestown on May 3. It will be a beach party and dinner will be served free of charge.

On May 4, the EDP will hold its Senior/Alumni Dinner at 7:30 in the Main Dining Hall.

The Alumni/Senior lunch for students in the day program will be held in the Main Dining Hall at 11:45 on May 5. It will be followed by the commencement practice at 1:45 in the auditorium.

That evening, the Baccalaureate Service will be held at Wesley Memorial United Methodist Church at 1225 Chestnut Drive.

On May 6, the commencement ceremony will be held at 9 a.m on the front lawn near the Wrenn Building.

Senior class President Stacy Littleton wishes all of the seniors "Good Luck!"

FCA Day offers a plethora of events

Former Clemson receiver Perry Tuttle to be keynote speaker; Christine Winfield-Scott to sing music

The Fellowship of Christian Athletes is gearing up for the 2nd Annual FCA Day this Sunday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

FCA Day offers numerous activities along with Christian fellowship and worship. Other area colleges will combine with High Point students for a day of athletic competition, singing and huddle group discussions.

The fun begins after registration at 10 a.m. Events, which include volleyball, ultimate frisbee, the Panther relay and others, will be held on the intramural field behind the baseball field.

Former NFL wide-receiver Perry Tuttle will be the keynote speaker, and lunch will be provided by ARA. There will be special music by Christine Winfield-Griffith.

"I'm really excited about it," said freshman Dawn Reilly, FCA outreach coordinator. "It will be a good opportunity to fellowship with Christians from other Christians. I think it will be a good witnessing opportunity for the school."

FCA Day is open to all students, faculty and staff, and FCA encourages everyone to come.

"You'd be absolutely nuts to miss this outrageous and most righteous event," said Rob Humphreys, secretary of FCA. "I challenge all y'all wannabe athletes out there to come out and showcase your talent against me and the FCA gangbangers."

Humphreys and his gangbanging crew are willing to defend their statements at all cost.

Bike-for-Breath enjoys successful day despite drop in attendance

By Nicole Thompson
Staff writer

If you were too hung-over from the night before or just didn't feel like going to the Third Annual Bike-for-Breath April 1, you missed a really good time.

The five coordinators—Keith Anderson, Pam Wilcox, Emily Lefler, Heather Coyle and Brenda Egedy—worked hard to make sure everything went well. Their main jobs were to publicize the event, get a grill, make T-shirts, get security and, most of all, prepare the water stations for the dehydrated bikers.

The outcome was a successful day including a barbecue, music, frisbee, some prizes given out and two '70s freaks on a two-seater bicycle. The prizes included a free cellular phone for everyone who rode, some meals and hors d'oeuvres at Ham's on Main Street, some tanning sessions, and the best prize, a Trek mountain bike awarded to Stephanie DiMarzio.

"All in all, it ended up being a really nice day," Egedy said.

Some bikers made the six miles to Oak Hollow Lake before most of the drivers got there. Junior Tommy Rogers, who arrived first, was cheered as he crossed the finish line.

Sophomore Paula Beck said, "I thought the ride would be so long and hard, but once you start riding, it's not bad at all. It's even sort of fun."

"Our attendance was down a little bit more than last year, but I think Laury Lynch (whose death from asthma inspired the event) would have been pleased with the outcome," stated Pam Wilcox, one of Laury's Kappa Delta sisters.

"Laury was very unselfish, and she would be so happy that this was all for her."

The bike-a-thon raised about $800, which will be divided between the Laury Lynch Scholarship Fund and the Asthma and Allergy Foundation of America.

"The number of people and the amount of participation shown were pleasing to see," said Egedy.

Jessica Pugliese, another of Laury's sorority sisters, stated, "This celebration shows how much Laury is still alive in all of our hearts."

OPINION

Doesn't anyone care about student apathy?

By Fred Jordan
Staff Writer

Thank God there are at least two people on this campus that actually give a damn. It seemed as soon as the last issue came out everybody I knew thought that I would be outraged by the fact that two other students on this campus spoke out for what they believed.

Kudos to Tara Fitz and Matthew Johnson. At least you had guts enough to say something, if anything. The only thing that I have been somewhat outraged with is the apathy of most students on this campus.

I don't know if it is because most of you don't give enough of a damn to say anything, or if it is that most of you are just too strung out from the excesses of spring and apathetic stance that encompasses the newer students here. It seems to me that since I arrived here four years ago the ability of most students to communicate has declined dramatically, especially with this freshman class. Nobody seems to care about much more than altering one's conciousness and listening to bad music. That is unfortunate. High Point University offers many different opportunities for students to either take charge or participate. The Greek system, SGA, FCA and the newspaper are just a few.

Another problem that I notice is that class participation is minuscule at best. As I walk down hallways, all I see are a bunch of faces frozen in fear. One of the things that I have enjoyed here that I couldn't get at Yale is the interaction between students and faculty. These people work for us. They will not get offended if you speak up and ask questions. You can even go and talk to Gart when he hasn't called you in for a violation. He won't get mad, I promise.

It is scary to me, though, that the future of High Point University is left up to people that have as much initiative as a bum. If students continue to practice their initiative as it is now for four years, High Point will turn into a four-year community college. People, just do something to contribute to High Point University. I don't care what it is. Or are you too busy packing your bong to do something productive?

Writer shows continued loyalty to morning talk show co-host

Columnist sticks to his guns when it comes to defending his favorite morning sidekick

By Jason Schneider
Staff Writer

I hadn't realized until after the Feb. 23 issue of the Campus Chronicle was published just how many people disliked Kathie Lee Gifford. I was shocked by the number of people who find her Live co-host Regis Philbin banal, uninteresting even (gasp!) stupid,and so I find it my duty once again to defend her honor.

Kathie Lee Gifford is more than just a pretty face who has graced more magazine covers than even her mother could count. She donates much of her time and money to charity, has established Cody House, a place for HIV-positive and crack-addicted infants and children, and is raising funds to create Cassidy's Place, its sister organization. She recently announced on Live that the $50,000 fee Good Housekeeping paid for the rights to publish an excerpt from her new book, Listen to My Heart: Lessons in Love, Laughter and Lunacy, went directly into a building fund for Cassidy's Place, as did the nearly $2000 sent in by viewers.

In addition, almost $1 million from the sales of her Plaza South clothing line has been divided between Paul Newman's "Hole in the Wall Gang Camp"and Variety the Children's Charities, and a portion of the sales from her new Wal-Mart clothing line will also go to various children's charities.

All is not sunshine in Kathie Lee's life, although you wouldn't know it from the smiling, laughing persona she projects on Live. She has been the victim of a stalker, Richard Jones, who threatened to abduct, marry and impregnate her. He was later sentenced to life behind bars after being convicted of kidnapping and rape charges in another case here in North Carolina. Before that, between the births of her two children, Cody and Cassidy, Kathie Lee suffered a miscarriage, something she talked about on television to set the record straight before the tabloids had a chance to create their trademark falsehoods.

Kathie Lee remains busy always. In addition to her morning duties as co-host of Live With Regis and Kathie Lee, she has sung at the Super Bowl, recorded an album of lullabies, shot commercials for Carnival Cruise Lines and Revlon, sold her fitness video and has been planning a sitcom.

All this, and she is a full-time wife and mother, too. It's nice to know that there are people like Kathie Lee Gifford who do not let their fame and fortune go to their heads but rather to their hearts, where it is expressed in the concern she shows for her family, friends and the recipients of her many charitable works.

ADVICE FROM THE EDITOR

A letter to the administration about improving the school

Dear Administrators,

Since I first reached the halls of High Point University, I have seen many changes, most of them for the better. However, you are at a critical point in the history of the school. You must keep with this track of improvement. There are several things that, in my mind, would further High Point toward its goal of betterment.

The completion of the new Fine Arts Center will greatly improve the cultural and educational programs at High Point. The current auditorium will no longer suffice for the theatre programs and cultural events that are brought to the campus. As the last few Tower Player productions, including Annie, have illustrated, the Fine Arts department shows considerable talent and is only restrained by its lack of resources.

Another thing that will raise the quality of student life here is the continued quality of programs such as sports medicine, home furnishings and business. These have brought and kept many people here.

The English department is also restrained by its lack of resources. The media facilities are severely outdated and should be updated. The teachers in the media department do a good job with the resources they have. However, for the program to continue to grow and send students that the University can be proud of into the working world, these matters must be improved. I realize that it is hard to keep up with all of the current technology that abounds on the market, but providing things that are similar to the ones being used in media today would be most helpful. This would make it possible for students to have the skills that they need to actively compete on the job market in that field.

Another thing that would help raise the standard of education is more computer access. Students who don't own a personal computer are greatly restrained by the need for longer computer lab hours. With a growing usage of the lab comes a need for longer hours or more computers.

The curriculum is greatly improving. However, it is not as challenging as it could be. I went through three years of college without doing a serious research paper. I was ill-prepared when I had to do three in the same semester.

Another problem is one that you have faced for the last several years and tried to deal with. It is the problem of parking. High Point University just does not have adequate parking facilities. When these new buildings are finished, make sure to include space for students, both on-campus and commuters, to park.

One minor problem is the infirmary. Residential students need to have greater access to Dr. Fortney. He needs to be here for a greater amount of time or maybe just add a time slot later in the afternoon.

The last and most important improvement that needs to be made is behind the doors of the library. It has grown greatly in its pool of resources even since I have been here, but it can still use work. I commend David Bryden for the job he does with his current resources. However, remember that study is the main focus of a college or university, not the flowers or the beauty of the campus buildings and facilities.

Basically, I see that the quality of education is constantly improving here at High Point. However, you must focus more on this educational growth than superficial growth in order to reach the goal of quality that you have sought.

Sincerely,
Stephen B. Steffek

Commuter organization plans for upcoming year

CSA sponsors T-shirt contest

TheCommuter Student Association (CSA) has spent the last four months organizing and preparing for the '95-'96 school year.

The association has been discussing ways to improve student life for commuters and make their time spent at the University more productive and enjoyable.

The purpose of C.S.A is to inform and support all commuter students through programming and services in order to enhance the students' academic and personal development.

C.S.A. is sponsoring its first "Design a T-shirt contest." This contest is limited to High Point University students only and the winner will be given an award which is well worth his or her efforts. The T-shirt must refer to High Point University and strictly C.S.A.

The subject must be directed toward commuters and a type of automobile is required in the drawing. Please submit all entries to the Office of Student Life by April 26.

C.S.A. meets at 11 a.m. every other Thursday in the Rosario Room of the Campus Center.

All aboard to HPU...

Earth Day celebrates 25 years of existence Saturday

By Lori McBrayer
Staff writer

Each year, 17 million acres of rainforest are destroyed, each American throws away 1300 pounds of garbage, and another portion of the ozone layer is destroyed by fossil fuels, such as gasoline.

On April 22, 1970, Senator Gaylord Nelson of Wisconsin organized a nationwide teach-in to educate the public on the dangers of destroying our environment.

Over 20 million Americans participated on high school and college campuses and in the streets. Both the House and Senate closed for the day because most members were participating.

When Earth Day celebrated its 20 year anniversary in 1990, 200 million people participated.

Many conservationists have been saying for decades that industry is the source of most environmental problems.

Factories which dump waste into rivers and streams kill the local animals and disrupt the ecosystem. Chemicals cause acid rain, and smokestacks release pollution into the air.

The founders of Earth Day realized that laws needed to be passed to protect the environment. The Clean Air Act of 1970 was designed to reduce air pollution.

Although emissions requirements and gasoline quality have improved, much industry has not. Because companies are rarely prosecuted, many have not met requirements.

Sixty percent of Americans live in areas which do not meet requirements of the Clean Air Act.

Recently, the Clean Water Act and the Safe Drinking Water Act came up for renewal. No compromise could be reached between the House and Senate, so the bill remained in place.

North Carolina Congressman Howard Coble stated, "The additional delay in revamping the 1974 law means that governors and mayors, who have been clamoring for an overhaul for years, must abide by the current statute's rigid requirements for monitoring and testing contaminants found in drinking water supplies."

In the past 25 years, there have been some improvements. However, oil spills, such as the Exxon Valdez spill of 1989— which killed over 36,000 birds, thousands of sea animals and ruined over a thousand miles of beaches—still threaten our environment.

STEP (Students Taking on Environmental Problems) is working with administrators to begin a recycling program at this university.

"We want this to be campuswide," said Dean Gart Evans.

The city of High Point has no curbside recycling program, but recyclable materials are separated at a factory on Riverdale Road.

"Two thirds of our waste is commercial or from industries," said Linda Ritter of High Point's Keep America Beautiful.

"A recycling program which targets one third of our waste just doesn't make economical sense."

No Earth Day events are scheduled on campus, but the Piedmont Environmental Center on Penny Road will have games and hikes, on April 22. The cost is $3 per person, and the events will last from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m.

Painting of the Rock a deep-rooted tradition at High Point

By Brenda Egedy
Special to the Chronicle

Seventeen female voices fill the evening air with sorority chants and laughter. The voices may have a cheery ring, but these pledges know that somewhere in the darkness waits a fraternity ambush. From nowhere a group of guys race after the girls with water balloons, eggs and shaving cream in order to cause a ruckus.

The painting of the rock has been a campus tradition for as long as people can remember. The rock was brought to campus decades ago by members of Alpha Phi Omega and has since been painted over and over hundreds of times.

The rock can be seen by all who travel West College Drive and walk the greenway. Paint splatters and balloon skins cover the sidewalks and the lower parking lot of the Millis Center.

The letters on the rock change often, sometimes daily. They are the letters of the various Greek organizations on campus. The rock is the site of a competition to see which group's name can be seen by everyone the longest.

"Painting the rock is a fun and healthy exercise that we use to exhibit our spirit," said Kappa Delta sister Candy Cain. "We all look forward to the nights that we go down there to paint it. Besides, it is fun to see what new attack the boys are going to try."

Often the rock gets painted while still wet. In fact, layers of paint can be peeled off and a history of events can be unfolded.

The Rock, most recently pained by new Christian fraternity Kappa Chi.

Recently, a group of Kappa Delta alumnae were down at the rock reliving some of their college memories.

"I can't believe the rock is still around," said alumna Kelly Moore. "It's good to know that some things never change."

Painting the rock can start out as fun and games, but sometimes things get out of hand. The "wars" that occur in the early hours of the morning have resulted in injuries, even sending people to the hospital. The university has tried to curb the ambushes by banning eggs because thrown eggs have hurt people and they make a mess.

"When I was a pledge, we went to paint the rock, and I got smacked in the eye with an egg," said one guy, who requested anonymity. "It was really painful, and I had to go to the doctor the next day."

The rock will remain a part of campus life for many years to come. Some say that the rock is growing from all the layers of paint covering it. It is estimated that in one year the rock gets painted about 38 times. If that is the case, the rock will be twice as large in 20 years.

High Point students keep busy in bands

By Jeanne Holley
Staff Writer

For those of you who thought there weren't any bands on campus, listen up. High Point is fortunate enough to be blessed with all sorts of talent.

A couple of months ago, Seth Carter, Kevin Fielder, Wellington deSouza and Brent Ward decided to combine their musical abilities and form a band that occasionally goes by the name of Hat.

Seth and Brent are high school buddies who often jammed together. After coming to High Point and joining FCA, they realized that Kevin and Wellington also enjoyed playing music.

This inclined them to begin their musical career together. Matt McNeil joined them as a sound technician. The band plays everything from blues to classic rock and even a little funk now and then.

Their rhythm and ability to play such entertaining music are amazing. They consider themselves to be different from other bands.

They thrive on Christian values and always try to keep a positive attitude on things.

"Four ordinary guys... they're fantastic. It's great to see friends who play this good," says David Resch.

Four other students, Paul Driscoll, Joe Wallace, Eric Warnstedt and Roger Young have also combined their talents and formed a band. They have been playing together for over a year.

Although they do not really have a permanent name they go by, the band certainly knows how to perform some vibrant sounds. With everything from the blues to good old rock and roll, these four really know what good music is all about. As a matter of fact, they already have a song recorded. They are climbing the road to success.

Members of both of these bands plan to stick together throughout the rest of their college careers. They all have proven that with musical ability and a lot of hard work, playing good music is possible. Even though some of the guys have never had lessons, you would never be able to tell. Each and every one of them is musically inclined.

Both of the bands are open to play at functions on or off campus. So remember to look them up the next time you are craving some live entertainment.

How to handle stress

By Tanya Lyons
Staff writer

Stress occurs in every facet of life, and academic stress can be one of the most frustrating kinds.

David Bergen, a counselor here, has been able to help students deal with several types of stress. According to Bergen, there are two kinds of stress. Long-term stress can be caused by job expectations, home life, school and social life. Long-term stress can cause medical and emotional disorders. Short-term stress can be caused by things such as tests or giving speeches, the effects of which are more immediate.

"Academic stress can be particularly hard to deal with," says Bergen. "Any student has four to five classes, where each professor has different expectations, and it can be like having four to five different jobs. A student must find a balance, in which it may be a good idea to have time-planners or calendars."

But anyone can deal with stress. It's a matter of choosing the right course of action. "Handling stress is an ongoing process," Bergen says. "I believe we have to take care of ourselves all the time. When we stop is when we run into problems."

Some strategies to handle stress include eating sensibly and exercising, learning to say no, having a hobby and setting some goals. Some other methods include meditating, imagery and progressive relaxation.

One of the most basic ways to handle stress is simply to relax. Plan some time each day to relax or to do something interesting. "The way to handle stress is to do things that suit your needs," Bergen says.

Bergen does conduct workshops on stress management, but there are no regular programs. All his workshops are performed by invitation from organizations and for hall programs. Individual students can contact Bergen to find ways to help manage stress. Students can set up an appointment with Bergen by calling x9270 and leaving a message.

LOOKING FOR THE LIMELIGHT

Fried Chicken sets its sights high

By Dan Smith
Staff Writer

The story has been told time and time again. The small group from Nowheresville, USA trying to find the musical big time. The promise of fame and fortune is just around the corner. The sights and sounds of the stage are calling to the heart and soul of each band member. If the band can get the right show at the right time, there is no telling where it may lead.

Where do these bands come from? How do they get started in the raucous world of rock and roll? Brian Verrone, Zach Johnston and Andy Morgan are now deeply entrenched in the battle to find the spotlight. The three have formed a band and are vying for their position in the less-than-polite world of alternative rock.

The guys have been playing together for six months. In the world of a developing band, six months can be an eternity or a split second. Fried Chicken, as the boys are known, has embarked on a long journey towards fame or heartbreak.

"When we first started playing together, it was only an afternoon or two of fun," says Verrone, one of the group's singers and guitarists. "But it just seemed to grab us. All we wanted to do after that first afternoon was play more and more."

By the time most bands appear in some type of publication, they have a press package along with several demos. Fried Chicken is finding out how tough it can be to find the time and financial plan to put these necessities together. The guys have yet to play their first "real" show.

"We played a couple of parties," says Morgan, who shares vocal duties with Verrone. "We're still trying to put our foot in the door at some club. We would really like to play somewhere like Ziggy's or Kilroy's. It's just so hard to set up your first opportunity."

The guys are now facing one of the biggest challenges in the process of making it to the big time. The transformation from a garage or basement band into an actively performing group has caused many a sleepless night for the guys.

"It's hard to get your name around," says Johnston, the band's guitarist. "We have to find something that makes us different. When a club manager gets a tape, there has to be something setting it apart from all of the others. It's too easy to get lost in the shuffle."

"Well," adds Verrone, "if I worked in a club I probably wouldn't want to listen to twenty or thirty new tapes a day either. The competition is unbelievable."

Verrone has hit the nail on the head. Fried Chicken, as well as any no-name band, must find some way to gather a following. The group is struggling to find out how to separate themselves from the throngs of Triad bands.

"I think we have a little different style of music than most bands these days," adds Morgan. "But how do we make the general population aware of that?"

What is the defining mark between a group that finds the spotlight and one that doesn't?

The group has been struggling with this question since they decided to give music a real try. The quest to capture that something special that makes crowds whip themselves into a frenzy is as competitive as the climb to corporate stardom. It is possible that the special ingredient in any band is something intangible and unobtainable to those born without it.

"We know that the odds of making it big locally are small.

The odds of making it big nationally or internationally are even smaller. But some bands have to make it, and it might as well be Fried Chicken," says Johnston.

Fried Chicken plays a blend of alternative rock, rap and disco. The band is striving to go in many different directions with their music. With tunes such as "I Don't Owe You Anything and "Swirl," the group is taking off in different directions. "I Don't..." has a driving underbeat with hardcore rap spewing over the top. "Swirl" is a dreamy tune with delicate guitar melodies over nearly indistinguishable vocal harmonies and random percussion beats.

It will be a long road for Fried Chicken. Once they play their first show in an established club, a new world will open to them. In this world, they will find pleasure and pain. All bands do. The guys are on their way to finding out a lot about their music and their friends, but most importantly themselves. The road to stardom is long, hard and extremely bumpy.

"I'm not so concerned with getting rich or famous," says Verrone. "I just love the idea of being able to play music for the rest of my life."

"I agree," adds Morgan. "It's true that there is a lot of money out there for bands. But at our level, there are many more bands than dollars. It's obvious we do it for the love of music, not money."

Fried Chicken have as much chance to make it as anyone else. Who knows, with their new blend of musical styles, a record company executive could be calling them any day. While the probability of that happening is slim, the guys are not discouraged.

"Well, that may never happen," says Johnston, "but it may, and we'll be ready when it does."

Just another story in the trials and tribulations of the musical world. But bands such as Fried Chicken must keep heart. Just as every successful lawyer starts at the bottom and works his way up, so too must every modern day musician.

Interview turns out uneventful

The advent of spring brought about High Point University's annual book review, sponsored by the Odyssey Club.

This year's book review selection was Anne Rice's popular novel Interview With the Vampire. Members of the panel included Dr. Martha Gleaton focusing on the literary perspective, Jason Schneider focusing on the historical perspective, Dean Koonts focusing on the positive perspective and Julie Angle focusing on the nonpartisan perspective.

Gleaton demonstrated her understanding of the novel by explaining the various aspects of it as if the review were an English class.

Schneider didn't seem to have much to say on the historical aspects of the novel. Koonts gave a wonderful reaction to many of the positive aspects of the novel, including the philosophical and religious, that many readers may not have thought about. Angle, like Schneider, didn't seem to have much to say about the novel, though she gave more positive input than negative.

Unfortunately, the panel had no negative perspective, which is one reason why the review may have lacked excitement. Another reason for the lack of negative perspective is that Rice has masterfully created her novel, leaving little to no room for negative criticism.

I found the review an interesting discussion of some of the philosophical aspects of the novel. The panel also discussed a few reasons for the novel's success, one of which was its ability to make the fantastic believable and realistic. Hopefully next spring will bring a complete panel and another exciting novel.

Alpha Chi inducts new members

On March 26, members of the student body were inducted into Alpha Chi, a national honor society.

Dr. Vance Davis, vice president for academic affairs, addressed the inductees at the ceremony, which was held in the Millis Center.

Dr. James Stitt sponsored the induction along with Dr. Charles Warde and Dr. Susan Linker who assisted.

Alpha Chi is a national honor society that is open to students of all majors. The society was founded in 1924 in Texas. Today, there are over 600 chapters across the nation.

In order to qualify for induction to Alpha Chi, students must attend High Point for at least a year, be of junior or senior status and must be in the top 10 percent of the class. This year over 90 students qualified with approximately 65 accepting.

Ruth Ann Milam, a junior who was recently inducted was "honored to be chosen to be a part of Alpha Chi."

Alpha Chi is composed of bright, well-rounded students who make High Point what it is today. Congratulations to all of the new members.

Is Malcolm X still relevant after all these years?

By Gil Cooper
Staff Writer

"Crazy," "militant," "racist" and "hater of white people" were names given to Malcolm X while I was growing up in the Catholic school system. For a while, I thought they were true until I reached high school and read the Autobiography of Malcolm Xa as told to Alex Haley.

This book shattered any stereotype that may have existed in my mind. Then the movie Malcolm X by Spike Lee brought even more light to the accomplishments of this great man who turned his life around and came to lead his people toward a better future.

He went from crime, drugs and fornication to the disciplined Muslim way of life. But I am left to wonder how many of the people of my generation were not as fortunate as 1 to learn the truth about Malcolm X.

It really alarmed me to hear a person in one of my classes say, "I know nothing about Malcolm X at all." Is it true that this great man who meant so much to so many has fallen from the sight of the young people of America? If so, why?

Dr. Kathy Carter, associate professor of history, says: "Before the movie, yes, (his impact had diminished), but after the movie there has been an increased awareness of his life. Many people have forgotten that prior to his being killed, he was for race awareness. People seem to associate him with violence, but with the movie came a new awareness about his life."

Senior Eric Armstrong agrees with Carter. "I believe that if it was not for the recent movie, the ideas of Malcolm X would be obsolete amongst the general population," he says.

Sophomore Vearl A. Williams says: "Malcolm X was a major part of America's civil rights movement. Today the fight for continuing the civil rights movement is slowing down, causing young people to forget the recent past."

This outlook is echoed by senior George Awkard. "The things that Malcolm X stood for are being lost and misunderstood. After Malcolm X came back from Mecca, he found out that all people were the same and we needed to treat each other as equal. His views and himself are being used as something to rally around instead of putting his views into action," he says.

Sophomore Adil Diggs, a member of the Five Percent nation of Islam, also sees Malcolm X as a misunderstood figure. "I most defintely feel that society has lost sight of Malcolm X because society itself does not even understand him. Most only know what is advertised about him.

"Malcolm stood firm on what he believed in, but he respected all others, even his foes. People tend to lose respect for anything other than their own. This mentality stops society from learning and expanding. It also creates ignorance. Malcolm X is far from ignorant."

So it seems that young people have lost sight of Malcolm X, whose life is a story of struggle and pain for all to learn from. He was a husband, father, leader of millions and a hero who paid the ultimate price for what he believed.

Vinyl? What's the point?

By Peter Romanov
Staff Writer

I wish it were a sick dream, but unfortunately it's not. Records are creeping back onto music store shelves. I must say it bothers me greatly to see their return. Why, oh, why would someone choose a record over a compact disc?

Pearl Jam is partially to blame for all this because of their idea to release their music on albums.

What can they be thinking? I saw a show a couple of weeks ago that had characters discussing how cool a fellow student's record collection was. One particular character was in awe over the whole concept of a record. He referred to them as "vinyl." I think that's the hip term used today. I call it crap!

Have you played your old records lately? I haven't, but for the purpose of this article let me pull out my Grease and Saturday Night Fever albums. Let's see here. Oh wait, what's this? I think I see my thumb print from fifth grade on here.

I put the needle to the record and gosh that nice frying bacon sound mixed with "Stayin' Alive" is so very refreshing. Yeah, right! Point made.

Records have no place in today's world. Ever tried to play a record in your car? What else is inconvenient?

How about the massive accumulation of dust on the needle? What about that lovely scratching sound when you try to maneuver the needle onto that microscopic groove between songs?

Records can be useful. I recall in my middle school days using my Queen album as a Frisbee, searching for backward messages on Judas Priest albums and making a lovely hat out of my AC/DC album jacket (you want fries with that?). Sure CDs can be thrown far, but who would want to do that with something that sounds so good?

It's been said that bands can get a 7 inch vinyl made for a set-up fee of $200 to $250 and $30 for every 100 records. It's very cheap for bands to go this route. I can only imagine that a full album wouldn't be much more than this.

However, you get what you pay for. Cheap production equals cheap sound. I can understand local bands doing this, but big bands have no excuse. I say it's a big waste of money.

So, what exactly is my point? Don't let the latest "fad" fool you. Stick to the compact discs and shut you eyes real tight. Maybe this will soon pass.

I guess we can really call the record store a "record" store now. Well, I think I'll set here, crank my CD and wait for the return of 8-track.

Tower Players' 12 Angry People opens tonight

By Seth Carter
Staff writer

I just returned from a rehearsal of the Tower Players' newest production, Twelve Angry People. I have to admit that I was impressed by the quality of the performance.

The Empty Space Theatre's intimate style was definitely right for this play. It helped to capture the raw emotion of the performance.

The play is a one act performance that lasts about an hour and fifteen minutes. The plot centers around a jury that has decided the verdict in a murder trial. The play opens with the end of the testimony and the movement into deliberations.

Once the jury enters the room, it is an all-out barrage of arguments and emotion. All of the jury except for Juror 8 immediately decide on a guilty verdict. They decide to hear what he has to say, and, slowly but surely, the jurors decide to change their opinions.

One particularly tense moment comes when the jury's vote becomes six votes for guilty and six votes for not guilty. They decide to vote on whether or not it is a hung jury. The vote is a tie until Heather Doerr's character, Juror 4, decides to hear more delberation. The arguments become more heated until the end.

The play brings up questions about the morality of our justice system and the actual chance that the accused has at attaining a fair trial. By the end of the story, the jurors seem to realize the full scope of a trial. They learn not to always trust their instincts. The play teaches a lesson about the quality of life and the way it is handled by our justice system.

The themes in the play are handled with passion by the players. They kept the tension level at a peak for the majority of the gritty performance.

Overall, the quality of the acting was at a high level. It is obvious that their preparation time was well spent.

The players themselves seemed to really get into the roles and make them their own. I was especially impressed by the performance of Brian Ersalesi as Juror 8. He portrayed the character with a great balance of emotion and reserve.

Charlie White also turned in a fine perfomance. He brought out the agitated nature of his character, Juror 10, with a flair.

Juror 6, played by Rivka Kaplan, conveyed a touching angle on the American legal system.

These are just a few of the fine performances in the piece. All of the players did excellent jobs.

The visual aspect of the play was equally impressve. The sets and props were very detailed and added quite a bit to the overall performance. The lighting created the mood-rich atmosphere that was crucial to the play. Even the lack of air conditioning in the Empty Space Theater helped because the audience could physically feel the heat in which the jurors frequently spoke.

Twelve Angry People is a fine student production. Be sure to support our fellow students and be entertained at the same time.

Tennis teams prep for conference tournament

Barton hosts men's and women's CC Tournament this weekend

By Keith Corbett
Staff writer

A two-day adventure in Barton for the Carolinas Conference Championship will decide the fate of the tennis programs' spring campaign this weekend.

In an attempt to make its first showing in the NAIA national championships in May, the men's team brings a 12-4 28th national ranking into the conference tournament. The 6-9 Lady panthers are praying for a good showing.

MENS

The injury-prone men's tennis team began the season with high expectations, but now it sees a more realistic picture.

"We've been hurt all year long, and the loss of our No. 1 and 5-7 players have hurt us," No. 4 man Andrew Awai said. "We can't get hurt at the tournament like we did last year. We are going to have to stay injury free and motivated."

> "We are going to have to stay injury free and motivated."
> - Andrew Awai

Coach Jerry Tertzagian sees no motivation problems on the horizon. "Those were tough matches," said Tertzagian in defense of losses to Wingate and Belmont Abbey. "The matches could have gone either way."

The Panthers head into the conference tournament with the burden of a possible conference championship resting on several key players.

Look for Pekka Pohjama (5-1) and Andrew Awai (5-1) to have a strong showing at the championships.

WOMEN'S

With a 3-3 regular season conference record, the Lady Panthers look for seeding to help their cause.

"If we can get a good draw and get out of the first round we've got a shot," Tertzagian said. "That first win is worth four points."

Julie Fair (5-1), last years conference champion at No. 5, will receive another high seed.

"There is a lot of competition this year because every team has improved. We'll do the best we can, but I personally would like to win my singles again," said Fair.

Both teams finished the regular season Wednesday vs. Coker.

Cindermen gear for final meet

By Sonny Gann
Staff writer

The track team is gearing for the year's final meet, the Carolinas Intercollegiate Championships at Pembroke State on Saturday.

The Panthers won the innagural meet two years ago and came in second last year. Coach Bob Davidson sees the team as an underdog this year, but playing the role of spoiler crosses Davidson's mind often.

"We are not favored to win this year, but we plan to have something to do with who wins it," Davidson said. "If everything works out perfectly, we could sneak in there.

"The problem is we are not as deep as we have been in the past. It's not enough bodies to win a championship. We do have six events where we have a chance to finish first or second. That goes a long way in a big meet."

Adil Diggs has been the best performer all year. Diggs is favored to win the 400 meter hurdles and has a good chance to win the 110 meter hurdles.

Mike Dyess is one of the favorites in the 10,000 meter run. Dyess should also be competitive in the 5,000 meter run.

Daniel Doub (1500m run), Sean Carter (steeplechase), Tony Pompa (400m run), Shea Goins(discus and hammer) and Wesley Wright (100m and 200m run) should do well in their events. Davidson feels the mile relay team of Wright, Diggs, Doub and Pompa could do some damage if they're not to tired from their other events.

"The championship meet is a measure of our season," Davidson said. Saturday will tell just how good it was.

Martin earns spot in USBL scout league

By Rob Humphreys
Assistant Editor

Senior forward Robert Martin will play for the Atlanta Trojans of the United States Basketball League this summer.

TheUSBL, which has an eight-week 26-game schedule, is designed for players to showcase their talent to professional scouts.

Martin, an Atlanta native, averaged 22.4 points and 7.9 rebounds per game this season. He hopes the league will help him receive an invitation to the NBA pre-draft camp held June 6-9 in Chicago.

"I want to start and contribute a lot," said Martin, who played two seasons at High Point. "I've just got to work hard and do the best I can."

The Boston Celtics and Detroit Pistons showed interest in Martin this year, and he expects representatives from those teams to contact him before the NBA draft in June.

The Trojans will travel across the country to cities such as Memphis, Miami and New York. But Martin will be in a familiar setting during home games -- the Trojans homecourt is Martin's high school gym.

High Point to host CC baseball tourney

High Point will host the Carolinas Conference baseball tournament April 20-23 after five years of being held at Barton. The new-style tournament will be a double-elimination format with the majority of games played on campus.

The Panthers, 4-3 in their last seven games, enter the tournament with a 7-11 conference record, 14-20 overall.

Outfielder Doug Irby is leading the team in three offensive categories. His .325 average, three homeruns and .385 on-base percentage are tops among Panther hitters.

Starting pitcher Joe Hobbs is 4-2 with a 3.58 ERA in 65.1 innings. His 43 strikeouts lead the staff. Hobbs has won his last three decisions, throwing complete games in all three.

It's been rough but steady for the golf team as it prepares for the Carolinas Conference Tournament this weekend.

High Point is ranked fifth in the nation and seeks its second straight trip to the national tournament with a CC Tournament win.

The team participated in two tournaments in the last two weeks. The Panthers came in second at the High Point University Collegiate with an overall score of 588. Grant Thomson shot a 144 and Charles Davis logged a 147 over two rounds.

At the Pines Needles Invitational in Meisenheimer, High Point placed ninth out of 19 schools. Thomson placed in the top 20 with a score of 147.

SGA review

found itself deeply involved in an incident involving the Radisson Hotel. The legislature voted unanimously to postpone the Spring Semiformal Dance because Radisson, a long-time business partner, breeched the standing contract with the Activities Office.

SGA had to intervene between the cafeteria and the student body when several young ladies alleged that an ARA employee had made rude comments to them.

These are simply a few of the accomplishments that SGA made over the semester.

Historically, the SGA gives a gift to the university at the conclusion of the year. This year, however, the legislature has decided to give two gifts.

The first is a sidewalk which will run from the library to McEwen and North residence halls. The walkway will replace the mud structure that presently exists. It will enable the security officers to make one continious sweep on their golf carts in their attempt to keep the campus a safe haven.

This newly-constructed path will be delightfully accented by a lovely light post similar to those offering lighting for the chapel. This project will commence during the early months of summer.

The second gift is a stereo system for the dining hall, adding to the already appetizing ambience. Earlier this year, the old stereo system broke.

The food committee of SGA, along with ARA, encourages students to bring CDs and tapes during meal time for everyone's listening enjoyment.

SGA concluded the school year with its banquet in the private dining room March 25. The Executive Council presented certificates of honor to those who assisted SGA with loyalty and distinguished service.

The EC wishes everyone good luck on finals and hopes all students enjoy a wonderful and safe summer.
